Embargo Repeal and Revival Of 6-Point Peace Program Slated for Congress Today

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt and 15 Democratic and Republican Party leaders agreed at a White House conference yesterday to consider neutrality act modification "in a wholly nonpartisan spirit" at the special session of Congress convening today.

"The conference with unanimous thought discussed the primary objective of keeping the United States neutral and at peace," said a statement issued for the group following two and a half hours of friendly discussion.

Although no accord was reached on any fixed legislative formula, the joint statement said "it was made clear that the most important subject is the repeal of the (arms) embargo and a return to the processes of international law."

The President is expected to ask Congress today to repeal the arms embargo and make other neutrality act changes in line with the six-point neutrality program laid before the last Congress.

Several of the conferees said the President indicated a desire to go further and wipe the slate clean of all neutrality legislation.

Members of the group said he expressed a distinct preference for return to the principles of international law. At least three of those present reportedly advised him that votes were lacking in Congress to strike all neutrality legislation from the books.

Pittman Calls Committee for Saturday

Chairman Key Pittman immediately called a meeting of his Senate Foreign Relations Committee for 10 a. m. Saturday. Pittman said he believed he could get committee action within 3 days, and may offer his own bill, containing the President's 6 neutrality points, as a "guide."

While the Senate committee shapes a bill, and the Senate subsequently debates the issue, the House, which already has passed a modified version of the Administration's plan, is expected to take three-day recesses.

Strict limitation of the session to the neutrality issues and expeditious action, within two or three weeks, if possible, is understood to have been urged by the President, who will again lay his neutrality program before Congress in a personally delivered message at 2 p. m. today.

As an alternative to suggestions that Congress remain continuously in session for the duration of the present war, a reliable source said the President proposed that Congress conclude neutrality act revision and adjourn, leaving Congressional leaders of both parties here for "consultation."

There was no reference to speedy action in the joint statement except indirectly in the concluding sentence, which said:

"It was the consensus of opinion that the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations take up the legislation as soon after Congress convenes as possible."

Conferees Agree to Start With Bloom Bill

The White House conferees informally agreed the committee should proceed with the House-approved Bloom neutrality bill as a working base, strike out all but the enacting clause and substitute the legislative formula agreed to by the committee.

Three of those present, including Senator Pittman, were reported to have voiced the belief that insufficient votes were available to repeal the neutrality act in its entirety.

While conferees were reluctant to talk, one of them said he gathered that repeal of the arms embargo section only, and enactment of cash-and-carry conditions on all commodities, was the President's "second choice."

All apparently left the conference without any detailed knowledge of the neutrality act modifications Mr. Roosevelt is expected to outline in his message today.

The joint statement of the conferees was released by Stephen T. Early, a White House secretary, after it had been carefully drafted in the presence of the group by the President himself.

Only one slight change was said to have been suggested by the group in the President's draft. In his original script, he referred to the "historic" processes of international law. The adjective was removed when one conferee objected.

Discuss Methods of Dealing With Six Points

The statement said the group discussed finally "the methods of dealing with the 6 points relating to Americans traveling on belligerent ships, cash and carry, etc.," which the President and Secretary of State Hull urged on the last Congress, and on which action was postponed.

Whether these will be resubmitted to Congress today in whole or in part, conferees said they did not know definitely.

The President's apparent preference for complete repeal of existing neutrality legislation, and return to international law principles, one of those present said, was indicated throughout his statement to the group, opening with an outline of how international law has served this country's interests in past wars.

It was here that one of the conferees expressed the opinion that Congress would not vote to repeal neutrality legislation. Two Administration Senators echoed this sentiment, and Pittman was reported

Talk Changes Lindbergh Status

Repercussions from the recent antiwar speech broadcast by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh have included his removal from the Army status in which he had served for the past five months, it was learned last night.

Within an hour after the flying colonel announced his decision to make the address, it was learned, he was taken off the technically "inactive" duty rolls by the War Department and returned to his status as a reserve officer unassigned to duty.

Last April the colonel was called into service to make a survey of aviation research facilities in this country, following his inspection of the flying forces of several European powers. For only two weeks he was on active duty, after which, due to restrictions in the new law covering active duty of reserve officers, he

Navy Escorted Nazi Liner to England, Says Censored Press

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Sept. 21. The British Press Association said that according to reports prevalent today, and not denied, Germany's crack liner Bremen had reached a British port under the escort of naval vessels.

The press association said: "For some days various stories have circulated that the Bremen had been captured and was on her way to England. Though no official confirmation was forthcoming in London this morning the story of the liner's capture was not denied."

(This dispatch was passed by the British censorship.)

Envoy Intimates Capture

German reports that the liner had reached a neutral port were never confirmed.

The Bremen sailed from New York August 30, two days before Germany invaded Poland, and has not been definitely reported since.

Last Saturday the German Ambassador to Russia, Count Friedrich von der Schulenberg, intimated the $20,000,000 pride of the German merchant marine had been captured by Britain.

Blames Americans

He said questions concerning the ship should be referred to Winston Churchill, first lord of the British admiralty.

"American authorities," he said, "were so kind as to hold up the Bremen for 22 hours and so far as I know the British have rather fast destroyers."

The Bremen sailed from New York without passengers after being held up for lifeboat and other inspections.

Reported At Murmansk

On September 12 the British ministry of information authorized publication of a several days old Rotterdam report that the Bremen had acquired status as an Italian ship and was heading for an Italian port. This was denied in Rome.

There were reports the vessel had gone to Iceland, but the Iceland Telegraph Agency denied these.

Next, on September 14, informants close to the German navy said the Bremen had arrived at Murmansk, Russia, after crossing the Atlantic by the most northern route.

On September 16 German Air Minister Goering in a speech to munitions workers made a vague reference to the Bremen by stating a British attempt to capture her had "misfired." He said no more.

There were various other reports that the Bremen was heading for a neutral port in Mexico or South America, or had been sunk. None was verified.

Shots Excite Jutland

Copenhagen, Sept. 20 (AP).—The possibility that a second Battle of Jutland was taking place off Denmark today excited the whole eastern coast of the Jutland Peninsula.

Sounds which hearers said were unmistakably those of gunfire were heard from Skagen, at the northern tip of the peninsula which is Denmark's only continental province, to points northeast of Aalborg, 50 miles to the south.

Late tonight, however, the Ritzau (Danish) news agency reported that a Swedish artillery regiment held target practice on an island off the Swedish coast during the day with a ship towed out to sea as the target.

Claim Dozen Subs Destroyed

London, Sept. 20 (AP).—Britain and France today published claims, which, if true, would mean that about a dozen German submarines had been destroyed by their two navies.

Neither claim was precise.

Prime Minister Chamberlain said in the House of Commons that "already six or seven submarines have paid the full penalty" as the result of the British navy's campaign.

A semiofficial French announcement declared "four or five" German U-boats had been sunk by French warships, in addition to one previously reported destroyed.

The information ministry asserted today that Britain's cam-

Battle Just Begun, Says Chamberlain

By J. C. Stark.
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 20.—Prime Minister Chamberlain assured the nation today that Britain's war effort would be "the utmost of which it is capable" and declared "our advance must be orderly but the pace of the advance will steadily quicken."

The government, he told the House of Commons in his third report, would "not rush into adventures that offer little prospect of success," but he said there was no operation that would be avoided which would "make an appropriate contribution to victory."

In a speech of more than half an hour dealing with the progress of the war on both the Eastern and Western Fronts and on the seas, the prime minister made these principal points:

Soviet Russia's military intervention in Poland was not a complete surprise to the British government, that this "cynical attack" was a tragedy to Poland, but that it was still too early to "pronounce any final verdict" on the motives or consequences of the Russian action.

Neither the Russian action nor Adolf Hitler's speech yesterday "changes the situation with which we are confronted."

While Hitler emphasized "humane methods by which he has waged war," methods "are not made humane by calling them so" and "accounts of German bombing of open towns and machine gunning of refugees have shocked the whole world."

Britain's general war purpose is "to redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and their liberties" and "no threats will deter us or our French allies from this purpose."

If Britain and France have been unable to "avert the defeat of the armies of Poland, they have assured her that they have not forgotten their obligations to her nor weakened in their determination to carry on the struggle."

A White Paper tomorrow "will make plain the true course of events" in contrast to what Chamberlain described as "many misstatements of fact" by Hitler.

Women Fight Nazi Troopers; Rising Extends Into Slovakia

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Sept. 20.—Widespread revolt has broken out in Bohemia and Moravia—Czech provinces which Hitler guaranteed last September and then seized last March.

The British government announced that hundreds of Czechs already had been executed and thousands more arrested, but that the revolt is continuing and spreading across Slovakia.

Brooding for days under the guns of 120,000 German Storm Troopers, the Czechs, according to the British statement, started rioting in the streets of the ancient Bohemian capital of Prague last Saturday night. Armed workers clashed with troops. Laborers' wives, using only thick boards spiked with long nails, joined the battle.

"Between September 17 and 19," the British ministry of information said, "riots took place at a number of places in Bohemia and Moravia. On September 19 the movement spread to western Slovakia. Slovak garrisons revolted and about 15,000 troops have been disarmed. The German authorities took ruthless measures. The list of arrested runs into thousands, those executed into hundreds."

Centers of Rioting

The statement adds, however, that "these repressive measures do not appear to have had the effect intended."

Considerable damage already has been done, the British statement said.

"Bridges on important railways and roads have been demolished, fire stations put out of action, railway rolling stock and material damaged, workshops of important factories bombed and machinery destroyed."

The centers of rioting were in Pardubice, Priban, Pilsen, Tabor, Pisek and Brunn in Bohemia and Moravia and at Brunn, according to the British, part of the German community fought alongside the Czechs against the Nazi troops.

While this revolt appears to have been organized, it was stated reliably here that it had not been ordered by the Czecho-Slovak executive body which is located in London under Edouard Benes, second and last President of Czecho-Slovak republic.

Hoped to Avoid Massacre

In fact, leaders of the Czech people have been trying to keep people from revolting now in order to save them from massacre, it is asserted.

Just before the Nazi legions marched to war against Poland, Germany sent around 60,000 troops into Czecho-Slovakia, doubling the number garrisoned there ever since last March.

Informed Czech sources here believe that the sudden entry of another great horde of troops may have aggravated the Czechs and led to the reported uprising.

While the fighting was at its height, Benes broadcast last night to the Czech people: "Your place is in the front line. All of us must today be ready to sacrifice our lives for our country and for our honor."

Apparently he did not know at the time of the broadcast that a revolt was taking place.

Last night also, the German radio admitted that the authorities were having trouble at the famous Skoda armaments factory in Bohemia, and that they were trying to "clean up Slovakia," British sources said.

Czech leaders here are confident that widespread arrests and executions—which are said to be taking place in the "vault of a bank on Prague's main street," will not break up the ingenious organization of the Czecho-Slovak people.

Czechs Organized Resistance

Prepared for Nazi seizure of their territory this spring, the Czechs carefully organized an underground opposition. Control of this internal organization was placed in the hands of obscure persons so that there is confidence in London that the arrest of a large number of prominent Czechs in the past few days will not break up the organization.

In fact since Nazi troops flooded into Slovakia in order to complete their encirclement of Poland, the

Seven Other Top Nazis Own $34,000,000 Cache; Goebbels Hoards $4,500,000 in Cash

By Felix Cotten.
Copyright, 1939, by The Washington Post.

Adolf Hitler is several times a millionaire as a result of sales of his book, "Mein Kampf," and other activities, and has a special account in a Swiss bank in which he keeps royalties from foreign sales, it was learned yesterday from unimpeachable Government sources.

Impartial observers regard it as highly significant that Hitler should keep a substantial sum of money outside Germany. It is looked upon as a "kitty" set aside for a possible "rainy day," which in Hitler's case probably would be a revolution resulting in the overthrow of Naziism.

H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service correspondent, in a dispatch from London yesterday, said Nazi leaders "beneath Adolf Hitler" had prepared for war or revolution at home by depositing large fortunes abroad and by taking out huge foreign insurance policies.

He commented that "Hitler alone among the highest Nazi chieftains has abroad no assets which could be discovered."

Two years' expert investigation among a score of banking institutions and in almost every country on earth, he said, has established that Goering, Goebbels, Von Ribbentrop, Hess, Ley, Himmler and Streicher had about $34,873,500 in bank deposits and insurance in neutral countries.

Bank of England Believed Source

Knickerbocker did not reveal the source of his information, except to say that it was "one of the oldest and most famous institutions of its kind in the world." Government sources here are confident that the information came from a report prepared by the Bank of England.

It is known that there is such a report, and that the information which it contains tallies in a general way with Knickerbocker's account. Incidentally, this information has been in the possession of Government authorities here for some weeks.

The Bank of England data, however, does not go far enough, Government investigators say, since it does not include the Nazi leader's Swiss bank account.

This account contains about $1,000,000 derived from sales of "Mein Kampf" in the United States, Canada and other English-speaking countries.

How much more is in this or other accounts secreted by Hitler abroad is not known. It is estimated that foreign sales of the book have netted him as much as $3,000,000 or $4,000,000.

But, aside from their bank deposits and insurance policies, Nazi leaders have large property holdings abroad—another item not mentioned by Knickerbocker.

Goering a Rancher in South America

Field Marshal Goering, Hitler's own choice for his successor, has three ranches in South America, according to Government investigators.

Dr. Goebbels has an estate in Switzerland valued at $3,000,000 or $4,000,000.

There are reports, moreover, of foreign property holdings by other Nazi leaders.

Knickerbocker pointed out that, according to Nazi law, it is a penitentiary or death-penalty offense for any German citizen to have undeclared cash or other assets outside Germany.

Besides English-edition sales of "Mein Kampf" in this country from which Hitler has derived revenue, there have been sales by the German-American Bund.

Every bund member is supposed to have a copy of Hitler's "best seller." Bund sales may run as high as 50,000 copies.

Government investigators do not assert that the Swiss bank account is in Hitler's name. So far as can be ascertained, it is in the name of a nominee who represents presumably the Nazi Party publishing company which publishes "Mein Kampf," the Voelkischer Beobachter, Hitler mouthpiece, and other party publications.

Hitler's Royalties Unusually High

Hitler, investigators say, reaps a "lion's share" of the total receipts on sales of the book published in Germany. The bund, it is reported, has distributed copies of this book. In consequence, returns from the bund sales would be over and above the revenue derived from English-edition sales.

The head of the party publishing concern, who is a close friend of Hitler, receives, it is said, a comparatively small part of the total. In other words, Hitler's royalty percentage is exceptionally high.

So far as sales of foreign editions are concerned, this is said to be by arrangement by the Nazi publishing concern with foreign publishers.

Sales of "Mein Kampf" in the United States from all sources in the last year will total, it is said, at least 350,000 copies.

The party publishing concern, of course, is under Hitler's thumb. It represents, in the opinion of some observers, the extent to which being a dictator is a profitable business from a monetary standpoint.

Rise to power of the Nazis in Germany, it is pointed out, has apparently meant wealth as well to the party leaders.

This is in a large measure accounted for, investigators explain, by the extent to which the Nazis dominate the lives of the people. Workmen in Germany, it is said, are assessed a part of their wages to buy "Mein Kampf." It is a variation of the "kick-back."

Every married couple is presented with a copy of the book as a gift. It is not clear who pays for these copies, but there is no evidence that Hitler is poorer as a result.

In order to be regarded as a good Nazi, it is well for Germans to advertise in party publications. Germans are admonished by slogans to subscribe to the Voelkischer Beobachter, since "in this way you are

By Harlan Miller

NEUTRAL AGAINST WHAT?

Never has an American Congress met to face a more perplexing, opaque and momentous problem than the one now storm-tossed in the heaving laps of the special session.

Harlan Miller

Not only among those members hag-ridden by political expediency or stirred by deep emotions, but even among the more detached, selfless, open-minded and impartial men of good will there is an ocean of room for differences of opinion.

* * * *

The more clear-headed members of Congress have long seen that true neutrality, a neutrality which in no way affects the outcome of the world struggle or disadvantages some of the combatant nations, is no longer possible.

It may have been possible in a vacuum, but not in the turgid explosive gases which now blow across the world.

* * * *

So this Congress must choose between several forms of "neutrality," or, to put it more realistically, between several forms of unneutrality, guided by two considerations:

First, which form will immediately and in the long run, be safest for Americans?

Second, against whom, or rather, against what, shall we be neutral?

"—neutrality against whom?"

It is scarcely overstating the issue to say that the adoption of one course by this Congress may be the equivalent of presenting Germany with 60 new submarines or sinking half the British fleet, while the adoption of another course may mean, eventually, decisive superiority in the air for the French and British armies.

* * * *

Nor does it lighten the burden of Congress that one form of neutrality—the one now in effect—may mean the abandonment of rights that belong to us as neutrals and that all neutral nations have always cherished.

This Congress is not only legislating for our country—to a certain extent it is legislating for the world and influencing international law for all time to come.

* * * *

These are the thoughts that run through the minds of the more intelligent men on the hill as the session begins.

Also, many of them are familiar now with the curious tale of how four men, munching sandwiches in the House restaurant, prevented repeal of the embargo, upheld by two votes at the last session with less than two-thirds of the House voting.

Some of them know now by what a strange twist of parliamentary jockeying the Senate committee last month held up new action on neutrality.

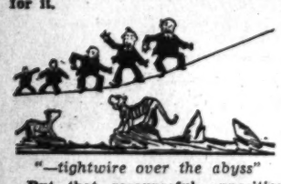
* * * *

This story has never been told fully or accurately.

Senator Key Pittman, weary and scarcely himself, called the committee to order with a "Well, what shall we do?" air.

Connally of Texas instantly moved that the House bill be reported to the whole Senate for debate.

At this point the vote would have gone 12 to 11 for reporting the bill; conscientious Gillette of Iowa, with his deep sense of responsibility, was ready to vote for it. There might have been one or two other votes for it.



"—tightwire over the abyss"

But that resourceful opposition parliamentarian, Clark of Missouri, moved a substitute for Connally's motion: To delay action until the next regular session.

By the rules of procedure, the first vote came on Clark's motion.

Gillette, like other members of the committee, had been pledged to vote for postponement IF the first vote came on that proposal.

So the Hull neutrality measure was temporarily shelved, by one clever move and one vote.

In the Senate enough votes waited to pass it. * * * *

Two other thoughts that haunt many of the members as the session begins are:

How much did the action—or inaction—of the American Congress at the last session influence Russia toward its pact with Germany, and thus Germany toward its decision to begin the war?

How many other countries—like Italy, Turkey, Spain, Japan, and maybe even Russia—are watching the next American move on neutrality, before they themselves decide what to do next?

* * * *

The White House neutrality strategists have been tipped off about the opposition strategy. It falls into two sections, as foreshadowed:

First, to accuse the President of "taking sides" with his neutrality proposals, cash and carry and the embargo repeal, and charge him with running the risk of plunging us into war. This by way of political preface for 1940.

Second, after enough tumult along the first line, to propose themselves a "safe" substitute, hardly differing to the naked eye from FDR-Hull measures . . . Because even the oppositionists, many of them, are under heavy pressure from business-minded foes of F. D. R. to vote for repeal of the embargo and cash and carry.

House May Upset Arms Embargo Cart

Wide Variety of Emergency Measures Due for Introduction

Despite Administration desires to confine the special session beginning today to neutrality, many Congressmen expect consideration of a wide variety of war emergency legislation should the session be much prolonged.

Republican Congressional leaders have promisede co-operation in the move to "blackout" all but the neutrality issue, and orders went out last night to Senate and House committee chairmen to resist all efforts to bring up other measures until the arms embargo fight is settled.

Veteran Congressmen, however, predict that if Senate debate continues for many weeks, the House membership will grow restive and demand consideration of other legislation bearing on the war. The following are expected to be debated once the bars are let down:

General expansion of the preparedness program, including further increases in the Army, Navy and National Guard, and speeding of industrial mobilization plans through enlargement of the "educational orders" fund and increase in the reserve of strategic war materials.

Provision for Government war risk insurance for American shipping and crews of merchant ships. Since the war began, seamen of several merchantmen have struck when denied extra compensation or insurance.

Legislation to take the profit out of war in case the United States should become involved, through placing a ceiling on prices and heavily taxing profits.

Constitutional amendments to bar America from going to war or from sending troops overseas except after a national referendum.

One stumbling block in the House leaders' plans may be the Gavagan anti-lynching bill. A majority of the membership have signed a petition to discharge the committee considering the measure and bring it to the floor for vote. Under House rules, this petition may be called up Monday. While Administration leaders do not expect Representative Gavagan to make such a move at this time, it was pointed out that any member whose name is on the petition can upset the Administration program by forcing immediate consideration of this controversial measure.

House leaders can block the move by meeting tomorrow and adjourning over until Tuesday, and tentative plans last night to adjourn after the joint session today until Monday may have to be hastily revised. Even if a vote is avoided on Monday, the measure will complicate Democratic leadership plans all session to avoid meeting on the two Mondays a month set aside for discharge petitions.

Regatta Queen 'Really Hasn't A Thing to Wear'

Miss Ruth Overton, queen of the President's Cup Regatta, considered yesterday how she would cope with the sartorial responsibilities of her royal duties tomorrow and Saturday.

"I really haven't a thing to wear," she stated, and described a blue wool dress with epaulettes for the Friday afternoon races, a complicated brocade satin creation in magnolia with a "sweetheart neckline" for the coronation ceremony, a green sports dress with a monk's hood for Saturday afternoon, and "probably white chiffon and gold slippers on Saturday night."

Informed that Undersecretary of Commerce Edward J. Noble had accepted the invitation to crown her, Queen Ruth exclaimed, "Oh, how wonderful! That's grand!"

She was a little worried about the size of the crown, however. "Whatever it looks like, I'm sure it will go with my dress, but will it fit?"

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, the queen's father, is expected to arrive in Washington today.

Colored M. E. Church Convenes

Adults' spiritual responsibility toward youth of the church keynoted yesterday's discussions at the first convocation of the Ninth Episcopal District of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. Sessions opened Tuesday.

Meeting at Miles Memorial Church, 1110 Third street northwest, leaders stressed the need of bringing youth back to religion through reconsecrated adults, who were urged to set better examples in Christian living if they would influence youth.

DuPont Erred, Not Wilfully, SEC Reports

Stock Statement Wrongly Interpreted, Industrialist Says

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission decided yesterday that Pierre S. duPont was innocent of wilfully submitting misleading reports and called off its investigation of the industrialist's stock transactions.

The commission said the investigation had shown that duPont "had filed erroneous and misleading reports" but that "the violation had not been wilful."

The securities and exchange act makes it a penal offense "wilfully and knowingly" to make misleading reports to the SEC.

Said He Owned 33,352

The commission announced on June 9 that it was inquiring into alleged "discrepancies" in duPont's reports of his stock transactions. DuPont, chairman of the board of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., of Wilmington, Del., stated the commission had not accurately interpreted his reports.

In the course of the investigation, the SEC said, it was developed that the initial report filed by duPont on January 11, 1935, stated he was the owner of 33,352 common shares of the chemical company.

"Subsequent reports filed by Mr. duPont stated that he had acquired additional shares, thereby increasing his holdings of such stock, the commission continued.

SEC View Different

"However, during this entire period, Mr. duPont was, in fact, in a short position in this stock; that is, he owed more shares of duPont common stock than he owned."

A "long" position means that the holder owns stock outright. A "short" or "minus" position means that an individual has sold stock which he does not own. In the latter instance the "short" seller borrows the stock in order to make delivery to the person who has bought it. Usually, the "short" seller buys back the stock in the open market and returns it to the person from whom he has borrowed it.

Maritime Commission To Continue Wages of Any Personnel Interned

By the United Press.

A 25 per cent increase in base pay for personnel aboard Government-owned vessels operating in the North Atlantic was ordered yesterday, effective immediately, by the Federal Maritime Commission.

In addition, an allowance of $150 will be provided for each employe to cover possible loss of clothing and personal affects in any emergency arising out of the European war.

The order also provides that in event of the internment of any of the commission's sea-going personnel, base pay plus an additional 25 per cent emergency compensation shall continue for the period of internment.

The commission emphasized that the action was a stop-gap covering only commission-owned ships, pending Congressional action on the matter of war risk insurance.

It was recalled that last May the commission asked Congress for measures authorizing it to enter into the war risk insurance business. Yesterday the group pointed out that ship operators are having difficulty obtaining adequate insurance without paying prohibitive rates.

The commission indicated that an upward adjustment in passenger and cargo rates to offset increased expenses due to the war is likely within a few days.

During the day the commission awarded contracts for construction of six C-2 cargo vessels to the Sun Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., Chester, Pa., and announced low bidders on 10 of 14 other ships.

Local Authorizes Warehouse Strike As Parleys Fail

A strike of Welfare and Recreation Association's warehouse employes was authorized last night by the executive committee of Local 27, United Office and Professional Workers of the C. I. O., after seven weeks of unsuccessful negotiations. The local has requested authorization of the strike from international union headquarters and support from the United Cafeteria Workers Union of the C. I. O., according to Organizer Grace Taylor.

The National Labor Relations Board certified Local 27 as bargaining agent for the association's seven warehouse employes last July.

Capt. Frank W. Hoover, general manager of the Welfare and Recreation Association, stated last night that all warehouse employes had received salary promotions last April 1.

Soviet Sought Navy Secrets, Dies Body Told

Used Former Officer To Quiz Admirals, Witness Testifies

By James D. Secrest.

The Dies committee yesterday sought to uncover evidence that Soviet agents attempted to obtain secret naval information from United States officials while negotiating for the construction of a super-battleship.

Following cross-examination of Joseph Z. Dalinda, New York munitions inventions promoter, in executive session, Chairman Dies hinted that new sensations are to be uncovered tomorrow when "the big witness" will be heard. He declined to identify the witness.

A memorandum in which Dalinda asserted that a retired naval officer was forced by officials of the Carp Export & Import Corporation, New York, to call American admirals was read into the record by J. B. Matthews, chief investigator.

Morris Wolf, vice president of the Carp Corporation, forced the retired naval officer, who was in his employ, "to telephone from their New York office to Admiral Leahy or other admirals and ask pertinent questions."

The former Navy officer was identified by Matthews as Commander J. R. Rhodes, whose name figured earlier in the inquiry. The Navy Department, however, reported that its records showed a Commander J. B. Rhodes, of New York, as retired and not a J. R. Rhodes. Rhea Whitley, committee counsel, said that his notes of an earlier questioning of Dalinda also carried the initials "J. B."

The former naval officer, who was referred to as "captain," would have been an admiral at the time had he not retired, the memorandum stated, and consequently was "a friend of all the present acting admirals."

Fictitious Names Used

"When this captain preferred not to do that," the memorandum continued," he was reminded by Wolf . . . he is in their pay and should do what he is told. The captain would later be asked to make a written report of what was said over the telephone, and this written report was compared with their records."

Dalinda, while confirming the report, urged the committee not to press him for further information on the point and implied that he or his relatives in Russia might suffer reprisals.

After some discussion the committee decided to question Dalinda further in executive session.

The Dalinda memorandum also stated that Sam Carp, the Russian-born trading agent for the Soviet government, had "advised Moscow what he agreed to pay to the minister," who was identified by the witness as Preston McGoodwin.

Carp was referred to as "Rodriquez" in the memorandum, and Dalinda admitted that fictitious names were used for most of the participants in the battleship deal.

Scott Ferris, the Democratic National Committeeman, who acted as Washington attorney and contact man for Carp, was called "Sir Walter," Dalinda said.

Ferris Letter Offered

One of the letters read by Matthews was purported to have been written by Ferris from Oklahoma City to Dalinda in New York on February 18, 1939.

After expressing the view that President Roosevelt "is doing right in selling to friendly countries such ammunitions as they may need," Ferris added:

"I feel sure that the President will win out in this as I hope he will in Mr. Carp's matter. Of course, whether it is opportune now to plunge into this Russian question and how far Mr. Carp and his associates would stand up under the fire and investigation of Congress, I do not know. How much he would dump on us, I do not know."

National U. Opens Its 71st Year

National University opened its seventy-first year last night with the largest enrollment in its history. Chancellor Leslie C. Garnett spoke at assembly, and Justice Oscar R. Luhring, a faculty member, drew a contrast between conditions here and in Europe. An understanding of the law on which this democracy is based, he said, is the best protection against alien ideologies.

Japanese Urge Britain, France To Quit China

Ambassador Asserts Withdrawal of Troops Being Sought in Talks

By the Associated Press.

Japanese Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi revealed yesterday the Japanese have begun informal talks with Britain and France in an effort to get them to withdraw troops from China.

The Ambassador said in a press conference that "friendly advice" had been given by Japan to Britain, France, Germany and Poland that belligerents must withdraw from China.

Britain and France are the only belligerents having forces there.

"We sincerely hope that a settlement of this question can be arrived at through diplomatic negotiations," the Ambassador said. "These negotiations are now going on in the form of informal talks.

Cites War Danger

"This request is part of our policy to avoid involvement in the European war."

Asked whether, if Britain and France withdraw their troops they could return them after the war, the Ambassador contented himself with saying that when the war is over there will be no question of neutrality.

The Ambassador called the press conference to say:

"With regard to the present war in Europe, the Japanese government has already enunciated its policy, which is to avoid involvement in that conflict and to concentrate its efforts on the settlement of the China affair.

"Japan's agreement (with Russia) to the cessation of hostilities and to the negotiations for delimitation of the Outer Mongolia-Manchukuo frontier was solely prompted by the above basic policy of the Japanese government."

Denies German Influence

The Ambassador said there was "no reason to regard it as preliminary to a nonaggression pact or to any move toward a close association of Soviet Russia and Japan." He also denied that the agreement "was consummated by the good offices of Germany."

The Ambassador admitted the agreement cleared Soviet Russia's way for action in the west and said it was his belief Soviet Russia had "long been contemplating this move into Poland."

Horinouchi said Japan would now endeavor to bring about an early settlement of the war in China. The Ambassador said it would be to the mutual benefit of Japan and the United States to avoid a situation in which they had no commercial treaty. The existing treaty of 1911 has been denounced by this country and expires January 26. Neither negotiations nor preliminary conversations had been held as yet for reaching a new agreement.

"General talks," he said, "would be a help in arriving at some future solutions."

Fifteen Navy bombers, making the first mass flight ever attempted from Hawaii to the Philippine Islands, have landed at Midway Island, the Navy Department said yesterday. Other legs of the flight will take them to Wake Island, Guam and Manila.

60,000 Employers Questioned on NLRB

Sixty thousand questionnaires have been sent to employers throughout the Nation by the special House committee investigating the National Labor Relations Board, Chairman Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, announced yesterday.

This is the first step in the committee's $50,000 inquiry into the New Deal agency. Smith said "the questionnaires delve exhaustively into every phase of possible relationship between NLRB, employers, and unions, and it is believed the material contained in the replies will go far toward achieving an analysis of the board's policies and activities."

Paris Doubles Trains to Aid Evacuations

Thousands Stranded Without Funds in Country; Hotels Full

Copyright by New York Times.

Paris, Sept. 20.—While France has been bending every energy toward the organization and formation of armies at the front, another task almost as stupendous has been proceeding simultaneously in spite of difficulties and obstacles, expected and unforeseen.

This has been the gigantic work of transferring the entire civilian population from the frontiers and the army zone and the evacuation of women, children and the aged from the Paris region and from other big centers threatened by air bombardments.

Even while mobilization was going on, train services from Paris and over most of the main routes in France had been doubled and tripled to handle the crowds of refugees and citizens caught by the war on a holiday and returning home to break up households and depart for some place of refuge.

Evacuation Not Compulsory

Although the government asked all who had a place to take refuge and were not needed in Paris or in some official service, to leave, there has been no compulsory evacuation as yet. Nearly all school children have been removed, however, and it may soon be the turn of the aged.

In the eastern frontier region the situation is entirely different, for there, military authorities ordered all civilians to leave the immediate border districts at once. This order was gradually extended to cover the army zone within 40 kilometers of the frontier.

At first these refugees were received in the neighboring districts but they have been gradually pushed further afield and are now being distributed to all parts of central, southern and western France where they must be sheltered and assisted until it is possible to return to their homes.

It is a gigantic undertaking, this redistribution of France's population, which is necessitating the revision of the whole system of food and most necessary supplies for readjustment to life in small towns and villages which in many instances now must meet needs of 10 times their normal populations.

Thousands Stranded

Relief organizations, hastily instituted, are endeavoring with inadequate means and materials to mitigate the hardships. People everywhere are contributing what they have, and villagers and townsmen are offering their homes to help. Thousands of persons who took flight from Paris in the first few days are now stranded without funds. Hotels, requisitioned, had to turn out their clients.

Many of these refugees were routed through Paris 1,500 to 3,000 arriving daily at Gare de l'Est and being sent out to the provinces in all directions. With the cafes, restaurants and bars closed throughout the night hours, these refugees could get no care without the efforts of volunteer relief workers under sponsorship of the Union des Femmes de France. They are trying to supply coffee, milk and a place to rest for these weary thousands and to give assistance to mothers and children but again funds have been lacking for this cause.

For many weeks this promises to continue since the evacuated zone is steadily extending and more may be expected to quit Paris.

In addition to this, France is being filled with foreigners and authorities have been confronted with another problem of surveillance and investigation. Concentration camps have been established, not only for the Spanish refugees, but for Germans, Austrians, some Russians, and Communists. The Germans and Russians are lodged in the Colombes Stadium, the scene of the Olympic games. Other camps are scattered through central and western France.

N. Y. Ship Strikers Agree to Basis For Settlement

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Striking members of the National Maritime Union agreed tonight to a basis for settlement of their war bonus dispute with the American shipping industry, thus paving the way for seven strike-bound vessels to leave New York harbor.

The agreement called for a 25 per cent wage increase for seamen on ships entering European or Mediterranean ports.

It also provided for transportation back to the United States if a ship should be lost, wages in the event of internment and assurance that charges against seamen of alleged failure to obey officers' orders, now being heard by the Federal Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, would be withdrawn.

Negotiations will continue over a demand for bonuses for sailors on vessels plying between American ports and the war zones.

Jealous of Sister's Operation, D. C. Girl, 2, Snips Own Tonsil

Little Joan Sloan tells Dr. Mario Scalessa, of Providence Hospital, how she "killed her tonsils." Joan, who wanted her tonsils removed, tried to do it herself with a comb

By Gerald G. Gross

Joan Sloan, who is almost 3 years old, blonde, and has a bent toward surgery, all but extracted her own tonsils yesterday, to the amazement of doctors and nurses at Providence Hospital.

Last night she was a bit ill, though not regretful, little girl with a sore throat, who kept asking her mother when she's going to be brought back to the hospital "to have my tonsils cut out for real, like sister Dolores."

Dolores, 6, was the innocent cause of yesterday's incredible incident, which occurred in the Sloan home at 115 E street southeast. The mother of the girls explained it this way:

"Dolores had her tonsils out this summer," said Mrs. Sloan, "and Joan was scheduled to have hers removed in a few weeks, too. Ever since her older sister got out of the hospital, Joan has been impatient to get the same attention.

"Yesterday, as we were walking past Providence—our home is just around the corner—Joan screamed she wanted to go in and let the doctor take her tonsils out. I promised it would be done soon and she calmed down.

"Today I left Mary Helen, who is 23 months, and Joan in the bedroom and went to another part of the house to do some work. Soon I noticed it was quiet, much too quiet, in the bedroom and went back to take a look.

"As I approached the door I heard Joan say, 'I'll take my own tonsils out,' and as I came into the room I saw her ram a comb down her throat. As I took the comb away from her she cried, 'I killed my tonsils out.'"

Bleeding profusely, the child was rushed to Providence Hospital by her mother. The physician who cleansed the throat wound said Joan actually had clipped a tonsil. The comb she used was about 6 inches long and had deepth teeth, two of which were broken off at the end which the girl inserted in her throat.

"A pretty good job for a 2-year-old amateur," the doctor commented.

At the hospital Joan admitted it hurt some, but insisted upon remaining until the doctor finished what she had started. It was decided, however, that the wound would have to heal before she can have her wish granted.

Father of 5 Killed as Auto Strikes Train

James J. McCarron, 31, Former FTC Lawyer, Dies at Landover

James J. McCarron, 31, of 3221 Twelfth street northeast, father of five children, was crushed to death early yesterday when his automobile struck a Washington-bound freight train at the Landover (Md.) grade crossing.

McCarron's car crashed against the side of a box car and was thrown against the watchman's shed. His body was hurled beneath the wheels of the train.

Thomas D. Owens, colored, of Bowie, Md., crossing watchman, was on the opposite side of the tracks with his signal lantern.

Formerly an attorney with the Federal Trade Commission, McCarron was a saleaman with the real estate company of Waverly Taylor, Inc., of Washington. He was a graduate of Georgetown University and Columbus University Law School.

Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner, said he did not think an inquest was necessary. The body was removed to Gasch's funeral home, Hyattsville.

The Landover crossing, scene of several fatal accidents in recent years, will be replaced shortly with an overhead bridge, Nathan L. Smith, chief engineer of the State Roads Commission, announced. He said plans have been completed but the land has not been acquired.

D. C. Man Flies To Observe War

Port Washington, Long Island, Sept. 20.—The Pan American Airways flying boat Yankee Clipper left its terminal here at 10:22 a. m. today with 35 passengers, among them John E. Kelly of Washington, major in the United States Army Reserve. Kelly said he would proceed to Spain and that later he would observe developments of the war.

Norman Alley, newsreel cameraman, who photographed the sinking of the United States Navy gunboat Panay in China, was also aboard. He said he planned to take pictures of the war "in Germany and Rumania."

FCC Warns Radio Hams To Obey Rules

International Situation Results in Additional Discipline for Infraction

America's 60,000 radio amateurs, who are credited with many heroic services in peacetime, yesterday were warned by the Federal Communications Commission to obey regulations strictly because of the international situation.

The occasion for the warning was the disciplining of two amateurs for violation of FCC rules. The customary punishment of three months' suspension of licenses was doubled, it was explained, as an example to other amateurs.

FCC officials indicated that radio amateurs probably would be the first to feel the hand of censorship in event the United States goes to war.

The commission warned that further unauthorized activities, even during American neutrality, may result in the curtailment of amateur operations generally.

At the same time the commission scheduled a public hearing for Wednesday of the charges that Station WMCA, New York, broadcast secret military communications of Great Britain and Germany in violation of an international treaty.

U. S. Aide Hoping For Strike Break

Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, indicated yesterday that a break may come today in the strike of union dump truck drivers which has crippled construction and paving work since September 12.

A factor in the walkout is a jurisdictional dispute between the drivers' and engineers' unions over the hauling of pre-mixed concrete.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, said yesterday three-fourths of all street paving operations were tied up by the strike, with approximately 1,000 men out of work as a result.

Bergdoll Must Face Army Trial

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the "No. 1" World War draft dodger, was denied a writ of habeas corpus in Federal court today and ordered back to military prison on Governors Island, where he faces a court martial on charges of desertion and escape.

Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe overruled, in effect, the defense attorney's preliminary contention that since Bergdoll never was actually a soldier he could not be charged with deserting the Army.

Nazi Airmen Take Offensive Against French

Attempt to Draw Out Poilus for Strafing; Big Guns Also Active

By Taylor Henry
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Sept. 20.—French and German aviation clashed today in a series of battles for mastery of the air over the Siegfried and Maginot lines.

One German ship, a Messerschmidt fighter, was reported to have been shot down within French lines by French pursuit planes.

While German land forces were trying to feel their way forward behind a protective screen of artillery fire, Nazi planes roared into the air, apparently bent on the double mission of enticing the French into battle and strafing French advance positions.

France to Fight to End

German aircraft were reported to have taken the lead in an attack on the northern flank of the western front as a result of a new German air base established at Aachen, (Aix-La Chappelle), far north of the fighting.

An air base at Aachen not only would provide Germany additional facilities for western front air warfare, but would be considerably closer to England and the North Sea than any of her present major bases.

Latest advices from Holland said the Nazis had lined the Netherlands frontier north from Aachen 100 miles to Benthein with captive balloons whose positions were shifted each night.

Aachen, about 270 miles airline distance from London, is one of the nearest points in German territory to the British capital.

Tonight's general staff communique described the day's action as "activity of the enemy artillery at various points of the front. French and German pursuit planes fought several battles. An enemy plane was shot down within our lines."

The French government declared today that Europe's 17-day-old war will be carried on until Nazi Germany is crushed by a "definite victory."

The statement, issued after the first French cabinet meeting since war was declared, was made in the face of the collapse of France's ally, Poland, under the joint pressure of German and Soviet Russian armies.

It was considered an answer to Adolf Hitler's Danzing speech of yesterday, which was interpreted in Paris as a bid to France and Britain to give up Poland as lost and make peace.

Premier Daladier and Leslie Hore-Belisha, Britain's war secretary, conferred here during the day on the general conduct of the British-French war against Germany.

Immediately after the conference, conducted in the war ministry, Daladier held a council of the highest French military and diplomatic chiefs.

A communique issued after the council gave no details of what was discussed.

Those who attended the council meeting included Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, chief of the British-French land forces; Gen. Louis Colson, French army chief of staff; Gen. Marcel Tetu, chief of the air force staff; Admiral Jean Darlan, naval chief of staff; Foreign Undersecretary Auguste Champetier de Ribes and Robert Coulondre, ex-French Ambassador to Berlin.

On the Western Front no peace note was sounded as the German heavy guns pounded French positions tonight with increasingly steady rhythm.

Far to the north the Germans were reported concentrating troops at Aachen, which lies at the juncture of the German, Netherlands and Belgian frontiers. And the French high command was authoritatively understood to have taken measures to meet any possible repetition of Germany's 1914 drive through Belgium.

Advices reaching here said the German troops had been shifted to the Western Front from Poland. French military sources intimated concern over the reported concentration since Koblenz is the logical concentration point for troops moving from northeast Germany to the Western Front.

Aachen is about 85 miles north of the present fighting zone and 75 miles northwest of Koblenz.

Aachen Off Direct Line

Aachen is off the direct rail line along which troops ordinarily would be shifted from the Eastern Front to the west.

Military observers regarded as significant, too, the fact that from Koblenz the main railroad lines run behind the Siegfried Line while from Aachen there is no main line south to the fighting zone. Railroads from Aachen run into Holland and Belgium.

Reports have been reaching Paris for some days that the Germans had cleared this area of inhabitants as far back as Koblenz, despite the fact that under present operations it is in no apparent danger of attack for some time.

[Semiofficial quarters in Berlin expressed indignation over British and French reports that the allied powers are concerned lest Germany return to 1914 tactics and invade Belgium in order to strike at Frnace, the United Press said.

[The Deutscher Dienst, semiofficial government organ, asserted Britain is trying to raise the "violation of Belgian neutrality" alarm on the eve of the meeting of the American Congress in Washington, when neutrality legislation will be discussed.Editor's note.]

A curtain of artillery fire on the Western Front shielded Nazi infantry which scoured the wooded hills which mark the sector east of the industrial city of Saarbruecken.

French Regain Position

The Germans, who have been sending out patrols in this area for the last three days, were reported now to be using units as large as companies in their advance guard actions.

The French admitted they had lost one advanced position yesterday in the face of a German surprise attack. The Germans, however, apparently were interested only in taking prisoners in order to question them.

A French counterattack led by tanks was reported to have had little difficulty in retaking the post a few hours later.

There was every indication the Germans were preparing for an offensive thrust. They methodically felt out French strength along the 25-mile front east of Saarbruecken.

This sector is split by rivers into three natural rectangles. The Germans have given their attention to one of these rectangles each day and submitted it to a thorough going over.

The first lies just east of Saarbruecken, between the Saar and the Mandel Rivers. The second is bordered by the Mandel and Blies Rivers, while the Blies and the Bickenhall form the third rectangle, in which the Germans were operating today.

German batteries were not only laying a heavy fire on the French advance lines, which are in German territory, but were sending some shells on the Maginot Line, which lies close to the frontier in this sector.

French Strengthen Positions

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 20 (AP).—The French army was reported in advices reaching here tonight to have strengthened its defensive positions under fire of Germany's Siegfried Line forts.

Military observers believed this action would be followed by a period of waiting until the French high command orders the first big offensive designed to crack the German fortifications.

The Germans gave French key positions little rest, constantly harrying outposts. The French were reported to have lost some ground, but were said to have counterattacked and regained their positions.

Rudolph Hess, Germany's No. 3 Nazi and Hitler's deputy for party affairs, was said to have completed a tour of the siegfried fortification area.

More trained units of French troops released from duty near the Italian frontier by regiments from central France were reported here to have arrived on the western front. A number of North African labor battalions already are assigned to the Maginot zone.

Tempers and Brakes Burn in Traffic Jams As Memorial and Key Bridges Are Restricted

Jam of automobiles on Highway Bridge yesterday caused by restrictions on the use of Arlington Memorial and Key bridges

Tempers and brakes burned yesterday as Washington suffered a painful attack of bridgework trouble.

Restrictions on the use of Arlington Memorial and Key bridges due to construction and repairs produced serious traffic jams during both the morning and afternoon rush hours.

A large measure of relief is promised today, however, when Arlington Memorial Bridge is open throughout the day. Only the north, or upstream, half of the span was open yesterday. Traffic was permitted in both directions, but with only half the bridge in use it moved slowly.

One motorist, who lives in Arlington and works in the District, consumed 50 minutes driving to his office yesterday. The usual time is 17 minutes. With Key Bridge open to Virginia-bound traffic only, autoists headed for Washington were compelled to use either Arlington or Highway bridges.

During the morning rush hour traffic was clogged from the Virginia end of Arlington Bridge to Lee boulevard. In the afternoon conditions were relatively good at Key Bridge, but Arlington and Highway bridges were badly jammed.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, announced that Key Bridge will be closed altogether between 7 p. m. Saturday and 2 p. m. Monday to permit the raising of a temporary structure in the center of the newly added span. After that, the bridge will be returned to one-way use for several weeks, he said.

Slovakia Joins Czech Uprising

Slovaks have tended to put aside their differences with the Czechs and cooperate in the war against the Nazis.

In the future, the Czecho-Slovak campaign will be directed more aggressively from London by radio, News in Czech and Slovak is being broadcast daily by the British Broadcasting Co. on three wave lengths, and one of the precautions taken by Czech leaders before they left the country was to provide thousands of small short-wave receivers to people all over the country. These receivers operate from bedspring antennaes. They are portable headphone outfits which can get the B. B. C. clearly.

Czech sources here estimate that the Czechs stilll have between 25 and 30 per cent of the supply of arms they had when the Germans took Prague. These have been hidden all over the country.

May Cripple Skoda Works

Even if the Czechs are unable to overthrow their Nazi protectors they are certain to force Germany to deflect a certain number of troops to maintain order. They may also be able to cripple the Skoda works and interrupt the supply of heavy guns from Bohemia.

Meanwhile Czech leaders in other countries are proceeding with their plans to form a Czech army to fight alongside the British and the French. As in the last war when Czech legions fought their way across Siberia and finally marched with the allies, Czech and Slovak legions are getting ready here and in France.

Another Czech legion at present is somewhere in that part of the Polish territory that is now occupied by Soviet troops. There are 15,000 Czecho-Slovaks in Great Britain, 60,000 in France, 7,000 in Belgium; and, many more in Yugoslavia. The Czechs here say there are 600 Czech pilots in France alone and they are confident the former republic will be able to contribute much more to the allied cause in this war than it did in the last.

The Nazi march on Prague was the act which turned the British policy against Germany and hastened the outbreak of the war and if the allied forces win again, the re-establishment of an independent Czecho-Slovakia is certain to be a major peace aim.

Germany Denies Revolt

Berlin, Sept. 20 (U.P.).—An official spokesman tonight decribed as "perfect nonsense" a report of the British ministry of information that a revolutionary movement had broken out in Slovakia and Bohemia-Moravia.

Shortly before the London report reached Berlin, a press spokesman for Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Reich protector for Bohemia-Moravia, said that all was quiet and orderly in the protectorate.

The spokesman admitted that several hundred followers of former President Benes had been arrested in recent months but said these were routine police measures.

Neurath's spokesman invited newspapermen to go to Prague and "see with your own eyes" the situation there.

It was said that the London report telling of a revolt of 15,000 Slovak soldiers and their disarming might have been an outgrowth of the demobilization of several older classes of the Slovak army announced in Bratislava today.

Vienna, Sept. 20.—Vienna tonight was for all foreigners an oversized concentration camp. No foreigner, even of a neutral country, was permitted to remain in the city without a special police permit.

Adding to the difficulties, no foreigner was permitted to leave without a special permit. Each permit requires about three days to obtain. As a result Vienna's large foreign population crowded into various police offices.

The British consul general is still interned at his own expense in the Hotel Bristol.

Warsaw Radio Pledges Capital Will Hold Out

Red Cross Hospital Fired by German Bombs, Station Says

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Sept. 20.—A story of rumbling guns, the terror of 13 days of siege, and still the determination "to hold out to the bitter end to defeat our enemy" blared out of the Warsaw radio tonight.

"Big guns are rumbling heavily and probably soon there will be a big offensive against us," said a military communique read at 8:15 p. m. (2:15 p. m., E. S. T.).

"Let the Germans not nurse any illusions as ot constantly growing successes of our Warsaw army. We will put an end to German domination. Nobody doubts that Warsaw will come out of this bloody struggle victorious," the announcement continued.

Marshal Reported at Front

Despite the fact that Polish Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz has been in Rumania several days, the Warsaw announcer said: "Smigly-Rydz is now on the front and his presence cheered our soldiers."

The Polish capital was bombed four times during the afternoon and incendiary boubs set the Red Cross hospital on fire, the radio said.

The defenders were reported tonight to have driven back besieging German forces with a cavalry counterattack and bitter hand-to-hand fighting.

Colonel Vaciava Lipinski declared over the Warsaw radio that the cavalry beat back a tank attack in the western section of he city late today.

A notice was broadcast to Warsaw butchers to come to military headquarters to receive allotments of horse meat. Wounded horses, the announcer said, will be butchered for the "near starving million inhabitants of the battered city.

Throughout the day long lists of persons missing inside the city were read.

Wives, Children Reassured

Women and children were told: "Don't worry if you don't get letters from your men at the front. Those who are fighting haven't time to write these days."

It was apparent here the directors of the radio station decided it was unwise to tell the city the whole truth of its plight, for several times the announcer referred to President Moscicki and other members of the government as if they still were in Poland.

"Warsaw still is being bombed and shelled," it was announced at 8:30 p. m. (2:30 p. m. E. S. T.).

Vandalism Charged

"The Germans cannot resist the temptation to destroy lovely parks, museums and art galleries. The number of people killed and wounded is smaller today, because they are learning how to take care of themselves.

"Yesterday a German shell landed in a hospital filled with 40 wounded soldiers, but failed to explode.

"Nurses are showing unbelievable heroism."

"I have seen them dash into buildings from which the bricks had not yet stopped falling to rescue patients. In many cases when all stretchers were filled I have seen tiny nurses carry brawny wounded soldiers out of burning buildings on their backs."

"All Warsaw priests spend much of their time at the front bringing Christ's comfort to the wounded and dying."

The station issued an appeal early in the evening to the British Labor Party.

"We are fighting under the most difficult conditions. We ask that you come to the aid of our city as soon as possible. We count heavily on your aircraft and your fleet. We ask your aid for our beleaguered city."

The appeal was signed by the president of the Polish Socialist Party.

Mayor Stefan Starzinski pleaded with Poland's allies for help, saying, "When will Britain and France save us from the fury of German barbarism, from new deaths, from the destruction of the remaining buildings of our city?"

Jan Gurs, a Warsaw councilor, described over the radio a visit to the front line. There, he said, he talked to boys between 12 and 18 wearing steel helmets. One was toothless, he said, another had his head bandaged and a third wounded in the legs, but "all were cheerful and determined."

Smigly-Ryds Interned

Bucharest, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Rumanian government announced today Marshal Smigly-Rydz, chief of Poland's scattered military forces, would be interned in Rumania for duration of the European war, despite appeals from Britain and France.

The Nazis have insisted the marshal, like other soldiers, should be forced to stay in the country to which he fled.

It was understood British and French diplomats had tried to induce the government to permit Smigly-Rydz to proceed to Paris with President Moscicki, Foreign Minister Beck and other Polish civilian leaders.

In the interests of Rumanian neutrality the President and foreign minister, however, were urged to move on as quickly as possible.

Latvian Envoy Has No Fear For His Land

Denies Either Russia Or Germany Has Designs on Country

By Hedley Donovan.

Some people might get nervous about the idea of living between Russia and Germany these days, but not Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, author, painter, ballet lover and Latvian Minister to the United States.

The stocky Baltic envoy speaks with cheerful nonchalance of his little country's position on one of the more heavily traveled highways of European conquest.

"People look too much on the gloomy side of things," Dr. Bilmanis said yesterday. "They seem to think that Estonia, Lithuania and ourselves are just three little pigs before the big bad wolf."

The minister dismissed these fears with an energetic thrust of fist and cigar, squaring his shoulders inside a roomy smoking jacket reminiscent of one of the more conservative numbers from Gen. Goering's wardrobe.

Government Supports Ballet

One minute you're talking about Latvia and the European war and the next thing you know Dr. Bilmanis has presented you with a handsomely illustrated booklet on "The Latvian Ballet."

This ballet is very good, it seems, and is only one of a veriety of cultural enterprises supported by the Latvian government. Latvian painters are showing a good deal of promise, too. Dr. Bilmanis owns several samples of their work and explains that he does some painting himself.

His latest is a calm oil color of the White House, seen from Lafayette Square. "That's the sort of thing I'm doing now"—he reaches back into a cabinet—"but when I was 20 years younger I was much more violent." The earlier painting is an impressionistic street scene.

But what about the Russian blockade of Estonia?

"The purpose is to look for a Polish submarine," Dr. Bilmanis said briskly. "When the submarine is found, I'm sure the whole incident will be closed. It doesn't affect Latvian shipping at all."

Friendly With Russia

Relations between Russia and Latvia are "excellent," according to the minister, who represented his counry at Moscow from 1931 to 1933. "Russia has never interfered with us, and we have never been a barrier between Russia and western Europe—we have tried to be a bridge, commercially speaking. We are strictly neutral in this war and so is Russia, which is simply carrying out a humanitarian program by protecting White Russians and Ukrainians in the former Polish state."

"You see Latvia is a young state and we're trying to justify our self-determination," the diplomat modestly observed. "We have had no unemployment since 1934. The budget is balanced and we are reducing our debt."

Latvian clover is of the highest grade, according to the envoy. You never find any silk-like threads running through it. Equally pure is Latvian rye, quite free of little onions near the roots. Dr. Bilmanis delicately implies that the same cannot be said for the rye of all nations.

What about Latvian relations with Germany? They're fine, too. "You see Latvian independence isn't based on the Versailles Treaty at all," he pointed out. "Our German minority numbers only 3 per cent of the whole population and they have their own schools, university and cultural groups."

Someone had suggested that Russia and Germany might be plotting to divide northeastern Europe. "Why, that would be just like old-fashioned imperialism," Dr. Bilmanis replied indignantly.

Latvia Quiet, Says Leader

Omaha, Nebr., Sept. 20 (AP).—The World-Herald said today Karlis Ulmanis, University of Nebraska graduate and now dictator of Latvia, told the paper in a transatlantic telephone interview today he does not anticipate trouble with Russia.

The paper quoted him as saying "everything is quiet here, the only trouble is in Poland." He spoke from Riga.

Asked if the Latvian army had mobilized, he replied "there is no chance of any trouble; everything is quiet."

75-Year Secret Out; Goddess Of Capitol Shed Roman Nose

CARRIE JENKINS HICKEY
"Freedom" Has Her Nose

MRS. W. F. JONES
Has A Nose Like Her Mother's

D. C. Woman Reveals How Mother Posed For Freedom's New Grecian Profile Before Statue Was Cast; 'Tarzan' Making Repairs

A kindly, white-haired lady who lives at 3509 Thirty-fifth street northwest took a sentimental interest yesterday in the doings of a workman who, at the other end of the city, was touching up the Capitol's Goddess of Freedom.

Reason: The statue's nose was her mother's, so to speak. The model who sat patiently, more than three-fourths of a century ago, so that Sculptor Clark Mills could transfer her nose to the Goddess of Freedom was Carrie Jenkins Hickey and it was her daughter, Mrs. W. F. Jones, who told the story yesterday.

"Clark Mills, who cast the statue in bronze, was a good friend of my grandfather, Brig. Gen. William Hickey," said Mrs. Jones. "The plaster model was made in Rome and sent to this country to be cast by Mr. Mills.

First Nose Unsatisfactory

"But he was not satisfied with the plaster model's nose. He was a frequent visitor to my grandfather's home, near what is now Bladensburg, and observed that Gen. Hickey's youngest daughter, Carrie, had a good Grecian nose.

"He obtained my grandfather's permission to make a mold of my mother's nose and I can remember her telling us children of the experience. Mother died 28 years ago at the age of 70. I believe she was about 20 when she had her nose modeled."

A Secret Till Now

Until now it has been known only to Mrs. Jones and her family that Mills took such a liberty with the design.

James R. Torreyson, whom fellow workers call "Tarzan," yesterday climbed the Goddess of Freedom, which towers 287 feet above the Capital Plaza, to give it a cleaning and remove the 10 platinum-tipped rods which protect it from lightning.

The rods, all but two or three of which bore evidence of having been struck by lightning, will be repaired and then restored to the sockets in the goddess' headpiece, head, shoulders and shield.

2 U. S. Fliers Die in Air Crash

Panama City, Panama, Sept. 20 (AP).—Lieut. Thomas C. Smith, 26, a native of West Virginia, and Corp. Donald W. Jackson, 26, two United States Army fliers, were killed in a crash of their combat plane at 10:30 a. m. today.

The plane, taken aloft in a training flight, burned after hitting the ground 10 miles northeast of Rio Hato, where the Army maintains an emergency landing field.

Lieut. Smith came to Albrook Field from Kelly Field and has a father and mother in the United States.

Nazis Believed Forging New Air Weapon

Bomber Held Capable Of Flying 48 Hours Without Refueling

By the Associated Press

There is reason to believe that Germany is forging a formidable new air weapon for the long war for which both sides profess to be ready.

In bombers of a type new to Europe, designed to remain aloft as long as 48 hours without refueling, the Nazis are reported to be preparing a menace to British shipping which Prime Minister Chamberlain refrained from noting in his optimistic report to the Commons yesterday on the U-boat situation.

Presumably more vulnerable than conventional war planes, the long range bombers would be a real menace only in the event Germany gained and retained command of the air in the unrestricted aerial war which Chancellor Hitler warned at Danzig might come quickly.

By the estimates of neutral aviation experts, Germany is in a position now to dominate the air, with far more planes ready for combat than the British and French, along with superior capacity to turn out replacements.

However, it remains to be seen whether the Nazis could keep command in a long war and whether bombers would be effective against merchant craft convoyed by warships bristling with anti-aircraft guns.

Reports of the new German bombers seeped out after Nazi plants were closed for a time recently to retool for new types. Until now European military planes of all categories have been short range, by American standards.

Britain Seizes 200,000 Tons Of Contraband

London, Sept. 20 (AP).—The British government announced tonight that 110,000 tons of contraband goods were seized by Britain during the week ended September 16.

Total value of goods was estimated at more than £500,000 (about $2,000,000).

This brought to nearly 200,000 tons the amount of contraband seized since the outbreak of the war. The bulk of the goods was manganese ore, petroleum products, iron ore and aluminum ore.

The amount of manganese ore taken since war started was said to be about 30,000 tons, about 7 per cent of Germany's total annual imports. Manganese ore is of great importance in preparation of special steels.

Soviet Reported Calling Reserves for Polish Duty

Russia Announces Troops Are Within 16 Miles of East Prussia, and Capture Of Thousands of Soldiers, Planes, Guns

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Sept. 20.—While German and Russian officers met to thresh out problems growing out of their military occupation of Poland, the Soviet Russian government was reported today to have called up reserves for its huge army already in service.

No official inkling of the number of additional reserves was forthcoming. It was reported in an unofficial quarter, however, they were to be sent to some point beyond Lwow on the western frontier in Poland.

The Soviet Russian high command reported tonight troops driving through Poland had occupied Grodno about 16 miles from the East Prussian border.

90 Miles From Wilno

Grodno is 90 miles southwest of Wilno (Vilna), in northwest Poland near the Lithuanian border and 45 miles northeast of Bialystok, communications center reported occupied by German forces. A previous communique announced the capture of Wilno.

In southeast Poland the Soviet army reported the occupation of Kovel, Ukrainian town 100 miles north of Lwow, industrial center which the Red Army command announced was occupied earlier in the day.

The Soviet high command announced that during the four days since the Red Army marched into Poland more than 60,000 Polish troops had been taken prisoner.

In this period, the communique said, three Polish infantry divisions, two cavalry brigades and a number of smaller army units were disarmed.

"All armaments, artillery and ammunition" were said to have been taken with the occupation of the fortified areas of Wilno, Baranowicze, Molodeczno and Sarny.

120 Planes Seized

Baranowicze is 35 miles from the Russian frontier and about 120 miles east of Bialystok. Molodeczno is 18 miles from the Russian border and 65 miles east of Kovel.

War materials seized by the Russians were reported to include 280 artillery guns and 120 airplanes.

The conferees on the Polish situation included four German officers who arrived yesterday to assist the German military attache in Moscow, Lieut. Gen. Ernest Koestring. It was reported also that the Soviet military attache in Berlin, holder of a general's rank, also was here for the talks.

[The New York Times, in a Berlin dispatch, said the farthest extension of the line of German advance is officially stated to have been to Stryj, Lwow, Brest-Litovsk and and Bialystok. The Germans were said now to be retiring to the line of demarcation set by the Russian and German governments.

[The official line is not known, but it is believed subject to minor revisions, to follow from south of the San River to the Vistula River and then to the Narew River and the Lithuanian border. It is these adjustments that are believed to be the topic of the Moscow talks.—Editor's note.]

In diplomatic quarters it was learned that Rumania, in what appeared a move to strengthen her relations with the Soviets, had changed her Ambassador to Moscow.

The retiring Ambassador, Nicolas Dianu, paid his farewell call at the Russian foreign office and it was expected his successor, Davidscu, would be here before long.

The Polish embassy staff made haste to leave Moscow, but was unable to complete its visa arrangements and will not leave before day after tomorrow.

The Polish Embassy staff made Rumania and then get through to France, where they said an extra-territorial division would be established for the benefit of the Polish government.

British and French embassies said they still had no instructions on whether they would be recalled.

French Counselor Jean Payart, called on the Soviet foreign office today, but whether it was in connection with the Russian march into Poland was not known.

Two Polish Leaders Are Reported Suicides

Budapest, Sept. 20 (AP).—A dispatch from Wilno (Vilna) reported today the suicide of Alexander Prystor, former premier of Poland. Prystor had been a close associate of the late Marshal Joseph Pilsudski.

Alfred Bitja, 50, governor of Lwow, capital of the Polish Ukraine, was found dead, a pistol in his hand, in a hotel room at Muncaks, Hungary.

Nazis Win, Poles 2d—at Chess

Buenos Aires, Sept. 20 (AP).—German players won the Hamilton Russell Cup, the world's most coveted chess prize, last night after 27 days' competition. The Polish team finished second in a tense session.

Declaring Polish War Over, German Army Chief Leaves for Western Front

Officers Go to Confer in Moscow; Nazi-Soviet Frontier Determined; Defenders Still Hold Warsaw

By Melvin K. Whiteleather
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 20.—The German army turned its attention tonight to liquidation of its virtually completed campaign in Poland.

Col. Gen. Walter von Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the German army, visited front line positions on the Western front today and declared that "operations in Poland are closed," the United Press reported. —Editor's note.]

A delegation of German officers left for Moscow, presumably to settle further Russian-German collaboration in eastern Europe while the foreign offices of the two countries discussed plans for division of their interests in Poland.

Division Line Fixed

The Nazi supreme command disclosed an agreement had been reached on the partition of Poland, at least as far as their armies of occupation are concerned. A high command communique said the demarcation line had been set but did not say where the line runs.

German forces, it said, would withdraw from their present positions after "destruction of the last remnants of the Polish army there" to the "demarcation line definitely fixed between the German and Russian governments."

Mopping up of remnants of the Polish army possibly will go on for a week, but these were termed local tasks of minor importance, now that the biggest assembly of Polish troops was said to have been defeated in the bend of the Vistula River north of Lodz.

Poles' Strength Surprises

The high command described this battle as "one of the biggest destructive battles of all time."

The strength of the Poles' fighting resistance in this area surprised even German officers, who first calculated the enemy had 50,000 or 60,000 men participating in the nine-day battle.

This apparently was the largest grouping of troops the Poles brought together on any single battlefield of the war.

Warsaw, the besieged Polish capital, remained a thorn in the German side. Poles also still were fighting in and south of the fortified town of Modlin, immediately north of Warsaw.

German regarded the attitude of the Warsaw population, which doggedly refused to surrender, as "sheer folly, having nothing to do with heroism," in view of the fact that the Polish army has been routed and cannot aid the city.

The German army has announced resumption of large-scale hostilities against Warsaw, following a halt when the population was given a chance to capitulate and get out, but advices here indicated the Nazis still were not shelling the city heavily.

Warsaw radio broadcasts received in Budapest told of heavy bombings and the rumbling of big guns which were described as doing enormous damage to the city.

Civilians Released

The army was represented as clinging to the hope that surrender would come without a great deal more destruction and additional misery to the hundreds of thousands remaining in the besieged Polish capital.

Authoritative sources said the release of civilian prisoners had started and that war prisoners were being sorted and put into camps where they will be used on farms and roads.

The Nazi slogan was "Germany's war aims are fulfilled" as the government assumed the task of reconstruction in Poland and settling spheres of influence with Russia.

But the Western Front was not forgotten although war communiques so far have dealt with action there in one or two sentences.

Commander Leaves Poland

The situation in the east was so well in hand that Von Brauchitsch left Poland yesterday to assume personal direction of Nazi forces on the Western Front.

Adolf Hitler remained at Danzig for a few days and was expected to visit the Western Front shortly.

Nazi troops were known to be moving from Poland westward, leaving behind only enough strength to finish the cleaning up process and man garrisons.

Few soldiers are being kept in western Polish provinces where the former German minority is thickest.

Informed German quarters pointed out with satisfaction that the German-Soviet accord had contradicted "hopes abroad that strong German forces would be mired in Poland's eastern swamp lands where there is no German minority, thus diminishing Nazi fighting strength in the west."

420,000 Prisoners Reported

The decision of Scandinavian neutrals meeting in Copenhagen to defend their neutral rights against what the Germans called "encroachments" upon their foreign trade brought about by the British blockade of Germany met full agreement in Berlin.

The high command communique for the first time today gave a clear picture of the enormity of the battle in the bend of the Vistula. It said the fighting covered 969 square miles and was waged from September 10 to September 19.

The Germans were reported authoritatively to have taken a total of 420,000 Polish prisoners up to today. More than 100,000 of these were said to have been caught in the egg-shaped area 50 miles long and 15 to 30 miles wide north of Lodz in the vicinities of Kutno, Leczyca, Ozorkow, Lowicz, Sochaczew and Syszogrod.

Compared to Tannenberg

Army sources said the fighting around Ozorkow would go down as one of the greatest in German military history. The victory was being compared with that of Germany at Tannenberg over the Russians in 1914. The Germans took 92,000 prisoners in that battle.

Army sources said clothing for Polish war prisoners was a problem as 90 per cent were without overcoats, 30 per cent had no military blouses and 10 per cent lacked shoes. They are to be clothed from war booty and whatever apparel Polish factories can turn out.

Italy to Recall Troops From Greek Border

Announcement Seen As Fresh Step for Neutral Balkan Bloc

By James M. Minifie
Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Rome, Sept. 20.—A fresh step toward consolidating the Balkans into a neutral bloc closely identified with Italy was revealed today in a communique announcing that the Italian government had decided to withdraw troops from the frontier between Albania and Greece, where they had been concentrated in large numbers after the Italian occupation of Albania.

The communique added that the Greek government was carrying out similar measures, following conversations between the Greek and the Italian governments, at which the relations between the two countries had been found to be "sincerely friendly and inspired by complete mutual trust."

When last spring Italy occupied Albania, Greek circles were alarmed lest Corfu should also be seized.

A British guarantee of Greek territorial integrity was soon followed by a similar Italian guarantee, the good effect of which was vitiated by the concentration of large Italian forces at the head of the valley leading to Salonika.

Now, Italian interest is to preserve the status quo in the Danubian and Balkan countries against perturbations from the north and east—a fact which brings it parallel to British policy.

The action which Congress will take on the American neutrality act will be watched closely here. Informed circles are very reserved. It is no secret that Italian shipping is out for business, but the raising of the United States embargo and substitution of a cash-and-carry clause would only complicate Italy's position as a neutral.

The press has received Fuehrer Hitler's speech with customary unanimity as a Nazi olive branch. Its theme is "war against the Poland of Versailles is ended, but the big war hasn't really begun and there is no reason why it should, because Hitler says he has no demands against the Western democracies."

U. S. Will Fight, Japanese Says

Yokohama, apan, Sept. 20 (AP).—Yakichiro Suma, former counselor of the Japanese Embassy at Washington, expressed belief today it is "only a matter of time" until the United States enters the European war.

"Unlike 1914, the Americans now are definitely anti-German, and because they are emotional people I believe it is only a matter of time before the United States goes to war," he said.

Italy's Farm Program Cuts Buying From U. S.

Rome, Sept. 19.—The Italian food sufficiency program is causing a decrease in trade with the United States, according to statistics issued today, but from the Italian viewpoint it has succeeded in reducing an unfavorable balance.

Exports to the United States in the first seven months of 1939 totaled 402,800,000 lire, compared to 436,100,000 in the same months of 1938. Imports from the United States totaled 613,600,000 lire against 847,000,000 last year. That has brought the unfavorable balance down to 210,900,000 lire, compared to 410,900,000.

U.S. Correspondent Escapes Russians

Cernauti, Rumania, Sept. 20 (AP).—Richard Mowrer, correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, was brought here today by friends who found him walking along a country road after escaping from the Russian-occupied section of Poland. He had waded across the Dniester River during the night.

Apparently still held by the Russians was William Norton, United States Vice Consul at Warsaw.

'See You at a Tea Dance,' U-Boat Officer Tells Americans

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Prowlers of the undersea, while intent on destruction of belligerent nations' vessels and contraband aboard those of neutrals, are pursuing a "war of politeness" toward innocent victims.

Americans returning from Europe told today of a submarine's shell screaming across the bow of the United States freighter Wacosta, followed by polite apologies by the U-boat's commander.

One of the Wacosta's passengers was Charles Wharton Stork, of Bryn Mawr, Va., a survivor of the sinking of the Athenia.

Off the Irish coast, the freighter was halted by a shot across her bow on September 9. She carried 14,000 cases of Scotch whisky from Glasgow.

Signal Not Understood

"The second mate called my attention to the sub about a mile off the starboard side," Capt. George R. Sels, of Mobile, Ala., explained. "The sub gave some sort of flag signal. I couldn't understand it. Then she fired one shot across our bow about 75 feet ahead.

"I hove to and the sub stopped about a quarter of a mile away. The sub sent over an officer and four men."

The officer asked—in English—for an interpreter. Stork, who had studied at the University of Munich, stepped forward in response to a call from the master.

Expressing displeasure at the captain's failure to halt, the U-boat officer warned the captain to heave to next time he sighted a submarine, then with his men went below and searched the ship.

"A Society Gentleman"

"He was extremely courteous, cultured, polished, a society gentleman," Stork said of the submarine officer.

His three-quarter-hour search completed, the officer and men emerged from the hold. In a quiet voice, he made a short speech to the 24 passengers.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he explained, "I regret having detained you, but this is war."

Then, with a bow from the waist, he said, "Good-by," shook hands with Stork, and said: "We're not so barbarous, are we, except that I do need a shave? I'll see you at a tea dance in New York."

Then over the side he and his men disappeared.

One Wacosta passenger, Mrs. H. E. Jones, of Mobile, tried to photograph the German soldiers, but stopped when they slapped their holstered pistols and shouted at her in German.

"Oh, boy, were they handsome!" exclaimed Mrs. Jones.

261 Americans Arrive in U. S. On Mauretania

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Armed to repel both submarines and aircraft, the new British liner Mauretania arrived late today from England with 695 passengers, including the namesake and son of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy and 260 other Americans.

Joseph P. Kennedy, jr., 24, returning to law studies at Harvard, said the 6-inch anti-submarine piece and the two 3-inch anti-aircraft guns were tested on the second day out of Southampton on a small, red-flagged wooden target dropped overside.

"We couldn't tell whether the target was hit or not because it tipped over in the rough seas," said the son of the United States Ambassador to Britain.

Rumania Closes Her Polish Frontier and Arrests German Plotters

Soviet Troops' Arrival Foils Nazis' Revolt

60,000 Military, Civilian Refugees Enter From Poland

By the Associated Press

Cernauti, Rumania, Sept. 20.—Rumania clamped her Polish frontier shut today amid rumors of the arrest of German plotters in this country and execution of Polish leaders across the border.

Although officials here would neither confirm nor deny the report, it was learned on high authority that Rumanian police arrested a group of German residents of Bukowina (Bucovina) Province charged with plotting a rising when and if German troops in Poland reached the Rumanian frontier.

This source said the Germans planned—under the direction of Berlin quarters—to start the armed insurrection and join the Nazi troops. Arrival of Russian forces at the border instead of German foiled the plot, the source said.

Nazi Headquarters Closed

Bukowina was a part of pre-World War Austria which was awarded Rumania.

Police were understood to have ordered the German minority headquarters here closed.

The Rumanian commanding officer at the Cristeatic bridgehead opposite Zaleszczyki, Poland, told of reports from across the border that Russian troops were disarming all Polish soldiers and placing them in internment camps.

The report said "some Polish leaders" were executed. Many of the victims were learned to be Ukrainians who held responsible positions in the former Warsaw government. They, therefore, were shot as traitors, it was said.

110 Russian Divisions

Information in military circles declared Russia had sent 110 divisions into Poland.

High Polish officials said they had received information that Gen. Kozlowski, now leading the Polish defense of Lwow, may be chosen by the Russians and Germans to negotiate peace with their governments and to head a new Polish buffer state reported to have been agreed upon.

It was also learned that the Russians established a military commission to govern the areas occupied in Poland near the Rumanian border, with headquarters at Sniatyn.

60,000 Refugees

Before closing the frontier at Zaleszczyki, Rumanian authorities declared more than 60,000 Polish military and civilian refugees had arrived here since Sunday. They said negotiations would begin soon between the Rumanian, Russian and German governments for the repatriation of a large number of civilians.

No reason was given for the latest closing of the frontier. Yesterday the Rumanians had reached an accord with the Russians to open it to traffic originating in frontier districts.

A cordon also was thrown around Cernauti to forestall any refugees who might want to leave the city without permission.

Ford Describes Neutrality Law As Fool Proof

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP).—Henry Ford said today he was opposed to "any tampering with the neutrality act," and that "only the makers of war munitions profit financially from the human misery entailed in warfare."

"The present neutrality act," Ford said, "was written by men who know what war means. It is fool proof; if we change it one iota we take the first step toward getting this country into war—a war that will bring untold misery to millions of people and set us back thousands of years."

British Advance Just Begun, Chamberlain Advises House

Pace to Quicken Steadily, He Says; Whole Empire Strives For Full Mobilization

ing out an offensive against German submarines" and "already six or seven German submarines have paid the full penalty for their attacks on British shipping."

Strength Will Increase

Lifting slightly the curtain on Britain's war strategy, Chamberlain said, "Strategy is the art of concentrating decisive force at the decisive point at the decisive moment."

When or where the decisive force would be assembled he would not hazard a guess, but he declared, "The scale of our preparations insures that our strength will increase progressively to meet whatever may come."

The whole British commonwealth, he said, was fast mobilizing forces "stronger and more powerful than at the outset of any past war."

After the prime minister had spoken, Arthur Greenwood, leader of the Laborite opposition, declared Soviet Russia, by marching into Poland, had become an aggressor.

"It is a matter of very deep regret that Poland was not provided more generously with sorely needed assistance," he said.

After leaving Parliament, Chamberlain went to see the King.

During debate in Commons Vernon Bartlett, member of Parliament and foreign affairs writer in the News Chronicle, declared "it becomes increasingly clear that we shall not win this war unless we have the support of a great many states that are now neutral."

Urges Truthfulness

"We shall only win neutral support if we tell the truth," he added. "If we have to buy allies by incompatible promises given in secret treaties we shall lose the peace, even if we win the war."

Greenwood in a broadcast to the empire tonight said "labor hates war but it also hates oppression . . . if civilized methods of discussion, negotiation and persuasion are to prevail the monster of tyranny must be strangled forever."

The government announced extension of daylight saving time for six weeks from October eighth to November nineteenth to ease inconveniences causd by blackouts and to save electricity.

Col. Newman completed four years of service at the United States Military Bureau May 1, and was assigned to the Fourteenth Cavalry at Fort Des Moines.

Born in Bayside, N. Y., Col. Newman was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1918.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mary S. Newman, of Arlington, Va.; a daughter, Rosemary, and his mother and sister, in Freehold, N. J.

U. S. Fleet Sails From French Base; Mission Secret

Paris, Sept. 20 (U.P.).—The American European squadron left its base at Villefranche at 8 a. m. today for an unknown destination. Belief was expressed that the squadron would convoy American vessels taking home thousands of United States citizens.

No Washington Orders

The departure of the U. S. European squadron from Villefranche was neither in accordance with direct orders from Washington nor for the purpose of convoying Americans home from Europe, naval officials here stated.

A Navy spokesman declared that Admiral Courtney has full authority to move his ships in European waters to meet situations within his general instructions without consulting the Department. These do not permit the convoy of Americans home, it was said. No other clarification of the move was forthcoming from official sources.

Dr. L. W. McKenzie Dies; Rites Today

Dr. Lawson W. McKenzie, 61, a physician with the insurance division of the Veterans' Administration, died yesterday at his home, 814 Concord avenue northwest, after a brief illness. Services will be held today at 8 p. m. from Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N street northwest. Burial will be in Sheridan, Ind.

Born in Indiana, Dr. McKenzie gradusted from the Medical School of the University of Indiana in 1904. Following a period of private practice, he came to Washington 23 years ago to enter Government medical work. Surviving are the wife, Bertha S., and a son, Lawson M. McKenzie.

79 Sacks of U. S. Mail Lost on Belgian Liner

Loss of 79 sacks of United States mail aboard the Belgian freighter Alex Van Opstal was announced by the Postoffice Department yesterday. The ship struck a mine and sank in the North Sea September 15.

The department said the mail was consigned from New York to Antwerp, Ostend and Brussels, in Belgium, to Luxembourg, and to Matadi, Belgian Congo.

Only 6% Aliens On Refugee Liner, Hull Tells Senator

Secretary of State Cordell Hull cited statistics yesterday to disprove charges by Senator Robert Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, that large numbers of aliens are being brought to the United States in preference to American citizens stranded in European war zones.

Reynolds, who returned from a European trip yesterday, asserted that the Government "had fallen down miserably" on the job of repatriating the refugees.

Of the 1,747 passengers aboard the S. S. Washington, on which Reynolds returned, Hull said only 214, or less than 6 per cent, could be classified as "foreigners."

Hull said the passenger list of the Washington showed 1,533 United States citizens, 77 individuals on re-entry permits obtained before they left the United States; 23 using transit permits; 69 visitors and only 45 quota immigrants.

Polish Leaders Delayed in Plan To Go to France

Bucharest, Sept. 20 (AP).—Last-minute difficulties disrupted tonight the plans of President Moscicki, Foreign Minister Beck and other members of the fleeing Polish government to leave Rumania for France.

Marshal Smigly-Rydz, chief of Poland's scattered military forces, was interned and sent to enforced domicile at Craiova near the junction of the Rumanian-Yugoslav-Bulgarian frontiers.

Moscicki and his civilian officials were notified they must obtain permission from Yugoslavia and Italy to travel to France by train.

It was feared if they went by sea Russian warships patrolling the Black Sea might seize them.

All Czech and Polish civilians were ordered in a new decree law to leave Rumania within two weeks.

3,000 Polish Infantrymen Flee Through Carpathians to Safety in Hungary

Hungarians Take Sick To Hospitals

Refugee Train Reported Machine-Gunned By German Troops

By the Associated Press

Nagy Bereszna, Hungary, Sept. 20. More than 3,000 Polish infantrymen crossed the Uzsok Pass, in the Carpathian Mountains on the southeastern Polish border, to reach safety in Hungary today.

The new arrivals swelled the number of Polish troops and civilians taking refuge in Hungary to nearly 20,000.

The infantry brought wagon trains bearing many sick and wounded. They were escorted by Hungarian soldiers to Ungvar, 30 miles from the border, where schools were converted into hospitals.

The line of civilian and military refugees trudged through bitter cold over the windy, 3,000-foot high mountain pass, near the spot where Polish, Slovak and Hungarian borders meet.

Hungarians met the Polish refugees with warm food, clothing and money. Hungarian trains were sent to the pass and other border points.

Among the refugees was a group of children from 3 to 15 years old.

Typhoid Epidemic Reported

An epidemic of typhoid was reported to have broken out in Polish Galicia following destruction of sanitation and water supply systems by German air bombs.

Refugees arriving from many parts of Galicia were quarantined and special isolation hospitals set up by Hungarian authorities.

Late this afternoon a Polish train with 16 cars loaded with refugees arrived at Uzsok. The locomotive was driven by a soldier who said the engineer and fireman had been machine gunned by German armored cars which had sped along a road parallel to the train.

Many refugees were said to have been killed or wounded by the armored car fire, which threw the passengers into a panic. The armored cars were reported to have been chased away by Polish troops who halted in their flight to Hungary to repel the Germans.

A 12-year-old girl was taken to a hospital by physicians who said she lost her reason when her parents were killed in a bombing raid.

20,000 Civilians Reported Slain

A Polish captain who came here with his company yesterday committed suicide, officers said, when he was told by more recent arrivals that his wife had been killed in a bombing raid.

Polish officers and civilians estimated that "at least 20,000" civilians had been killed in air raids since the beginning of the war.

During the afternoon cannonading could be heard here and it was believed that Germans were attempting to cut off further retreat of Polish troops.

The massing of Russian troops along the Polish-Rumanian border cut the stream of refugees into Rumania, but thousands, finding their way barred on that border, poured into Hungary.

A Hungarian agency estimated 30,000 civilians and 10,000 soldiers had reached the Rumanian border town of Gernauti.

Poles who had passed through the Ukraine said Ukrainian uprisings had started as soon as Russian intervention was announced.

Talk Cost Lindbergh Status

Officials charged with formulation of the Nation's foreign and defense policies were opposed to his making the proposed speech, reported to have been the outgrowth of suggestions at a private dinner party here several weeks ago. None of his superiors was shown a copy of the address in advance, though in most Government departments it is customary for public speeches to be approved by superiors of the speaker before delivery.

No report has ever been made to the Army by Col. Lindbergh on his five months of survey work, it was said. Recently, his activities had been largely devoted to considering possible sites for a new research center for the National Advisory Commmittee on Aeronautics.

It appeared last night, incidentally, that reports that his address had been written by a former Government official were incorrect. Col. Lindbergh has told a close friend, it was said, that no one but himself saw the speech before it was delivered.

to have said that such a proposal would not win more than five votes in his 23-man Senate committee.

Vice President Garner reportedly said he always favored reliance on international law as a basis for dealings with other nations.

And from Col. Frank Knox, Vice Presidential candidate on the last Republican ticket, came the assertion that he was for repeal of neutrality laws, and return to the law of nations. Knox told the group he was opposed to the arms embargo, which the President also seeks to repeal, but indicated he would favor adoption of the cash-and-carry plan applied to all commodities.

Gov. Landon, it was learned, had very little to say at the conference. But previously and at a subsequent press conference, Landon said he believed there was strong sentiment in the country for extension of cash-and-carry sales to everything sold to belligerents. Landon withheld his views on repeal of the arms embargo.

No Agreement on Methods

The President received the group in his executive office. Seated to the left and rear of Mr. Roosevelt was Secretary of State Hull. In a semicircle of chairs before his desk sat Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Representative Mapes (Republican), of Michigan; Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina; Senator Pittman, Senate Majority Whip Minton, Col. Knox, Senate Minority Leader McNary, House Minority Leader Martin, former Gov. Landon. On an adjacent sofa sat Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont; Chairman Bloom, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and House Majority Leader Rayburn.

Although conferees made clear there was no agreement on methods, the conference proceeded smoothly without acrimonious flareups.

The President opened the discussion with an assertion that the war presented one of the most serious situations in history, further aggravated by Russia's entry into the conflict, one Democratic member said. He reportedly stressed the difficulties of maintaining peace if other belligerents are drawn in. And he was said to have emphasized his belief that America could not be considered neutral so long as the old rule that belligerents may buy from neutrals is impeded by an embargo.

Contraband Lists Cited as Hazard

He was said to have cited the ever-widening contraband lists of belligerents as a neutrality hazard, and stressed dangers to American neutrality from torpedoing of belligerent vessels carrying this country's Nationals. It was to safeguard against such hazards that his six-point neutrality program was offered to Congress last session, it was pointed out.

Mr. Roosevelt invited a full and friendly exchange of views and all present participated. No effort was made to reach an agreement on neutrality formulae, but the joint statement asserted there was "complete accord that in Congressional and executive action the whole subject and its many ramifications be dealt with in a wholly nonpartisan spirit."

The President was said to have indicated he would have nothing but neutrality legislation to submit to the Congress unless some new emergency developed. Views as to the length of the session varied from the President's hope for action within two or three weeks to the belief of Gov. Landon that Congress should remain continuously in session during the war. The Administration leaders present said they thought action on neutrality could be had in from 4 to 6 weeks.

New Authority Held Unneeded

One of the conferees said it was brought out that the President already has power to take effective neutrality steps without new statutory authority if the neutrality law is repealed, by regulating shipping and even by providing for transfer of title before shipment of goods to belligerents.

"We had a round table discussion of the whole neutrality matter in a very fine, nonpartisan spirit," commented Speaker Bankhead. "A very reassuring spirit prevailed. There will be a joint session tomorrow, and then I think we will adjourn until Monday. We (House members) have no program now and I don't think we will have one."

House Minority Leader Martin agreed with Landon's view that Congress should remain in session during the war. He said "the country expects it." Martin told reporters he thought it would be six weeks before the House receives the neutrality bill back from the Senate. He said he was maintaining "an open mind" on neutrality legislation, with the sole objective of "keeping the United States out of war."

Hull Reads Six Points

The Hull-Roosevelt neutrality points, on which action was delayed by the last Congress, besides repealing the arms embargo, would regulate American travel and ship movements in combat areas, provide for transfer of title before sale of goods to belligerents, continue restrictions on loans and credits to combat nations, regulate solicitation and collection of funds for belligerents, and continue the National Munitions Control Board.

The six points were read to the group by Secretary Hull during yesterday's conference, and apparently will form the basis of the opening discussion in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Saturday. They were passed in emasculated form last session by the House, which refused complete repeal of the arms embargo, and eliminated power for the President to create combat zones.

Yesterday Chairman Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said he was confident the House now has sufficient votes to repeal the arms embargo. Bloom said he polled 61 Democrats who last session voted against repeal. Of 38 who responded, he said only 6 indicated they had not changed their minds. He said only a switch of 21 votes would change the House record on the issue, and the poll indicated a switch of 32.

Capitol Installs Barricades, Goes on Near-Wartime Basis

Preparations to Protect Legislators; Extra Guards, Elaborate Secret Service House Wing Barred to All Without Passes

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Everything but air-raid warnings will protect Capitol Hill today when Congress convenes its special session. Extra precautions—almost on a war-time basis—will include barricades in and around the Capitol, augmented by police details, and elaborate secret service operations.

The general public will be excluded from the House wing of the Capitol, said Sergeant-at-arms Kenneth Romney, and only special press, radio and employes' passes will be recognized. Only a chosen few will be admitted to the House gallery—and they must have passes signed by members.

Metropolitan Police will send 175 men to help out and Romney said his own force of 150 men may be enlarged. Barricades in the corridors will bar entrance to the House side and guards will be placed at all entrances and exits to the building, with orders to permit no one to pass unless armed with proper credentials.

Workmen scurried about the halls yesterday carrying portable fences, and Veteran Doorkeeper Joe Sinnott bustled in and out of his office preparing final plans for issuance of passes.

In the House restaurant and along office corridors, members of Congress and Capitol employes shouted greetings.

"What are you doing here?" called a Midwestern Congressman to a New England colleague.

"I don't know," was his response, "but I intend to find out."

There was little talk of today's opening session, lamentations over shortened vacations being the major topic of conversation. Here and there, however, could be seen small knots of Senators and Representatives in apparent earnest discussion.

Members of the House may have to run their own errands during early days of the extra meeting unless Doorkeeper Sinnott solves his acute page-boy problem. The special call found the youngsters scattered from Maine to California. A total of 47 pages and 36 doorkeepers were called back.

All 20 pages in the Senate, however, have reported, and the upper House won't lack for service. South Trimble, clerk of the House, said he summoned 40 employes from vacation and all are on hand.

Several hundred other Capitol workers hurred back. The sentiment of all was expressed by one blue-eyed stenographer:

"Why couldn't they hold off this war stuff until I got a good sun tan?"

Confer Later With Garner

Following the White House conference, Senate conferees of both parties and House Majority Leader Rayburn returned with Vice President Garner for an informal discussion in Garner's office.

Landon returned to his hotel, where for the second time he received reporters and issued a statement declaring America should "arm, forthwith."

"I think we should do everything possible to strengthen our national defense, not only our Navy but the Army," said Landon. "This, of course, is not a reproductive investment but we have been spending billions of dollars that have not been reproductive and we do not have an adequate defense to show for it.

"In other words, we should fear God and keep our powder dry."

Earlier in the day, Landon told reporters he wished to hear the President's views before taking a stand on the arms embargo. He had referred to strong sentiment for extending the cash-and-carry method of sales to everything shipped to belligerents. And he had urged a continuous session of Congress during the war because "there is more confidence in the united judgment of the representatives than in any one man's opinion."

Views Unchanged

In his later statement, Landon said "nothing took place this afternoon to change my views."

"Some weeks ago in an interview I said that I never had favored the arms embargo section of the neutrality act," he said. "Since that time the European war has occurred.

"This makes a changed situation, the effect of which must be exhaustively considered and debated along with the other features of the act by Congress.

"The paramount objective, of course, on which I think we all agree is that we must keep the country out of war."

Nazis Say Biddle Was Assigned to Report Outrages

Berlin, Sept. 20 (INS).—Official German quarters tonight charged that Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., American ambassador to Poland has been "assigned to compose and forward a report to Washington alleging open town bombardments with resultant killings to women and children and other wanton destruction by German forces in Poland."

These high-placed German circles declared that the "purpose of Biddle's activity on the eve of the opening of Congress is obvious."

Balkans Believed in Position to Break Nazis' Economic Strangle Hold

Ready to Play Powers Against Each Other

Italy Bids for Trade As Russia Re-enters Peninsula Affairs

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Sept. 20.—The six little nations of southeastern Europe were said in diplomatic circles today to be in a position now to play Italy, Germany and Soviet Russia against each other in Balkan affairs.

The reasons diplomats gave for this shift from German sway were an Italian bid for an increased share of Balkan trade while Germany is preoccupied with the war, and the apparent renewal of Russian interest in Balkan affairs after a lapse of 25 years.

Heretofore, they said, the southeastern European nations—Yugoslavia, Greece, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Turkey—had little with which to oppose German ideas that the Balkans were part of Germany's economic living space. Italian trade efforts were said to have countered these ideas somewhat, and Russian moves gave this idea a third interested party to use in political jockeying.

Turkey Seeks Friendship

The Turkish government announced at Ankara today that Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu would leave for Moscow Wednesday for friendship talks at the Kremlin. There were diplomatic reports that he also would seek better relations between Rumania and Russia in order to offset Nazi influence in Bucharest.

Although most southeastern nations had opposed the Russian regime bitterly, reports that Moscow again would play an active part in Balkan affairs were hailed by them as a chance to break Germany's economic strangle hold in this part of Europe.

Besides the Ankara reports, diplomatic circles based their assumption of renewed Russian interest in the southeastern nations on reports of negotiations at Belgrade for Yugoslav recognition of the Soviet government and a nonaggression pact with Moscow.

Russia, Bulgaria at Peace

There were, in addition, reports of negotiations on a renewal of close relations between Russia and Bulgaria.

A press report from Belgrade said that "the new role of Soviet Russia changes vastly the position of the Balkans. From the viewpoint of the balance of power the development is not without its advantages . . . it will have a counterbalancing effect."

Bulgaria Hopeful

Bulgarian diplomatic circles thought that Soviet moves would turn the stream of war away from southeastern Europe.

Hungarian diplomats were said to be looking with considerable concern on reported Russian re-entry into the Balkan picture, especially in view of the newly created Russian-Hungarian border.

In greatest fear of new moves, diplomats said, was Rumania, which gained the largest amount of territory of any nation after the World War—part of it from Russia and part from Bulgaria. The reported Russian pledge to help Bulgaria gain back the Dobruja region of Rumania has caused uneasiness in Bucharest government circles.

Black Sea Pact Seen

Ankara, Sept. 20 (AP).—Reliable reports tonight said resurrection of Soviet Russia's old diplomatic project for a Black Sea pact would be discussed by the Turkish foreign minister on his forthcoming visit to Moscow.

It was reported that Russia was anxious to get Rumania as well as Bulgaria and Turkey to join in barring all other influences from the Black Sea.

A Turkish communique reported progress in talks with Britain and France on economic accords to supplement mutual aid pacts with them. It was pointed out Turkey felt there was nothing incongruous about her strengthening her friendship with Britain and France and at the same time bolstering her relations with Russia in the hope of bringing about some kind of accord between them.

paign against submarines during the first two weeks of the war compared "most favorably" with World War figures.

Authorities pointed out Prime Minister Chamberlain's report meant an average of three or more weekly, against the World War average at the height of submarine warfare of one to one and a half.

First Lord of the Admiralty Churchill told Commons that 1,202 instead of 1,260 were aboard the torpedoed Courageous, reducing the total missing to 515 instead of 578.

The ministry estimated Germans had 30 submarines of 500 tons or more ready for the sea when war started.

42 Surface Ships Lost

Germany has kept the size of her U-boat fleet secret, but Jane's "Fighting Ships," authoritative British naval annual, listed in its 1938 edition 71 German submersibles built or nearing completion. There may have been other additions this year. Germany's shipbuilding industry was believed geared to provide submarine replacements rapidly.

Since the war at sea began at least 42 surface vessels have been lost, 26 of them British, including the aircraft carrier Courageous and the big liner Athenia, Germany 8, the Netherlands 2, and France, Belgium, Greece, Finland and Norway 1 each. One lost ship was unidentified.

Liverpool, England, Sept. 20 (AP). Survivors from the 4,060-ton Furness cargo steamer Aviemore reported today the vessel was sunk by a submarine last week. Eleven survivors of the crew of 40 were landed here Monday.

nearest to your Fuehrer's heart."

Hitler is said to have told Germans that his salary as chancellor is donated to party charity. Investigators feel that, in view of the revenues which his position has brought him, he could well afford to do this.

Loan Statement Withdrawn

Meanwhile, the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday granted the German government permission to withdraw a registration statement covering a proposed $73,000,000 issue of 3 per cent 50-year bonds to be distributed to American holders of German bonds in lieu of interest withheld from them.

The commission has arranged for a hearing on "deficiencies" in Nazi financial figures in the registration statement. But, in view of the request to withdraw the statement, the hearing was canceled.

The SEC had planned to issue a statement. Instead, it granted the permission to withdraw without comment.

Goebbels Has Four Millions

By International News Service

London, Sept. 20.—Detailed documentary evidence that seven of the highest Nazi leaders beneath Adolf Hitler have prepared for war or revolution at home by depositing large fortunes abroad and by taking out huge foreign insurance policies was revealed today by representatives of one of the oldest and most famous institutions of its kind in the world.

Two years of investigation in almost every country on earth and among a score of banking institutions has established that Marshal Goering, Rudolf Hess, Paul Joseph Goebbels, Joachim von Ribbentrop, Robert Ley, Heinrich Himmler and Julius Streicher all have deposited in neutral countries cash investments and insurance totaling $34,873,500.

It may be recalled that according to Nazi law it is a penitentiary or death penalty offense for any German citizen to possess undeclared foreign currency or other assets abroad.

The seven Nazis named include Hitler's own choice for his successor—Goering—and for Goering's successor, Hess, deputy leader of the Nazi Party, as well as Himmler, head of the secret police; Ley, chief of the labor front, and Propaganda Minister Goebbels, who is richest in foreign cash holdings, owning over $4,500,000 in currency.

South American, Japanese, Luxembourg, Swiss, Dutch, Egyptian, Estonian, Latvian and Finnish banks are depositories for the Nazi fortunes and considerable sums are held in the United States by Nazi friends and German shipping companies.

All deposits are made in the names of agents. In the list which follows, all figures unless otherwise specified are in United States dollars.

List of Holdings

Goering:

Total cash and insurance abroad, $7,507,000, of which $3,025,000 are insurance on his own life and $907,500 on the life of his wife, Emmy.

He has $3,575,000 in cash held through four agencies.

No. 1 holds $1,225,000 in a Sao Paulo, Brazil, bank.

Nos. 2 and 3 are holding with a [illegible] shipping firm in New York $750,000 worth of American bonds, [illegible] Pennsylvania Railroad, Illinois Central, Cities Service and Bethlehem Steel.

Agent No. 4 holds $1,000,000 worth of Swedish kroner, Danish crowns, Dutch guilders and Belgian francs in the Banco di Sicilia at Trieste and the A. B. Svenska Handelsbanken, at Malmo, Sweden.

At the Sumitomo Bank, Ltd., of San Francisco, bearer bonds, chiefly Montecatini and Royal Dutch, as well as certain South American securities totaling $600,000, are on deposit. One safe deposit is in Zurich, and another in the safe of a German importing firm in Chicago, and contains an additional deposit of $450,000.

$2,245,000 in Cash

Hess:

Owns total cash and insurance of $4,007,500, of which $1,482,500 are on his own life and $380,00 on his wife's life. He has $2,245,000 in cash, mostly in Swiss and Dutch currency, held through three agents and four banks in Sao Paulo and Basle.

Goebbels:

A total of $8,990,000, of which $1,865,000 is insurance on his own life and $2,490,000 on his wife's life. He has $4,630,000 in cash held through three agents and three banks in safe deposit boxes in Buenos Aires, Luxembourg and Osaka, Japan.

Von Ribbentrop:

He has the largest total of $9,740,000, of which $5,665,000 is insurance on himself, $720,000 on his wife, $190,000 on his son.

He has $3,165,000 in cash, held through three agents in the Amsterdamsch Bank of Haarlem, the N. V. Hollandsche Buitenland Bank at The Hague, and the Banca Della Swizzera Italiana at Zurich.

Ley in South America

Ley:

A total of $1,891,000, of which $575,000 is insurance on himself, $266,000 insurance on his wife and $105,000 in cash and investments. Four agents hold for Ley in Estonian and Latvian banks $715,000 in cash, while the rest is invested in South American estates.

Himmler:

A total of $2,637,500, of which $2,000,000 in cash is deposited with German friends in South America, the Near East at Alexandria and Symrna, and in Finland.

Streicher:

A modest 10,000,000 marks ($4,000,000) in insurance.

In each case mentioned, the full names and complete identification of the agents involved are contained in the information disclosed.

A detailed description of the precise form of each deposit and insurance policy is also provided, but for the sake of space these details are omitted here.

There is no doubt but that the whole report constitutes an unparalleled piece of investigation, involving not only incredible industry and travel all over the globe, but intimate entacts with banking institutions which could only be possessed by a central organization with world-wide connections such as conducted this piece of international political research.

It carries a conviction that will be difficult to shake.

Sound Advice

Mayor LaGuardia's advice to municipal officials to refrain from comment on foreign affairs and avoid statements that nations at war might misconstrue is eminently wise. Considering the source of this sage advice, it is particularly impressive. For the fiery and fearless Mayor of New York City is not one to pull his punches.

In 1937, Mr. LaGuardia himself caused the Department of State acute embarrassment by referring to Hitler as a "brown-shirted fanatic who is menacing the peace of the world." Despite German protests, the mayor gave no sign of regretting his impetuous outburst. But the world was then in a state of comparative peace.

Now the situation has greatly changed. Vigorous and violent denunciation of the leaders of any country involved in the European war is calculated to inflame public opinion and create dangerous discord at home. Abroad, as Mayor LaGuardia says, such plain speaking is subject to misconstruction when indulged in by our public officials. For them to refrain from comment under present conditions is not an abrogation of the right of free speech and free expression of opinion. It is, on the contrary, merely deference to good order in the management of our own affairs.

Under our system of government the Department of State, operating directly under the President, is solely responsible for the conduct of foreign relations. In time of war it is not only advisable but imperative for State and local officials to give heed to that fact.

A Word To Industry

Over the radio this week Howard Coonley, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said: "As manufacturers we recognize it to be our responsibility and moral obligation to conduct our businesses so that the prices of the products we produce and sell are related equitably to production costs. We pledge our energetic support to this policy."

Such a public-spirited declaration of intention is most encouraging, for leaders of industry can do much by preachment and practice to curb profiteering tendencies at this critical juncture.

Profiteering is not merely antisocial. It is economically short-sighted. In times of peace, it checks buying and may result in the loss of long-time normal business profits for the sake of ephemeral gains. In times of war, or emergencies caused by war, price boosting is likely to lead to imposition of official price-control measures seriously hampering to business initiative and often destructive or normal profits as well. Of course, Mr. Coonley's crusade against profiteering does not imply opposition to any and all price increases. Indeed, in periods of rapidly expanding business and rising demands, production costs and prices necessarily rise—sometimes sharply—as the president of the N. A. M. is careful to note.

Mr. Coonley made another constructive contribution in emphasizing the fact that the long-run interests of industry lie in the maintenance of peace. "If yesterday industry was the only source of prosperity and re-employment," he told his radio audience, "today it is as well the keystone of preparedness and peace." That thought should have a sobering effect upon those who delude themselves into believing that the United States would benefit materially by involvement in a major war.

Wars, however righteous or unavoidable they may seem, are a tremendous destructive force, from which few individuals emerge richer. Furthermore, modern wars carry a special danger to industry because they speed up the pronounced movement toward governmental encroachment upon the field of private enterprise. Thus, it is generally assumed that if this country were to be drawn into the European conflict, a fairly complete dictatorship over industry would be established by the Government. And even if the system of production for private profit survived in a restricted area, it is certain that a large part of the profits would be recaptured for Government use through various kinds of extraordinary taxes.

So, even if Mr. Coonley's judicious appeal to his associates failed to arouse a feeling of civic responsibility in all cases, it ought to evoke an affirmative response on grounds of self-interest from every businessman.

As Congress Meets

It would seem unnecessary to emphasize that the session of Congress which convenes today is one of the most important, if not the most important, of any in the long history of that legislative body. And it would seem superfluous, if not impertinent, to remind the lawmakers of this fact as the session convenes.

The reminder is in order, however, for the somewhat paradoxical reason that the country is so deeply stirred on the issue of neutrality legislation. And when a democracy is sharply divided on a matter of vital current importance that fact is reflected in tremendous pressure on its representatives. It is both a strength and a weakness of democracy that this is so.

All of us can see that a country is strong when its laws are designed to forward the popular will. And for that reason it is not so easy to recognize danger in the process of taking the popular will as the basis of legislation. Yet danger is present in that process, and it is one of the first responsibilities of an elected representative to recognize it.

The problem roots in the fact that a popular desire is one thing, while legislation which can be counted upon to achieve that desire is quite another. Frequently in our history the pitfalls lying between the will and the way in this respect have been demonstrated. Prohibition is an illustration which nearly everyone recalls.

An almost universal desire for national sobriety lay behind the prohibition law. But legislation on the subject resulted in more vicious drinking than the country had ever before experienced. The law would not work and had to be repealed.

It is the high and inescapable responsibility of the legislator to translate the popular will into effective and reliable legislation, with emphasis on the adjectives. The first duty of the Congress as a whole is to write workable laws. If it fails in this duty it betrays the democratic principle. And if it should fail often and seriously it would destroy the democratic form of government.

Since the earliest days of the Republic the American people have shown full appreciation of the legislator's difficult role. They have shown it by electing, by and large, a superior body of men to represent them.

If the function of a Congressman were merely to be representative of the emotions of his constituency, any ignoramus, able to discern a current of popular opinion, would be an appropriate spokesman. But the proportion of morons in Congress has always been small because the electorate, with real discrimination, has throughout seen the importance of having as its representatives men who can reason from cause to effect, who can appreciate the enormous difference between popular desires and laws which will satisfy those desires.

At the present time there is an all but unanimous will to keep the United States at peace. But there is passionate division of opinion as to how this end can best be accomplished. Devotees of the different viewpoints are already exercising every conceivable pressure to secure Congressional advocacy of their respective brands of neutrality. It is imperative that Congress should resist these pressures and think for itself.

Congress today must start its vital task with a clear realization that desire for peace will not of itself secure peace. Indeed, under the philosophy of force now dominant, the stronger the will for peace the greater the likelihood of war. China, Ethiopia and the vanishing states of central Europe all bear witness to this tragic truth. The heartfelt longing for peace, the profound anxiety to keep out of international trouble, has not saved inoffensive peoples in Asia, Africa and Europe from destruction. There is no reason to suppose that pacifist sentiment alone would in the long run be any more effective in America.

There is, perhaps, no immediate threat to vital American interests. But that fact also makes it the more imperative for Congress to view the problem before it from a long-range standpoint. It must be sorrowfully admitted that our present neutrality policy has served to promote war. By giving notice that this great Nation draws no distinction between an aggressor and its victim we have tacitly encouraged those who regard war as a desirable instrument of national policy. But we have not so far encouraged direct aggression against ourselves. Congress must be very careful that, inadvertently and with the highest of motives, it does not do so.

In the Congress now assembled it must always be remembered that while people know what they want they frequently have very little knowledge of how to achieve their desires. The Nation wanted sobriety and got prohibition. It wanted security for the aged and very nearly got the Townsend plan. It wants peace. There is always the chance that we shall get war as a result of legislation hopefully labeled as neutrality.

To insure that this does not happen is the tremendous responsibility of the present Congress. The time has come for its members to disregard propaganda, whether for or against the present law. The time has come for a relative Congressional indifference to letters, telegrams, speeches, demonstrations, broadcasts and also newspaper editorials, whether pro or con, as regards the present issue. The one duty of this Congress now, with all the evidence before it, is to think for itself on the outstanding issue of how best to secure—really to secure—the peace of the United States.

If Congress now acts as the thoughtful and unemotional judgment of its members dictates, then our democracy will be well served. And, by the same token, we shall have strengthened the faith of our people in traditions and institutions, which, in this day of battle, cannot be defended by emotionalism, by wishful thinking, or by indifference to trends which Hitler has at least made obvious.

Railway Preparedness

During the past two months a substantial gain in general business has been reflected in a decided improvement in railroad traffic. With war in Europe speeding up the tempo of domestic business recovery, the roads may reasonably anticipate an increasing demand upon their facilities.

In a formal statement issued by the Association of American Railroads, following a specially called meeting, it is announced that a policy of putting into repair cars and engines to take care of increasing traffic has been agreed upon. "As they did in 1923," this says, "railroads have determined to spend money they have not earned in order that they may meet a public need, on the faith that there will be hereafter a square deal in public transportation policies."

Herein lies a timely reminder that improving business alone will not solve the problems of the roads, although it will relieve the financial pressure upon them. The failure of Congress at the last session to pass any important general remedial legislation on behalf of the railways makes the reference to a hoped-for "square deal" particularly pertinent. By preparing for possible future emergencies, the roads are at the same time trying to demonstrate to Congress their ability to function effectively under private ownership and operation, despite the handicaps of the existing defective regulatory laws.

Self-preservation makes it imperative to guard against any repetition of the congestion that resulted in the taking over of railroad operations by the Government after this country entered the World War. Despite the reduction in the number of freight cars and engines that has occurred in recent years, the railroad managements are confident that the improved efficiency and greater capacity of equipment will render their task feasible.

To those who complain of lack of progress in railroad transportation some figures of performance cited in the A. A. R. statement may come as a revelation. In 1929, we are told, "the railroads handled 19 per cent more business than in 1918, with no increase in the number of cars. Further increases in operating efficiency make it possible now to handle a 1929 business with 350,000 fewer cars than were used in that year, or a 1918 tonnage with 600,000 fewer cars than were required then."

In face of that record, due to large investments made in the post-war period, the promise that the railroads are, and will be, ready to meet any national emergency is reassuring. It is also encouraging that the very substantial outlays contemplated for repair purposes will result in increased employment in railroad shops, increased orders for outside business, and increased traffic for the roads themselves. Purchases of new equipment will provide an additional business stimulus, the effect of which will be widespread.

Land And Livestock

When history repeats itself it is usually with some slight variation.

Fifty-odd years ago the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, noted alike for his eyeglasses, his orchid and his brilliant abilities, but, nevertheless, merely Brummagen Joe to his political foes, pleaded the economic necessity, particularly in time of war, of every family in Great Britain being the possessor of "three acres and a cow."

If his shade is not too busily engaged in watching his son's efforts to conduct with efficiency and eventual success the present war, it may find a little sardonic amusement in the advertised "war special" of a Houston, Tex., real estate dealer. In view of high prices certain to result from a prolonged European war, which the dealer says he expects, and the consequent desire of thrifty citizens to raise their own food, he is prepared to give every purchaser of a five-acre tract on a certain day a full-sized mule to enable him to work it.

It seems a generous, if pessimistic, offer, but even at that it may be that the purchaser will have some kick coming.

"It took nature six million years to make the man of today," declares a biologist. And woman thinks she can make him over in six months.

Most of us need to learn that another person may belong to a different church, sex, class, race or nation, and even vote a different political ticket, and still be human.

Dr. Moley says it was he who originated the term, "the forgotten man." He probably had no idea at the time that this label later would get stuck on him.

Instead of trying to learn to fly like an eagle or to sing like a canary, the hen attends strictly to the business for which nature fitted her.

They Took It On The Nose

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a contestant in the recent sailing races sponsored by the President's Cup Regatta committee I have read with special interest your editorial of September 19, "The Regatta." The boost for the grand game of small yacht racing is greatly appreciated. But I cannot subscribe to your views that " . . . Probably no other large city can offer to its sailors a surface . . . as free from pollution . . . as is the Potomac River."

You were probably too busy to take an actual part in the best sailing event ever held here, for had you come out even as far as Southwest Washington you would have craved for a gas mask or an abundant supply of attar of roses.

I am informed that due to an accidental break in the main sewer leading to the Sewage Disposal Plant below Anacostia raw sewage has for some time been diverted into the Anacostia River immediately in the vicinity of the race course.

As a result the visiting yachtsmen were treated to a stench never before experienced by them in any large city in this country. That the Nation's Capital can stand by and let this continue is beyond comprehension.

It is claimed that funds are not available to repair the broken sewer. May I suggest that the Red Cross be appealed to for an advance of funds so generously supplied by this organization to stricken communities.

Ask President Roosevelt why he did not tarry to view the races. His olfactory senses are by chance less strong than those of the hardy sailors who had to take it on the nose in three races.

"Potential Judges"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Potential Judges," published in The Post of September 19 is highly commendable. The outstanding attorneys you mentioned would undoubtedly make capable judges. However, do you not think it is time that the President appoint a colored man to the Federal bench?

Washington, the Capital of the greatest democratic and Christian Nation in the world, would be a fine place to make such an appointment. No valid reason can be advanced against the appointment of a capable Negro to our District Court. In the name of democracy and Christianity why not advocate such an appointment? By training, experience, and integrity, the Negro lawyer is qualified for, and entitled to, representation on the Federal bench and it is not necessary "to look further than the District bar in filling this position."

We have a number of outstanding attorneys, among whom are Judge Armond W. Scott, George E. C. Hayes, James M. Nabrit, jr., Leon Ransom, George A. Parker, Augustus W. Gray, James A. Cobb, William H. Hastie, and Charles H. Houston. All of these and many more would make capable, conscientious, and courageous judges.

The appointment of any one of these men would help in the realization of what Mr. Justice Cardozo spoke about in his "The Growth of the Law," when he said, "what we are seeking is not merely the justice that one receives when his rights and duties are determined by the law as it is, what we are seeking is the justice to which law in its making should conform."

"Cash And Carry"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To keep us out of war, we must go back to "cash and carry."

Supplies will decide the war. If we fail to furnish supplies to England and France, the war will be prolonged.

The longer the war lasts, the greater the danger of our going in. "Cash and carry" in no way involves us—it will help shorten the war and keep us out of it.

"Events Will Prove"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Augur's article on the Soviet Union in The Post of September 15 is a typical example of the propaganda our President has warned us against.

The Soviet press prints an editorial discussing the fact that all the peoples of Poland are not behind the present Polish government, and attributes the apparent collapse of the Polish army in part to this fact. Can anyone deny the truth that the Polish government has been semi-fascist with oppressed minorities? Out of this analysis of the development of the war in Poland, Augur develops the story that Russia is going to grab a slice of Poland, or as he states, settle old grudges.

Finally, the events will prove (providing we get the real facts) that while the Soviet Union will defend every inch of her soil, she has no designs on the territory of any of the bordering countries. In the entire existence of the Soviet Union, it has proven to the world that its desire is for peace with all the neighboring countries, and it was in this light that the Soviet-German pact was signed. It made every effort to use its influence on the side of the democracies, and if the Chamberlains and Daladiers have shoved her aside, as Lloyd George said, they will have to be dealt with by the people of France and England.

Maritime Union's Position

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is in reference to the editorial in The Post of September 18, "An Untimely Strike."

As legislative representative of the National Maritime Union, the organization mentioned in the editorial, I would esteem it further proof of your fairness toward organized labor if you will please publish this letter.

I am, of course, very happy to note your sympathetic understanding with the demands of not only the members of the National Maritime Union but all organized American seamen who still think that they should have a share from the greatly raised war profits of the shipowners who up to now seem to be backed in their refusal to do so by maritime labor's most persistent enemy—the United States Maritime Commission.

I would like to point out, in spite of statements to the contrary, that the officials of the National Maritime Union have at no time refused to cooperate with any sensible proposal. We have, in fact, waived the war risk insurance asked for until the Congress meets and sets on the bill known as H.R.6972, which deals with the situation. It is also imperative to point out that the N. M. U. has also dropped their original demands for a flat sum of $250.00 to $150.00 for any seaman entering the war zone.

Negotiations between the N. M. U and the shipowners have been in progress since September 1 and not only these last few days as has been stated.

The offer made by President Curran of the N. M. U. to man with payless crews any vessel that the Government wished to send to Europe to repatriate all American nationals still stands. We also stand by our statement that if patriotism comes before war profits, let the operators show the same desire to cooperate by allotting all available space on such vessels by not carrying cargo and bringing our stranded nationals home with free passage.

I reiterate the position taken by President Curran that we stand at all times for the welfare of our Nation and the continuance of patriotic duty, but not with a shipowners' bludgeon held in the hands of Government stooges to force the American seamen into the days of Capt. Bligh. STEPHEN W. HARVEY.
Washington, Sept. 18.

Worse Than War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nearly every American citizen hates war and hopes that our own country can stay out. This sentiment is shared equally by the President of the United States and those in the humblest walks of life.

Notwithstanding, there are things which we hate and fear worse than war or even death itself.

We fear tyranny, dictatorship, and the loss of those liberties for which our forefathers paid so dearly. We shall not surrender our freedom or national dignity, war or no war.

We must defend our sacred heritage at all costs. No dictator shall ever rule over us or bully us around. We have a mind and soul to be free.

The present international situation involves some very deep and serious moral questions and on moral questions we cannot be neutral. For one, I am not neutral. I am against dictatorship and for democracy at all times.

The present stupid neutrality law, which is really not neutral, should be repealed. We want the principles of international right and decency restored. We want the senseless doctrine of race superiority banished forever.

Civilization must be decent to survive. When treaties become "mere scraps of paper" and when civilization means murder, plunder, and domination by brute force, then democracy in America will last about as long as the proverbial snowball in Hades.

America must be brave and fearless. We have billions for defense, but not one penny for the appeasement of dictators.

Without courage there can be no truth and without truth there can be no other virtue. Without virtue there can be no freedom.

Let us have peace, if possible; but let that peace rest upon a respectable code of morals and ethics. L. C. FARRAR.

Spreading Fires

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To Senators Shipstead, Lundeen, Borah, Frazier, Nye, et al., I, too, am against war. The other one cost me a son.

I am also opposed to fires—especially when they endanger my own house. Suppose I'm awakened in the night and see a house across the street in flames. But its not my house, so I go to sleep again.

In a little while I'm re-awakened. I look out and see two houses afire. But they're not mine so I cover up my head . . . Then I'm awakened once more—to discover a house in my block is in flames . . . then again to see the house next to mine—then the house on the other side of mine is going up in smoke.

Congressmen may do as they like about it, but I'd at least turn the garden hose on my roof. I might even loan a ladder to a neighbor. I'd pounce upon any firebrand that fell in my alley. I'd wet down the leaves in my back yard.

Indeed, I think I'd get my gun and start looking for the maniac who was setting all those fires.

The Post Impressionist

Getting Gertie's Goya

IT IS ALL WRONG, I have definitely concluded, to go shopping with an open mind. I used to do it. One winter I went Empress Eugenie, with a sweeping plume, and the following fall I was a gaucho, chin strap and all. When fashion said "break into a purple rage," I broke. Last spring I even bought one of those hats. That was the same spring men became fugitives from pink veiling.

So I decided the other day, as I went up on the escalator, that I would not be talked into anything. I would state briefly, concisely, and to the point what I wanted and none of this shillily-shallying. I would not be coerced into classics nor persuaded into that new plum. Nobody was going to get one of those Meg-Jo-Beth-and-Amy bustles on me. And I would fight like a calf at branding time before I'd let a clerk corral me into a corset.

Thus I arrived in the misses' ready-to-wear department as grim and determined as a Chinese suicide squadron. The beginning boded well. My saleswoman was one of those plump, motherly arrangements, fairly exuding practicality. She thought the new styles were a bit extreme, too, even if she did say so, as she shouldn't. I beamed inwardly as she waddled off to look for models which would meet my stated requirements of something chic, yet sensible. Little did I dream, as the confession magazines say, what was coming . . .

In a few minutes my saleswoman returned. She was so glad, she said cheerfully, that they happened to have plenty of peasant dresses in stock.

Now was the time, I decided, to put my foot down. "I definitely do not want one of those peasant things," I said sweetly but firmly. "I have been a peasant all summer. In fact, my husband said to me only yesterday that . . ."

"Oh, but surely," interrupted the stout edition of "Whistler's Mother," "you don't listen to your husband when it comes to clothes. Men, even if I do say so, as I shouldn't, never want their wives to look, well, you know . . ."

I felt myself weakening. Not that I haven't all the will power in the world if I choose to exert it. But, after all, I had noticed that if it were a choice between going to see ZaSu Pitts and Hedy Lamarr that my husband always . . . oh, well, that's neither here nor there.

The triple mirror showed a wasp-waisted, full-skirted, white-guimped figure unlike any peasant I ever saw. It was apparently copied from the dress of some unknown peasant tribe that was doing all right by itself. The saleswoman saw the question in my eyes.

"The little number you have on, Moddom, is called 'Hedy at the Troc.'"

I decided against it, but by that time I was right in the swing of things. It wasn't that I aspired to be anything but what I am—a suburban wife with two pots of ivy to tend—but I think a woman owes it to her husband to look as if she had other things on her mind besides ivy. The battle was over. Before I had drawn my last gasp, my opponent had called in the corset saleswoman and they were giving me the works. Now I realize that the Civil War was only the least of Scarlett's troubles.

Over my head was slipped a rustling garment which, my tormentor purred, would give me a Velasquez air. It was unbelievably full, practically shapeless, and nipped in at the waist. It looked more like Early Ku Klux to me. Besides, it suddenly occurred to me, what would my fellow straphangers on the 5:30 think when a Spanish Infanta suddenly sailed down the aisle. It was all too obvious that Senor Velasquez did not have the southbound in mind when he was at work.

Gradually it narrowed down to this—did Moddom wish to look like a Degas dancer, an El Greco fascinator, or a Black Knight? Frankly, Moddom herself didn't know. The chief advantage of the Degas number was that it concealed the indisputable fact that Moddom is no Marlene Dietrich. Unfortunately, however, the ballet length skirt on me suggested a Roxette rather than a Degas.

I am compelled to say that El Greco didn't do much for me. Naturally a white ruff next to the face is becoming to anyone. But I do think the Greco was overdoing it a bit when he had the ruff come up over the mouth and nose. I'm sure there must be some way of overcoming this little obstacle, but I knew I'd never have the time and patience to figure it out. So that left only the Black Knight effect. Being a plain woman, married to a plain man, I was a little dubious of this at first. But the saleswoman assured me that it was extremely practical and very warm. So is a radiator, but I wouldn't include one in my fall wardrobe.

I suppose that describing the details of that Black Knight costume means the same to me that other people's operations do to them. Now that the worst is over and the agony has subsided, it is relaxing to talk about it all.

As nearly as I can come to it, the ensemble was a sort of cross between a Shrine parade and Hollywood's idea of the Mad Monk. It was voluminous. In the back, the folds fell I know not where. A wide girdle crossed itself in front, went around my waist, changed its mind and came back where it started from. The sleeves were long and large enough to conceal an electric toaster, a small waffle iron and a couple of knick-knacks. Around my shoulders fell a black mesh veil that had crept up from behind. With a snood in the back and a chin-guard in front, I felt like the beekeeper's daughter. I shall never forget when that child in the store caught sight of me, screamed in terror and ran like mad.

I shudder to think of the consequences if I should be invited anywhere, for I haven't a thing to wear. But I simply can't see myself whipping up a batch of biscuits in Paquin's mummy dress or peeling the potatoes in something inspired by Goya. Anyway, not until I get used to this bustle.

Flare-up In Belfast

THE HUMAN RACE day by day becomes more remindful of the wrestler who, in an enormous confusion of moist and slippery meat, clamped a toe hold on a foot which happened into his grasp and, to the tune of his own agonized whinnies, continued to twist until he broke his own ankle.

Thus the Irish Echo of New York reports that on a recent evening in Belfast rebels against the "foul oppressor" in Buckingham Palace expressed their sympathy with the enemies of the British Empire by converting an air-raid blackout into a fiasco of bonfires and rockets. They filled old motor tires with paper soaked in gasoline, hung them on the crossarms of the blacked-out street lamps and set them afire in a gesture of sympathy for any Nazi bomber who might have happened that way.

Irish Rebels Place Selves On Hitler's Side

THE GRIEVANCES of the Catholic, or Free State, Irish against the British Empire are famous the world over, and any attempt to outlaw them on the ground of antiquity can be destroyed by citations from the record of the Black and Tans, as brutal a crew as ever dragged a Jew from his family midst in Germany and beat him to death with bats.

It seems impossible that the spying of the Gestapo in Czecho-Slovakia or Poland was any more treacherous or the cruelty of those terrorists any more vile than that of his late Majesty's riff-raff in the days after the war to safeguard minorities.

Yet, in their efforts to sabotage the British war against Hitler, such Irish rebel spirits unavoidably, if reluctantly, place themselves on the side of another tyrant who is at least equally fiendish in his oppression of proud, honorable peoples who are, largely co-religionists of the Irish.

It were juvenile indeed to say that the British in this present war are fighting to avenge Hitler's crimes against the Catholic Bohemians and Poles, but at least they are fighting the man and the system. And if Irish opposition through sabotage and spying against British shipping and the fleet should finally turn out to be exactly the factor which defeated the British and French, then Ireland would win her last degree of freedom at the expense of two of the small but equally decent religious and long-suffering peoples not very far away.

A Phony Import From Germany

NEVERTHELESS, the opportune time to kick an oppressor is when he is wholly engaged in fighting someone his own size or bigger, and even though the disorders of the Irish rebels be unofficial, the perpetrators command the same admiration and benevolence that one gives to rebellious Czechs and Poles.

It would be inconsistent to hope that Hitler's victims will always and constantly raise hell, kill his spies and bomb his governing agents in their beds and withhold indorsement of similar conduct by persons similarly placed in Ireland.

Yet such is the sentiment of the American people, or at least of a government having a mandate from them, that the main and incidental war aims of the British are heartily approved and action hostile to them is not. Therein we find ourselves no more consistent than these Irish who lift up the Blackout in Belfast to help the Nazi oppressors lick the British oppressors.

Not only these Irish, who seem to be an incorrigible minority, but a number of Americans, including many of Irish ancestry, find themselves currently engaged in anti-Semitism here. This movement is an import from Germany and is distinctly ersatz, or phony, but some of those engaged in it, even members of the Catholic Church, claim to believe that the Jew is Christianity's enemy.

Hitler Is Noted As Anti-Christian

IN BAITING their Jewish neighbors, however, they collaborated with Hitler, who then suddenly dropped anti-Semitism and joined a political, economic and military offensive alliance with Soviet Russia which Hitler once denounced as a Jewish-Bolshevki state but which, nevertheless, strangely, always refused to accept Jewish refugees from Germany.

Hitler is anti-Christian himself, having long ago created a special god, a caricature of Christ, who acknowledged the Nazis as his chosen people and excluded from his love, or even his tolerance, all persons not of German blood.

Now, those who would still persecute Jews as infidel Bolsheviks find themselves still committed to Hitler and frisking his literature for material against Jewish Bolshevism while the Nazi and Soviet armies both mop up Catholic Poland in the most harmonius cooperation. And, finally, although there are 3,000,000 Jews in Poland, Stalin ignores them as an oppressed minority or a minority soon to be oppressed, and put in a claim for only the white Russians and Ukrainians.

As Hugh Johnson often says, it just doesn't make sense, to which one may add, "Thank God!"

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Hitler-Stalin Pact More Extensive Than Disclosed

THE SOVIET army is in Poland with the full approval of Chancellor Hitler. He said so in his speech at Danzig on Tuesday. It is no less clear that Stalin and Hitler are operating in accordance with a prearranged plan fixing the line where the two armies are to meet and establish their respective zones of operation. There can be no doubt any longer, therefore, that the so-called non-aggression pact which preceded the war included a secret agreement defining in principle, if not in detail, a program of Nazi-Soviet military cooperation.

Since the result of the agreement is to give Germany and Russia a common frontier of some 500 miles, and to make them partners in the destruction of Poland, it must be supposed that the agreement is even more extensive than has yet been disclosed. Hitler, in fact, boasted about it in his speech when he proclaimed to the world that the destiny of eastern Europe would now be settled by Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia. The understanding must, therefore, cover not only the Polish frontier in the center but the whole borderland from the Baltic Sea on the north to the Black Sea on the south.

Ready To Divide Eastern Europe

FINLAND, the Baltic states and Rumania may or may not be invaded and partitioned. But at the very least they have been assigned by agreement between Moscow and Berlin either to the Nazi or the Soviet sphere of domination. For the moment Hitler and Stalin are like Napoleon and the Czar Alexander when, in 1807, they made the Treaty of Tilsit, and the Czar said to the French Ambassador, "What is Europe? What is it, if it be not you and me?"

When we review the behavior of Stalin during the past spring and summer in the light of his present actions, we realize that he was conducting two negotiations simultaneously, the one with Britain and France avowedly for the purpose of preventing war by deterring Hitler, the other a secret negotiation with Hitler aiming at the partition of Poland and the support of Hitler in a general European war. We must then remember that in the negotiation with Britain, the whole burden of Moscow's argument was to insist on commitments against another "Munich," that is to say, on irrevocable commitments by London and Paris that they would fight if Poland was attacked or her sovereignty impaired. While Stalin was pushing the British and French to a policy of resistance, he was entering into a political and military alliance with Hitler.

Stalin And Hitler Desired Conflict

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE, I think, to dispute the conclusion that Stalin and Hitler between them desired the war and did everything to make it inevitable. They were, let us remember, negotiating secretly. Hitler knew that Stalin was offering his support to the Allies at the price of cast-iron resistance. He knew also that when the Allies were thoroughly committed, Stalin would betray them. So, while his secret partner was pushing the Allies toward war, he had the backing of his secret partner in starting the war.

In all history it would be hard to find another conspiracy so terrible in its consequences, or to match its perfidy.

We have not yet, I fear, seen even in outline the full scope and consequences of the Hitler-Stalin pact. But we can begin to discern some of them. In the Far East it is already known that Russia has ceased to threaten Japan, and it is, therefore, reasonably certain that Stalin has abandoned China to the Japanese. For it is not likely that he would be making peace with Japan on the Manchukuo and Mongolian frontier if he meant to continue fighting Japan indirectly by assisting China. We have to assume that Stalin has changed sides in Asia as well as in Europe, and that there, too, he has turned from the policy of resisting aggression to a policy of partnership in aggression.

No doubt the Japanese will need much reassuring before they overcome their inveterate suspicions of Russia, and particularly of Communist Russia. But Stalin has the means to reassure them. He can help them to conquer China, as he has helped Hitler to conquer Poland, and he can reassure the Japanese against their fear of an American embargo, as he has reassured Hitler against the British blockade.

Stalin's Act Frees Japan, Nazi Armies

EVEN THIS is not the whole consequence of Stalin's great reversal. In the west he has liberated the elite of the German army for an offensive campaign; in the east he has put Japan in a position where a very considerable part of the striking force of the navy and army are now or will soon be available for an offensive campaign. There is no way of predicting just where and how Hitler and the Japanese will employ the mobile offensive power that Stalin has liberated and is supporting.

Presumably, at first it will be used in Asia to finish the Chinese war and to deal with the British and French in China; presumably, at first it will be used in Europe to dispose of the border states, to obtain control of Turkey and in an attempt to make the most profitable use that can be made of Italy.

Even now, and certainly after he has consolidated his conquests in eastern Europe and his alliance with Russia, Hitler will desire an armistice on the Western Front and a lifting of the Anglo-French blockade. But there are no indications that he will succeed, because such an armistice could not lead to peace. All that Hitler had to offer at Danzig was his personal pledge that now he is satisfied. What kind of guaranty can Hitler give the Allies that the pledge which he violated before Austria, after Austria, before the Sudetenland and after Munich is now to be trusted?

The British and French would still have to remain mobilized; they would still have to live in a military regime. Under the circumstances it is not much more expensive, and they have made it clear that they consider it less dangerous, for them to continue the blockade of Nazi Germany and the military pressure on the west, than it would be to stand there with their armies and fleets mobilized and yet allow Hitler to strengthen his position.

Commander Of Sea Usually Is Victor

IN EXAMINING the situation in a war of this kind we must always remember that it is a struggle between sea power and land power. The French and British armies on the Western Front are defending one part, a very important part, but nevertheless only a part, of a frontier behind which sea power is operated and supplied. The victories of sea power are rarely spectacular: the conquest of Poland has been more dramatic than the victory of the British navy in driving Germany off the sea. But unless all experience is to be set at naught, every victory on land is indecisive as against a nation which retains command of the seas. In the end the landlocked power gives way to the sea power.

Reading the newspapers in 1807-1808, it would have been hard to believe that this was so. Napoleon, then at the height of his success, was master of France, of northern Italy and of the kingdom of Naples. His brother Louis was King of Holland. His brother Joseph was King of Spain. Poland supplied him with troops for his army. The German states and Austria were beaten. The Czar of Russia was his friend and ally. But England had won the command of the seas at Trafalgar. Though Napoleon was master of the whole continent, the sea power of England still denied him a victorious peace. Under the egis of that sea power, England at last organized in Europe the coalition which overthrew Napoleon at Waterloo.

Patent Office's Geniuses Still Busy With Peaceful Ideas

Life goes on at the Patent Office, with little of a war-like nature among this week's crop of inventions, including a combination lipstick and cigarette holder, an elevated bathtub, an anti-flap holder for window shades.

This week's grist of patents included, along with complicated machines which may affect the course of industry, such wonders as these:

Mold for hamburger, automatic ringlet curler, yarn-winding apparatus, camp stove, combination plier and wrench, trouser presser, method of fumigating growing corn against insects, a tree-moving device, adjustable horse collar, single dial tension for bass drums, remote control system for toy train accessories, detachable heel, a jingling dancing tap and an illuminated cane.

With the 732 patents granted this week, the total rose to 2,173,815. The one bearing that number is a "heat insulating material and method of forming the same."

Last week's wonders included an inflatable umbrella without metal ribs, thereby circumventing the risk of poking a bystander in the eye. A pump in the handle and compressed air account for its operation.

War on Everyone's Tongue, Even 2 D. C. Defendants'

Repercussions of the European situation were heard at Police Court yesterday at the arraignments of two men.

Charged with larceny after trust for allegedly soliciting funds to combat the spread of Nazism in the United States, Irvin Nathan Hale, 41, 1400 block N street northwest, denied the count and demanded a jury trial. Policeman B. D. Crooke told the court he arrested the man in the 1900 block Eighteenth street northwest September 5, after he solicited $8 from citizens.

The second case was that of Peter Roak, 1200 block I street northwest, 47-year-old Pole, who pleaded guilty to smashing a clothing store window because "Hitler has stolen all the money from the Polish people." Roak was arrested in the 1300 block F street northwest after the window was broken and a $30 overcoat removed. Charged with housebreaking he was held for grand jury action under $1,000 bail.

Rocketing Prices 'Lead to Distress,' Retailers Hold

Roscoe R. Rau, president of the Retailers National Council, declared yesterday that "a too rapidly increasing price level will seriously impair the purchasing power of the public and lead to distress." He spoke at a meeting of the organization held at the Hotel Washington and attended by 23 members of the group, representing 11 national retail associations.

Discussing rising commodity prices, the group concluded that retailers are too often powerless to keep prices down, but that rising costs of commodities should be kept at a minimum. The Council went on record as affirming that certain agricultural prices are still "unduly low priced."

Re-elected to office for a second year with Rau were Rivers Peterson, vice president; Herbert J. Rich, treasurer; Harold R. Young, secretary; and Louis Rothschild, assistant secretary.

The Generals Guess Wrong

By G. H. Archambault

Errors Beat Poles

Copyright by New York Times.

Paris, Sept. 20.—It is now possible to discern the reasons of the Polish army's collapse.

Considering the events of the last fortnight with great objectivity, it is clear the Polish high command was handicapped by fundamental errors in its war doctrine. Whereas it is manifest that inferiority in men and material counseled exceeding prudence, considerations of national prestige—and perhaps over great reliance in the Polish soldiers' dashing temperament—led to underestimation of the enemy's potential force.

The consequence was, instead of retaining an army concentrated well behind the frontiers ready to stabilize the front, the Polish high command decided as a sentimental gesture to man the entire frontier—some 1,500 miles, if East Prussia be included—with thin line of troops as a token to all the world that reborn Poland was determined to fight for its independence anywhere and everywhere.

All Odds Show On German Side

All odds were on the German side. In manpower they outnumbered the Poles about three to one, while the proportion was even greater with regards to material.

Moreover, Germany's seizure of Czecho-Slovakia and her possibility of utilizing Slovakia as a base had entirely modified the strategic problem, in addition to adding many more miles of frontier to defend.

The date of the onslaught also was well timed with due regard for meteorological considerations. At the end of August the harvest had been garnered and the wide Polish plains offered an ideal ground for motorized columns before the late September rains transformed them into quagmires.

Though carried out with new engines of war, the attack was on classic German lines—envelopment of the enemy within the claws of huge pincers.

The operations may be divided into three phases. On September first, two German mechanized columns dashed out from each side of the Posnan salient. The northern group issuing from Pomerania had as its route a line from Zlotnow to Bromberg. It was supported by a subsidiary force operating from East Prussia. The southern group debouched from Silesia with Czestochowa as its objective. Disdaining an attack from the Polish forces within Posnan, these two groups went straight ahead, breaking through the Poles everywhere they were encountered.

Pincers Extended By Motorized Army

When they had progressed sufficiently far two additional mechanized groups began the second phase and elongated the pincers. Issuing from East Prussia the first advanced in a southerly direction toward the lower course of the Bug River. Simultaneously a second of these groups left Upper Silesia eastward via Krakow and Tarnow with the lower course of the San River as its objective.

The third phase began September 10, when a fifth mechanized group prolonged the northern claw of the pincers in the direction of Brest-Litovsk, while a sixth group advanced toward Lwow.

It was thought the Germans were very venturesome in pushing forward so rapidly without occupying ground or establishing liaison, but it is clear now one of their purposes was to establish contact with the Soviet troops and thus achieve the encirclement of the Polish armies after having cut them into sections from which it was well nigh impossible to regroup.

These six groups strove to separate generals and their staffs and from their commands, and generally disrupt all liaison. Simultaneously, the German planes cooperated with the advancing columns, bombing all concentrations of troops and machine-gunning advanced elements when resistance was offered to the drive. Early in the operations the Germans had mastery of the air not only because of superior numbers but because they were able to bomb the Polish airfields where the planes were lined up ready to take off.

Without Russian treachery, the Polish forces might still have been able to establish something like a front. Now all they can do is to offer isolated resistance, a sort of guerrilla warfare which, though it cannot retrieve the situation, may immobilize not unimportant enemy forces for some time to come.

Planned Economy

By Mark Sullivan

The Results After Six Years

AS THE PROBLEMS of war abroad descend upon us, as President Roosevelt addresses Congress about neutrality legislation—as this foreign condition occupies our attention, there is a domestic matter imperative for us to keep in mind. This domestic condition is far-reaching. It can be illustrated by reciting briefly the history of one detail. It began almost exactly seven years ago.

On September 14, 1932, Mr. Roosevelt, then first running for the Presidency, said:

"We must have . . . national planning in agriculture."

That, I think, was the first mention of "national planning," of "planned economy."

Mr. Roosevelt was elected. Twelve days after he took office, on March 16, 1933, he sent his farm measure to Congress. With it he sent a message in which he made this following undertaking:

"I tell you frankly that it is a new and untrod path . . . If a fair administrative trial of it is made and it does not produce the hoped-for results, I shall be the first to acknowledge it."

New Deal Took Credit For Upturn

IN RESPONSE to Mr. Roosevelt's plea, Congress enacted Triple-A. While it was before Congress, and during a few months after it was passed, there was a rise in the prices of farm crops. For this rise the New Deal took credit. Most orthodox economists, I think, would say that that early rise in crop prices would have taken place anyhow—it was the rebound which takes place after any depression has reached bottom. If there had been no New Deal, the rise might have gone higher and lasted longer. However, this is argument. Let us return to facts:

After Mr. Roosevelt had been in office eight months, he was pleased with the rise in crop prices that had taken place. In a fireside talk over the radio, October 22, 1933, he said:

"I do not hesitate to say, in the simplest, clearest language of which I am capable, that, although the prices of many products of the farm have gone up . . . I am not satisfied either with the amount or the extent of the rise; and that it is definitely a part of our policy to increase the rise . . . If we cannot do this one way, we will do it another. Do it we will."

Major Farm Crops Remain Lower

BY THAT PROMISE, made in October, 1933, is the New Deal farm planning to be judged.

Below is the record. In the first column are the prices of some leading farm crops as they were on the day Mr. Roosevelt made that confident prediction and roseate promise.

And in the second column are the prices as they were almost 6 years after the promise was made, the prices that existed last month, on August 26. August 26 is chosen because that was about the last day of normal prices—the following week war took charge of prices:

	1933 October 23	1939 August 26
Wheat	78.5	69
Cotton	9.18	8.61
Corn	40.7	44.7
Rye	50.5	41.2
Butter	24.7	24.2
Hogs	4.22	6.18
Beef	5.92	9.88

Those prices in the second column, the prices of August 26 last, are the prices as they were on the last day they reflected anything the New Deal could do about them, as they were when they reflected everything the New Deal had done. Those prices in that second column are the final net of almost 6 years of New Deal experiment.

Two great crops, wheat and cotton, were seriously lower than when Mr. Roosevelt said he would raise them—"Do it we will." Rye was seriously lower, butter was the same, corn slightly higher, hogs and cattle materially higher.

Billions Of Dollars Spent—For What?

IN THE EFFORT to raise prices, the New Deal had made a score of experiments. They had paid farmers to plow cotton under. They had bought up and destroyed young pigs and mother hogs. They had paid farmers billions of dollars to plant less. Upon farmers (and others) they had piled regulation after regulation. They had created scores of new ways by which men were subjected to penalty. As to potatoes they had made it a crime, punishable by imprisonment, for a farmer to raise and sell more than Triple-A decreed he could. They had even made it a crime to buy "bootlegged" potatoes.

This history of Triple-A illustrates much of the New Deal (though not all). Congress, in the recent session, had thrown much of the New Deal overboard. It was scheduled to get rid of more at the regular session next January. The fundamental idea of planned economy, the New Deal as a system (though not, let us remember, all the parts of it), was on the way out.

This should be remembered—precisely because war may cause us to forget it. Prices of crops may now be raised by war—and the New Deal may take credit for what the war does.

And we should remember for another reason. Most of the persons who invented the New Deal regimentation are still in power. They may wish to continue the same regimentation—upon the pretext of neutrality, or preparedness, or other aspect of war.

Testimony Ends In Navy Inquiry of Squalus

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 20 (AP).—Presentation of evidence was completed today before a naval court of inquiry investigating the submarine Squalus disaster, in which 26 men perished May 23.

The court's findings, together with recommendations directed toward prevention of repetition of the tragedy, will be reported to the Navy Department in Washington.

Children's Hospital Behind Fund Goal

Miss Mattie M. Gibson, superintendent, reported yesterday that the Children's Hospital "card appeal" has raised only $9,000, one-third of the amount required to erase the deficit. The appeal has only two more weeks to go.

No matter what the returns, standards will not be lowered, Miss Gibson said.

"H. M. S. Pinafore" and "The Mikado" will be presented in Constitution Hall October 2 and 3 by the New York Light Opera Company, with the net going to the fund.

Psychiatrist's Report

"Psychiatrist says he believes Hitler is a mental case."—News item.)

Cast—Hitler, Adolf.
Age—18.
Occupation—Voice throwing.

Case History

As a child the patient was the boy nobody liked. He used to drive nails in the bicycle tires of playmates, stick his thumb in other children's eyes and tie firecrackers to puppies' tails. When especially bored he would pull the wings out of live butterflies. He never liked going to school because of a fixed notion the pupils, not the teachers, should give the orders. He received poor marks at school, but made out his own report card and gave himself "E" in all studies. It is reported he once spent four years in one class because the teacher was undersized and a little blind, making it possible for him to use a slingshot on her at will.

II

One of his main difficulties in school resulted from the fact he insisted on reciting, whether called on or not, and always carried a megaphone to class. The only character in history liked by him was Napoleon. He often expressed the idea, however, that he was an amateur.

He left school at an early age and became apprentice to a house painter. The first house Hitler painted caused the owner to rush to the paint shop and shoot the boss. Hitler then took over the business, consisting of two ladders, one brush and no color sense. He was now in business for himself under the firm name of Hitler, Hitler, Hitler & Hitler, Inc.

III

He also did paperhanging, but never made the seams meet and always got the borders on upside down. To all complaints by the tenants, however, his answer was: "Who's doing this, you or me?" If he got any back talk he threw them out and took over the building. While he was adding more turpentine to the paint the World War broke out and he was called to the colors. He went to the front, but was unhappy because there were no paperhangers in Wilhelm's confidence.

IV

He sent an ultimatum to Von Kluck, threatening to quit the war unless made a colonel, but compromised on a corporalship. His enthusiasms were somewhat cooled by his belief the war was not being conducted the right way and he spent much of his time trying to get Hindenburg on the telephone.

V

After the war he took to looking at himself in mirrors, writing a book and playing "Putsch in the Corner." What happened from then on is too deep for even a psychiatrist, but it appears he took over the German government and got a good start before people realized it was not a new comedy act.

VI

His entire life from that time has been spent in tearing up treaties, running gentlemen's agreements through a hamburger grinder, refusing to pay poker losses, threatening to punch the world in the schnozzle, making menacing motions in all directions and trying to deliver three radio speeches at once into one mike without any change of pace.

Verdict: If he ain't crazy this psychiatrist is nuts.

Physical Check-up Urged for Child Entering School

NO CHILD can make the proper adjustments in so highly competitive an enterprise as the modern public school if he is handicapped by physical defects.

The first requirement on the health ledger for successful competition in school is to be protected as much as possible from contagious and infectious diseases. For this purpose we have advocated diphtheria, typhoid and smallpox vaccination, and somewhat less strongly advocated whooping cough vaccination.

These precautions, however, by no means exhaust the list of parents' duties. Success and happiness in school depend so much on physical well-being that every child should have a careful general physical examination before school opens. This applies to the child first entering school, but it should be repeated at least annually.

Tuberculosis in the vast majority of cases begins in childhood; the germs lie dormant for years, springing into activity in adult life. Means for detecting this early are known to all medical officers. The annual examination reveals tendencies that can be corrected best in the early stages.

Malnutrition is astonishingly prevalent in beginning school children. This may be due not to insufficient food but to the wrong kind of food. One of the most important services the school doctor can do for a child is to direct the proper foods, those which will bring the best nourishment and nutritional protection.

The eyesight is examined. Backwardness in school work can be expected if vision is not accurate. And in school for the first time vision is under test. Before the time of books and blackboards the child lives in a world where accurate vision is not demanded.

Hearing is also tested.

Children who experience difficulty in breathing through the nose have careful examinations directed at the adenoids and tonsils.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Her Twentieth Wedding Anniversary in the Offing, Woman Asks What Kind of Party to Have

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Within a few weeks, I shall have been married 20 years. I am thinking of having an anniversary party and I would like some ideas and suggestions for carrying it out. I believe the twentieth anniversary is china, is it not? My husband is a businessman and I also hold an office job, so I am thinking of having the party between 8:30 and 10 o'clock in the evening.

Should I arrange a program of some kind or just depend on conversation? And should refreshments be served all evening? And what should I serve? Should friends be invited by telephone? I don't believe I would want to issue written invitations, as I would rather not have it a formal affair.

I have a wide circle of friends, being active in church work; and, of course, I suppose I would be expected to ask my neighbors. But should I ask those with whom I don't exchange visits—I mean those I just speak to from the porch and over the fence? I live in a residential section and the folks in our block are very congenial, so there are several of whom I am very fond, but never really visit. Should I ask them? Should I ask my daughter and her friends to serve, and should they wear evening clothes? Your prompt advice will be appreciated. Sincerely,

SUBURBANITE.

Buffet Supper Should Please the Guests

DEAR SUBURBANITE: Good food served in abundance to guests who arrive with a hearty appetite is the best of all forms of entertainment, guaranteed to put everybody in a party humor. I suggest, therefore, that you celebrate your wedding anniversar—and the twentieth anniversary is the "china" anniversary, by the way—with a buffet supper, so arranged that the company may serve itself, with some slight assistance from your daughter and her friends. (And I approve of the idea of their wearing evening dress. It will mark the occasion as a gala event).

Martha Ellyn, the food editor of The Post, suggests three menus, any one of which should be fairly easy to fix, supposing you do your own cooking. Her first suggestion includes baked ham or ham loaf, with escalloped potatoes, vegetable salad with hot rolls, ice cream molds with chocolate brownies and coffee.

Her second nomination is baked beans with broiled frankfurters and pickle relish, Boston brown bread, cup cakes and coffee. And her third—a Hallowe'en supper—includes baked beans with cottage ham, brown bread sandwiches with horseradish butter, chef's salad, pickles, olives, pumpkin tarts and cider.

As you perhaps know, there is nothing complicated about the "set-up" of a buffet supper. Food, dinnerware, silver and napkins are symmetrically arrayed on a long table, presided over at either end by some woman friend or relative of the hostess. Equipping themselves with the necessary implements, guests circulate single file around the table, offering their plates to be served the hot dishes or main course, while helping themselves to the extra "fixings."

They may find seats where they will and eat from their laps, or card tables could be set up all over the main floor. Second helpings and the dessert course with coffee may be served to seated groups by your daughter and her friends, with the men assisting. And although you may not employ a servant regularly, you would find one very helpful on this occasion, to have charge of the kitchen and the replenishing of supplies.

If you adopt this suggestion of a buffet supper, naturally your guest list will have to be limited somewhat. And in that case, you would restrict it to your oldest and dearest friends—to perhaps 20 couples at most. However, if you decide to serve lighter rations, it would be a gracious gesture to invite everyone whom you have reason to believe wishes you well. Whether to ask neighbors who are pleasant acquaintances and nothing more is a question for you alone to decide. If it is convenient to have them, by all means ask them. If it isn't—don't do it, and make no apologies.

If you feel the party would be incomplete without some special entertainment feature, I suggest informal instrumental music. Perhaps you could round up somebody in your circle of friends who plays the mandolin, guitar or accordion, and get him (or her) to practice beforehand on some of the songs that were popular in your courting days.

If the party is to be an "everybody welcome" sort of affair, issue invitations by telephone. If the guest list must be limited, send out informally worded notes, which might begin, "John and I will have been married 20 years on October 16 and we are going to celebrate the achievement with a buffet supper at 8 o'clock. We want you to come, etc., etc."

What to Wear When Beau Calls?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 18 and I have a boy friend with whom I spend a great deal of time. With cold weather coming, quite a few of our evenings will be spent indoors—playing cards, etc. My problem is—what to wear? Would it be proper for me to make my appearance in a house coat or in lounging pajamas? Or must I wear street clothes? Is there any costume which I have not mentioned that would be more suitable? I will greatly appreciate your suggestions. Sincerely,

CATHIE.

The Happy Medium In Hostess Attire

DEAR CATHIE: The so-called "house coat" is nothing more nor less than a streamlined version of the boudoir negligee, just as "lounging pajamas" are but one degree removed from a sleeping garment. Indeed, the latter is merely a simplified substitute for a sleeping garment covered by a dressing gown.

In my opinion, such costumes do not constitute appropriate wear outside the intimate family circle—despite the fact that certain sophisticated ladies (and their would-be imitators) may hold an opposite view. I believe that such attire would be as outre, for a young girl entertaining her beau, as shorts or bathing suit would be if she were traveling or shopping.

A better choice for your evenings at home would be the street clothes you suggest; or what the stylists call "a dressy afternoon dress," which might be of velvet or velveteen with lace or lingerie collar and cuffs; or a simple evening dress, floor length with short sleeves and rounded neckline; or what is known as a dinner dress, high at the throat with long sleeves and instep length skirt.

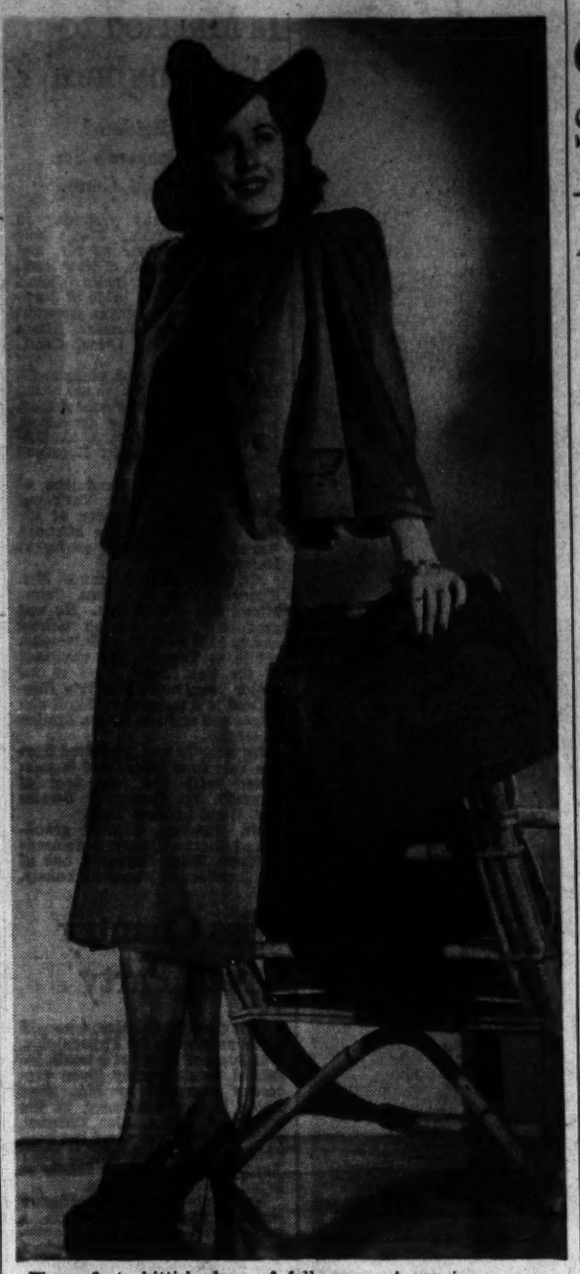
M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Wool for Flowers

Paris (AP).—Evening coiffures having been made of everything else to date, are now being turned out in wool flowers. Marjorie Dunton is designing them. She also uses black wool jersey for afternoon hats, and lines leather handbags with vivid, contrasting wools.

Suited in Suede



These first skittish days of fall may not require a warm top coat—nothing heavier in fact than a suit. For the sake of variety, more than one smart woman has turned to suede as an antidote to tweeds and men's suitings. Suede is a Hollywood luxury fabric when worked to individual requirements in novel, exciting ways. One screen star who has gone overboard for this idea is Barbara Stanwyck, above, who poses here in an autumn suit of natural suede. The straight skirt and boxy jacket are simple background lines for her dark suede accessories and hat of draped felt or suede

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Diet Alone Will Not Slim Waistline; Exercise Also Is Needed, Especially For Reducers Who Are Stockily Built

OVER-EATING leads to waist . . . you have to excercise it off! Our typical reducer can't have a nice figure until she loses seven inches off the waistline, and she can't depend on her diet for this trimming down.

You might think it would be impossible for anyone to lose a considerable amount of weight and not improve her measurements. But let me tell you about someone who did extremely well with her reducing . . . she lost 30 pounds in three months . . . but whose figure looked like this: Bust, 37 inches; waist, 32½ inches; hips, 41 inches.

All her measurements are improved to the extent that they are smaller. Her waistline is inches smaller than it was! But her waist is only four and one-half inches smaller than her bust and her figure is not nearly as good as it should be.

There's the Rub

That reducer left too much to her diet. With a disproportionate measurement, you must expect to exercise—and hard—to slim this particular measurement. You want to take a lot of your excess off that measurement so that your figure will be in better proportion. With the short, stocky figure, such as our typical reducer's, the waistline is usually the troublesome measurement, and exercises to slim this region are a necessary part of her program.

This reducer has chosen extremely effective waist-slimming exercises, and she does them for 30 minutes a day, resting for a moment after the completion of each exercise. Since much of the efficiency of an exercise depends on the ability to concentrate the movement in the muscles of that area, she holds a wand to keep the shoulders still, and sits on a stool to hold the hips in position.

POSITION: Sitting on a low stool with the feet locked around the front legs for a firm seat, and a wand (this can be a sawed-off broom handle) held back of the shoulders.

MOVEMENT: Twist vigorously at the waist so that the broomstick end is pointed straight out in front and you face sideward. Now, twist vigorously to the opposite side. Begin with 12 times for both sides, and gradually work up to 12 for each. In doing the exercise, bear in mind that the shoulders and hips should be held still—the hips tucked under, the chin in, and the abdominal muscles pulled up.

Broomhandle Useful

There are a number of exercises in which the broomstick may be put to good use. Stand with the back of the hips firmly against a solid desk or table, feet fairly wide apart, the broomhandle held back of the shoulders, and twist. Or sit on the floor, with the feet stretched wide apart, the wand held high over head with the arms pressed against the ears and circle the trunk down to the left, and over to the extreme right—always keeping the chin in, hips under, and tummy muscles pulled up.

There are so many good exercises that, no matter how far your waistline has wandered from symmetry, you can make it supple and slim. But don't expect your diet to trim you down!

The Gentler Sex

A Litany for the Present

HEAVEN DELIVER US:

From whining women who complain about how much they have to pay for sugar or shoes; about their lack of new winter coats, or dresses, or rugs; about their rents, their taxes, their husbands' salaries, their sinuses, their permanents, their petty economies or ailments, or any other of their small concerns without giving a thought to the anguish of their sisters in Poland, in France, in Germany, in England, or ever saying to themselves, "There but for the grace of God, go I."

HEAVEN DELIVER US:

From fatuous egotists who think themselves of a superior race because their country by accident of geography is at peace: who go about saying, "you can't do a thing with those foreigners anyway, they're always fighting among themselves;" who think every American is a noble minded Sir Galahad or a naive, defenseless sucker in any dealing with a European; who are convinced that Europe would not be in the mess it is in now if it had imitated this country—or at least taken its advice.

HEAVEN DELIVER US:

From human ostriches who think that no war, famine, distress, revolution or other upheaval in any other part of the world is of any concern to them; who think everything will work out all right if Americans just "stay home and keep their mouths shut;" who blithely dismiss every report from abroad that is disturbing or that is contrary to their own pet theories as "propaganda;" who take refuge in platitudes or antiquarian economics or cracker barrel philosophy in facing modern dilemmas; who wistfully believe that both the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans are as wide and as big today as they were in the days of Columbus and Magellan.

HEAVEN DELIVER US:

From self-complacency in any form—from shrewd-eyed housewives who tell of the supplies they have garnered for fear of rising prices; from women who say smugly, "Well, thank heaven I haven't men folk near fighting age;" from feminine plutocrats who tell of "safe" little retreats down in the country they have prepared "in case of the worst," from wives who mentally lick their chops as they parrot their husbands' predictions that "war will help business;" from any and all persons who prate on endlessly of "me and mine."

HEAVEN DELIVER US:

From emotionalists who go about damning either side; from those who would mobilize at once; from those who would dig air raid cellars and crawl into them; from those who would build a Chinese wall along the Atlantic sea-board; from those who become hysterical in the fear their own little houses of cards will be bumped over; from alarmists; from escapists; from sentimentalists; from the adolescent minded of all ages who greet disaster in terms of prejudice, passion, panic, or illusion.

HEAVEN DELIVER US:

From defeatists, cynics and wiseacres who say nothing can be done because the law of the jungle still prevails and it's just as their husbands say—there'll be a war every 20 years anyway; from fossils who say the world is going to the bowwows anyway as witness the way things are being run in this country and that civilization is on the downgrade and we might as well let it slide.

HEAVEN GRANT US:

Women who will meet catastrophe with calmness, courage and maturity; who will assume neither the roles of trembling little girls nor swaggering Amazons; who will rise to the supreme challenge of motherhood they face—that of helping to heal and cheer a world of diseased, deluded and anguished grown-up children, and of keeping flamingly alive the faith that somehow, some way—some day, things are going to be all right.

New York Suffers Rash of Parlor Military Strategists Who Direct War

New York, Sept. 20.

WE ARE SUFFERING at present from a spreading rash of a substitute for the bridge fiend and and even that typical New York phenomenon, the parlor pink, who often lives in an elegant penthouse and flirts coyly with the pals of Moscow.

ALICE HUGHES

The current menace to our mental and social peace, born in the past three weeks, is what I can safely call the parlor strategist. He knows precisely what to do about the present tragedy, and handles millions of troops as though they were Chinese checkers. Naturally, he is utterly ignorant of military affairs, not even possessing the little knowledge which is such a dangerous thing, but he holds forth eloquently and at great length on them.

They are a real menace, and I warn you against them, for undoubtedly they are bobbing up near you, too. They can even break up long-standing friendships, promising cases of incipient love, and possibly homes themselves.

I must confess that the female is more deadly than the male. Such matters, sorry as they are, have always been man's business, and when we begin sounding off on them we are more than apt to sound pretty silly, if not offensive. Have you heard the helpless wails of some girls lately, such as "But why doesn't Chamberlain do something?" Its not good for a man to answer quietly, "But what?"

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Startling statement. Katharine Cornell, co-queen of the American theater, says, "I adore the movies. I enjoy them as whole-heartedly as a child who goes to the circus for the first time." And she does, too. Katie is one of our great movie fans—she sneaks away to them, often to French films, whenever she can during the afternoon. I've seen her many times. But the odd part of it is that she has never made a movie and probably never will. In this she is unique among topflight American actresses.

Even little Helen Hayes has served her time in Hollywood, but makes no bones about the fact that she hates them. She hates and fears Hollywood itself even more. She once told me she thinks the place is almost fatal to happy marriages. And she loves her delightfully crazy Charlie MacArthur, and certainly wants to stay married to him.

Mrs. Emil Hurja Amazed At War Hysteria in U. S.

Just Returned From Abroad, She Says Too Many Europeans Look on America As Fertile Field for Profiteering

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

"A fertile field for war mongering and war profiteering."

That's America today as seen by far too many Europeans, according to Mrs. Emil Hurja, who is just back from a trip to Poland, Russia and the Scandinavian countries. Convinced that this war should not become ours, Mrs. Hurja said she was amazed to find people here in the throes of hysteria that may lead us into the conflict.

In Danzig a few days before the war broke, Mrs. Hurja noted that the people were calm and hopeful that the dispute could be settled without bloodshed. Later, traveling in Finland and Denmark after the conflict began, she observed that people there, even though virtually on top of the powder keg, were going on about their business as usual, confident that they could stay out of the war, entertaining no thoughts of making money as 'merchants of death," but wondering just how long Americans can resist the temptation of war profiteering.

Mrs. Hurja, who returned on the Kungsholm and stopped over in New York for a few days before coming on to Washington, was fortunate enough to obtain a room on the crowded ship. The trip home was very much as it would have been in peace times, except for the fact that two mine fields had to be crossed. Capt. A. C. Andreasen, Mrs. Hurja's father, who joined her in Copenhagen, remained on for a few days after she left. Now, however, he is on his way home.

Lady Rutter Here From London

Also a recent traveler in war-torn Europe is Lady Rutter, the former Lillian Hendrick, of Washington, who arrived in the Capital yesterday from England to enter her son, Franz Thilman von Matsch, in the Landon School.

Stopping at the Shoreham Hotel for the present, Lady Rutter said yesterday that her plans for the future are a bit nebulous. She may return to England to continue her "war work," or her husand, Sir Frederick Pascoe Rutter, who is still on his estate, Kingston-on-Thames, Surrey, England, may join her here.

When hostilities began, Sir Frederic and Lady Rutter, her son and her niece, Miss Bambie McKenna, of Washington, were at Biarritz, France. They made a hasty trip by motor to the northern coast, and found traveling difficult because no telephone calls could be made and no telegrams sent without immeasurable red tape. They reached the English port just in time for a practice blackout and found themselves in the midst of hundreds of travelers trying to board a tiny train.

Discusses Women's 'War Work'

The Rutter estate is 45 minutes from London in what is considered a neutral zone. "All around us, anyone who has any extra rooms have taken refugees who were evacuated from London September 1." Each morning the women, in fact all the women of England who are physically able to do war work, report for duty at their respective posts. Each woman has a definite job to do and is doing it calmly and cheerfully."

Petrol is being rationed carefully, Lady Rutter continued, so women who must go to London each day generally travel by bus, or tram, or bicycle.

While in Washington Lady Rutter will spend much time with her mother, Mrs. David Stewart Hendrick. An unusually handsome woman, Lady Rutter looked like a fashion plate yesterday morning. She was trimly turned out in a crushed raspberry tweed suit with a purple blouse and a hat of crushed raspberry felt with a purple band.

DEBUTANTE DATA: Miss Betty Drayton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles de V. Drayton, who made her bow at a garden tea in June, will be hostess at a luncheon tomorrow at the Chevy Chase Club . . . The party will be in the nature of a farewell fete, as Miss Drayton will leave Sunday night for Smith College to enter her sophomore year.

From California to Capital

Harris & Ewing

Among the newer Washington hostesses is Mrs. Scott Lambert (above) who arrived with her husband in the Capital shortly after their marriage in California. She is the former Miss Cleo Clawson, of San Francisco. Mr. Lambert is an attorney. They have taken an apartment at the Hay-Adams House, where they expect to be through the season

June Rossbach Is Married to Mr. Bingham

Becomes Bride of Former Senator's Son In Greenwich, Conn.

At a ceremony yesterday in Greenwich, Conn., Miss June Rossbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Rossbach, of New York, and Thirlamere, White Plains, N. Y., became the bride of Jonathan Brewster Bingham, youngest son of former Senator Hiram Bingham, of Old Lyme, Conn., and Washington.

The ceremony took place in St. Bedes Chapel of Rosemary Hall, the fashionable girls' school from which the bride was graduated, with the Rev. Albert J. M. Wilson, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, officiating.

The bride is a grandniece of Gov. Lehman of New York and of Judge Irving Lehman of the Court of Appeals. She attended Vassar and is now a senior at Barnard College.

Mr. Bingham is the son of Mrs. Henry Gregor of Salem, Conn., Miami and Washington. He was graduated from Groton School and in 1928 from Yale University. While at Yale he was chairman of the Yale Daily News in his senior year, made Phi Beta Kappa and is a member of Skull and Bones and of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

He recently was graduated from the Yale Law School and is associated with the law firm of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swains and Wood in New York.

Mr. Bingham, a great grandson of Charles Tiffany, is descended from Elder Brewster, one of the founders of Plymouth colony.

Miss Chantry Given Party

Miss Carolyn Chantry, who will leave next week for Philadelphia, was guest of honor at a small, informal cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Sims Snow in her apartment at the Shoreham. Capt. Alan Chantry, father of the honor guest, has been ordered to the Philadelphia Navy Yard, and his popular family is being entertained widely.

Mrs. Snow wore yesterday a smart, full-skirted frock in a vari-colored print, and an enormous ring—a blue topaz—given her by Signora Rosso, formerly Mrs. Wilkinson Bunker, of Washington, and now the wife of the Italian Ambassador to Moscow. Signora Rosso also gave similar rings to Mrs. Snow's nieces, Mrs. William T. Mann and Miss Betty Beale, who were present yesterday.

Bambie McKenna Tells of Trip

Miss Chantry looked smart in an orchid-colored silk dress, with a turban, gloves and shoes in a darker shade.

Miss Bambie McKenna was a fashion plate of early fall styles in a black velvet dress topped off by a beret of the same shade. She was entertaining friends with tales of her trip over from Europe on the Queen Mary, which landed in New York the day after war was declared.

Others there included the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos; the Commercial Counselor of The Netherlands Legation and Mme. Molekamp, recently returned from a vacation; George Williams, and Donald Downs, who said that his fiancee, Miss Florence Harris, was a-bed with a bad cold.

Clarence Hewes Also a Guest

Clarence Hewes, another guest, will leave shortly for Hot Springs, Va., and for a visit in North Carolina before going to his home in New Orleans. He will stay there for the tea at which his niece, Miss Ellen Flowerree, is to be presented, and then return early in November to open his house. She will join him here the end of that month and he will entertain extensively in her honor.

Mrs. Snow will entertain again at cocktails next week in honor of Miss Harris and Mr. Downs. Around the middle of October she will leave for a visit of several weeks in Memphis, Tenn., and on her return will probably take a small apartment.

Among others present at her party yesterday were William Lacy and James Parks.

Announce Birth

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss announce the birth of their second child, a son.

Countess de Baillet Latour Is Another Washington Refugee From Europe Due Here

ANOTHER WASHINGTON REFUGEE from Europe is Countess Guy de Baillet Latour, who sailed yesterday on the United States liner Manhattan to return to this country. With her little baby she will join her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, at their home on Observatory Circle. Mr. Dunn, like other State Department officials and everybody else, sees little to be cheerful about these days, but he and his wife are delighted at having their daughter with them for what looks like a lengthy stay.

Count de Baillet Latour is at present in New York, where he was sent recently on business for the Belgian government. He and the former Marianna Dunn have made their home in Brussels since their marriage in Washington several years ago.

NOT ONLY did Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis return to this country without their grandchildren, whom they planned to bring back with them from England, but also without their luggage. They had reservations on the clipper, and all the passengers agreed to leave their baggage behind to make room for more refugees. So Mrs. Davis is now in New York replenishing her wardrobe.

One of the saddest angles to the war seems to be the separations of civilian families which have resulted from the evacuation of London and Paris. Mr. Davis' daughter, Mrs. Roger Makins, with the children, has taken a house about 50 miles from London, but is allowed so little gas that she can only drive into town about once a month to see her British diplomat husband. Mr and Mrs. Davis sailed for England in the teeth of war declarations to get the Makins children, but their mother decided to keep them with her.

MRS. ROBERT LOW BACON, who has always been as keenly interested in politics as was her late husband, Representative Bacon of New York, is coming to Washington today especially to attend the opening of the special session of Congress. She will have some interesting tales to tell, no doubt, having just arrived from Europe on the most recent crossing of the Aquitania.

LOCAL SOCIETY will be intrigued to know that Mrs. F. Haven Clark, mother-in-law of John Roosevelt, will live in Washington after her marriage to Commander Lloyd Jerome Wiltse, U. S. N. "Jerry" Wiltse said yesterday that no date has been set for their wedding, plans for which were revealed yesterday when Mrs. Clark filed marriage intentions at the town hall in Massachusetts.

Friends of the future bridegroom were surprised to hear of his engagement. He has been stationed here for several years, and was one of the town's most popular, and seemingly most confirmed, bachelors. Last spring he served as aide to Crown Prince Frederick of Denmark on his trip to Washington and his tour of the World's Fair.

Commander Wiltse met Mrs. Clark several years ago when he was stationed in Boston. He renewed acquaintanceship when she came to the White House to stay during the time her daughter was engaged to John Roosevelt. Commander Wiltse went up to Nahant for the wedding.

THE WASHINGTON SEASON is still lagging, but Miss Marian Trumbull, just back from New York, says that it's so gay there that one has to make reservations well ahead of time for a table at the smart restaurants. And, unlike the easy-going Capital, New Yorkers would rather be caught dead than in a straw hat over Labor Day, and are already sporting winter finery.

Lots of Washington people are pausing in New York this week before opening their homes here. Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry is at the Pierre before coming to town the end of the week. After a vacation at Narragansett, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Warren are at the Ritz before returning to the Capital in the near future. Mr. and Mrs. S. Kent Legare, now stopping at the same hotel, will not open their house until about the first of October.

Other news on the social front: Mrs. Earnest Angell, of New York, is here for a few days getting her house on Foxhall road ready to rent to Robert Coe of the State Department. She was formerly Mrs. Higgins Chapin . . . Mrs. Henry Leonard is taking a cure at Saratoga before returning to Georgetown. She divided her summer between stays on her Colorado ranch and a visit to California.

Chest League Luncheon Group to Meet

Will Gather Today at Mrs. Dunn's Home To Plan Fall Event

Prominent members of Capital society will be among the group meting today at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. James Clement Dunn for the first fall meeting of the Community Chest League luncheon committee.

Mrs. Wilson Lee, committee chairman, will discuss extensive plans for the program of the league's fall luncheon, which is the outstanding event of the league's year-round program of education in regard to the work of its member agencies.

This year's luncheon will take place Monday, October 16, at 12:30 in the ballroom of the Hotel Mayflower. Following last year's plan of action, the luncheon will launch again an intensive schedule of Go-and-See tours to Community Chest agencies.

Among those present at the meeting today will be Mrs. David S. Barry, Mrs. Charles Carroll Morgan, Mrs. Reginald S. Huidekoper, Mrs. Adolphus Staton, Mrs. Charles B. Henderson, Mrs. Emory Scott Land and Mrs. J. Blaise de Sibour.

Mrs. Dunn is vice chairman of the league. Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of Associate Justice Reed, is chairman of the organization, which includes nearly 100 women prominent in civic and social circles. Mrs. Reed will return to the Capital about October 1.

Senorita Viteri Is Guest Here

Senorita Rosita Viteri, daughter of Dr. Homero Viteri and Senora de Viteri, who arrived in this country with her parents on Tuesday aboard the S. S. Santa Maria, is the house guest of Miss Mary Carol Biesemeier, daughter of Commander Biesemeier, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Biesemeier, at the Broadmoor Apartments.

Dr. Viteri and Senora de Viteri have been in New York for the past couple of days, but will arrive in Washington some time today for a stay of several weeks. Dr. Viteri, former Ambassador from Ecuador to the United States, and until recently chief of the boundary commission between Ecuador and Peru, has just been appointed Ambassador from his country to Brazil. He is on his way ot his new post by a roundabout route, via the United States. The Viteris are accompanied also to this country by their two sons, Georges and Billy.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Speaker of the House, William B. Bankhead, has returned to Washington and is at the Shoreham. Mrs. Bankhead will join him here from their home in Alabama in about a week.

The Danish Minister, Dr. Henrik de Kauffman, has joined Mme. de Kauffman after a trip to New York to attend a reception in the Danish pavilion at the World's Fair on Tuesday afternoon.

The Countess of Gainsborough and her daughter, Lady Maureen Noel, are here from Old Westbury, Long Island, for several days and are stopping at the Wardman Park.

Dr. and Mrs. Wade H. Atkinson, who have been in France since July, returned to New York Tuesday on the President Harding and arrived here yesterday at their home at 1402 M street.

Mr. and Mrs. James Craig Peacock have returned to their home in Chevy Chase after spending the greater part of the summer at "Bishopgate," near Bluemont, Va., and the past few weeks in Bermuda. The son, John H. Peacock, has returned to his studies at Washington and Lee University.

The forty-first running of the Meadow Brook Cup race will take place September 30 over the estate of F. Ambrose Clark at Westbury, Long Island. Many luncheon parties will follow.

Mrs. Lowry B. Stephenson, of Philadelphia and Washington, has taken an apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel for the coming season and is now established there with her son, David Chew Stephenson.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Greet have returned to their penthouse studio in the LaSalle after a month's sojourn in Bermuda, where they were guests of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William Baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Friend and their young son, Philip, have moved into their new home at 3629 Ellicot street.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Reizenstein and their family have returned to Woodley Park Towers after spending the summer at Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. Fowler V. Harper have taken a house at 1532 Thirty-third street, Georgetown. Mr. Harper was recently named general counesl of the Federal Security Agency.

Warren Pierson Back From Europe

Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, has returned to his apartment at the Shoreham after an interrupted vacation in Europe. Mrs. Pierson, who lingered on in New York, will arrive here the end of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierson planned to visit Spain, Poland and Hungary, but the war forced them to remain in France, where they stayed until they were able to book passage back to this country. They arrived earlier in the week on the liner Washington.

Norman Chases Make Their Home On Lanier Place

Mr. and Mrs. Norman C. Chase are at home in their apartment at 1705 Lanier place after their marriage last Sunday in Annapolis.

Mrs. Chase is the former Miss Dorrit Donegan, daughter of the retired United States Consul General at Munich and Mrs. Alfred W. Donegan, who now make their home in Baltimore. Mr. Chase is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Enoch A. Chase of Washington.

The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Rolph in Annapolis with the Rev. R. R. Rice officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an afternoon gown of royal blue and a tiny heart-shaped hat of black felt.

Lieut. Edgar G. Chase (j. g.) was the best man. He entertained at a reception following the ceremony, which was witnessed only by the two families and a few intimate friends.

Born in Basel, Switzerland, the bride was educated on the Continent and came to Baltimore with her parents last year after the absorption of Austria by Germany. Preceding his post in Austria, Mr. Donegan served in Germany, Switzerland, Rumania and Greece.

Mme. Jean Godin Ends Visit Here

Mme. Jean Godin has left for New York, after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Walmsley, of Washington. She is rejoining her husband, who is associated with a bank in Rio de Janeiro.

Mr. and Mrs. Walmsley entertained a few friends at cocktails in her honor on Tuesday afternoon in their apartment at the Brighton.

Many Senate Wives Arriving

Many of the wives of Senators are accompanying their husbands to the Capitol for the opening of the extra session today.

Mrs. Alva B. Adams, wife of the Senator from Colorado, has arrived and they have opened their apartment at the Wardman Park. Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton, of Louisiana, today will join their daughter, Miss Ruth Overton, who came to Washington earlier in the month to be Queen of the Regatta.

Senator Ernest W. Gibson, of Vermont, who has opened his apartment at the Wardman Park, was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Doris Gibson. Senator Key Pittman, Senator Scott W. Lucas and Senator James M. Slattery are other recent arrivals.

Bloom Family At Home Here

Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, who returned to Washington last week from Bluemont, Va., where they had a place for the summer, left shortly afterward for New York to spend a few days.

The three are now back at their home on Columbia road and will be on hand "full force" at the Congressional opening today.

Richardsons Leave For Wedding Rites

Mrs. Randolph Richardson, of White House, Fairfax, Va., accompanied by her daughter, Miss Randolph Richardson, will leave today for Harrisburg, Pa., where they will attend the wedding of Miss Frances Johnston and Edwin Rockefeller this week-end. They expect to return to Fairfax the middle of next week.

Mr. Rittenhouse Weds on Coast

Announcement has been received here of the marriage of Mrs. Violet H. Walker and Lieut. Basil N. Rittenhouse, jr., U. S. Navy, in Coronado, Calif., on Saturday, September 9.

The wedding took place at the bride's apartment before an improvised altar banked with white asters, larkspur and chrysanthemums. A cousin of the bride, Lieut. Hugh MacHay, U. S. N., gave her away. The bride was gowned in a honey brown street-length frock with black accessories.

Mrs. W. L. Knoftsinger, wife of Ensign Knoftsinger, was the matron of honor and only bridal attendant, and Lieut. Comdr. John Thomas Bottom was the best man. Following a reception the couple left for La Jolla, Calif.

Mrs. Rittenhouse is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Howe, of Newark, N. J., and a sister of John C. Howe, also of Newark.

Lieut. Rittenhouse is gunnery officer on the U. S. S. Gridley. He is the son of Lieut. Col. B. N. Rittenhouse, U. S. A., retired, of Silver Spring, Md., and the late Louise Tucker Rittenhouse. His sister, Mrs. B. Rittenhouse Carson, makes her home here on California street.

Mrs. L. M. C. Smith Back From New England

Mrs. L. M. C. Smith has joined Mr. Smith at their residence on Reservoir road after spending the summer at Marion, Mass.

Also returned from a New England vacation is Mrs. Walter White, who spent the warm months in Nantucket, where she had a cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Donnelly To Live Here After Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. John Francis Donnelly, whose marriage took place in West Falls Church on Saturday, will make their home in Washington after October 1.

The former Miss Ann Elizabeth Crimmins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Xavier Crimmins, of East Falls Church, Va., and Mr. Donnelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Donnelly, of Falls River, Mass., were married in St. James Church at a 10 o'clock ceremony followed by a nuptial mass. The pastor of the church, the Rev. E. V. Mullarky, officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in pearl white duchess satin, with insertions of chantilly lace around the neck and at the tops of the sleeves. The gown was fashioned on princess lines with a long circular train. Her veil was held to her hair by a coronet of old family lace. She carried a white satin-covered prayer book with a white orchid fastened to the top and a shower of lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Francis M. Horton, sister of the bride was the matron of honor, and Miss Patrician Crimmins, another sister, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Katherine Jones, of West Falls Church, and Miss Gabrielle Dauphin, of Arlington.

James Gibson, of Fall River, Mass., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers were Leonard Kaster, of Washington; J. Lawrence Wilkins, of Arlington, and Francis M. Horton, of East Falls Church.

After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. When the couple left for their wedding trip the bride was wearing a rust sheer printed dress, with a rust coat and brown accessories.

The bride was graduated from Villa Maria Academy, West Falls Church, and Mr. Donnelly attended school in Fall River and Columbus University in Washington.

Mrs. Pynchon, Daughter to Leave For New York

Mrs. Charles Pynchon and her daughter, Miss Anne Ellis, will leave for New York today where the latter expectes to spend the winter studying voice. Mrs. Pynchon will return to Washington early next week.

On Tuesday night, Mrs. Pynchon entertained informally at dinner, having among her guests Daniel Burnham, jr., of Chicago, son of the architect who designed the Union Station here. Mr. Burnham, who was staying at the Willard, left for Chicago yesterday morning.

Professor and Wife Back From 7-Month Tour of the Orient

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor

Every country washed by the Pacific has a fundamental relation to the others and a common interest in the problems of the area.

This is the conclusion reached by Mrs. William C. Johnstone, jr., and her husband, dean of the junior college and professor of international politics at George Washington University, on the seven months' tour of the Pacific Basin from which they have just returned. Mrs. Johnstone, who has been actively affiliated with the

MRS. W. C. JOHNSTONE

American Association of University Women and the National League of Women Voters, has also been professionally interested in the study of international politics for the past eight years.

"Greater numbers of Americans should visit Australia and New Zealand," said Mrs. Johnstone. "As British countries in the Pacific they may be expected to assume the initiative for Great Britain's policy in that area."

Prof. and Mrs. Johnstone met the foreign relations committee of the New Zealand Parliament and conferred with various groups in Australia to discuss common problems and contributions of the countries. Mrs. Johnstone also spoke on several occasions before women's clubs and gained their views during forum discussions. "There is a growing recognition of the need for a return to some international settlement of common problems in the Pacific basin," she said.

Philippines Like Uncle Sam

During their three weeks in the Philippines, Mrs. Johnstone and her husband "made it a game to find someone who wanted independence." Fear of Japan is responsible for the fact that the islands now welcome the protection of the United States, but with a return of security, she believes, they will again desire to be independent.

She and her husband traveled for eight months in the Orient five years ago and on this tour had opportunity to study changes which had taken place. During their first trip, they put emphasis on foreign areas, particularly Shanghai. This time it was their purpose to see how the countries fit together into the Pacific area where the United States has a fundamental interest.

More Americans Ought To Visit Australia, Travelers Suggest

For that reason, they traveled from Japan to Manchuria as far north as Harbin; into North China, Peking, Tientsin; down to Shanghai, south to Hongkong, to Haiphong, the port for the French Indo-China Railroad into the southwest; to Yunan province in "free" China; down through French Indo-China, to Saigon, the capital; on to Thailand to Singapore, up into the Malay States, then east into the Pacific, to Java and Bali, from their by air to Australia and from there by water to New Zealand. They came home by way of Fiji, Samoan and Hawaiian islands.

Japanese Are Feeling the War

In Japan, there was little evidence of war on the surface but at a second glance, it was apparent the country and its people were feeling the strain, said Mrs. Johnstone. There was curtailment of consumer goods, living prices had doubled over 5 years ago, the government propaganda office was working overtime, issuing new slogans every week, such as "New Order in Asia Week" to stimulate the morale.

Mrs. Johnstone also observed one of the most moving scenes of human grief she had ever witnessed, she said. It was on a boat where farewells were being said to Japanese going into the war area. Despite the general conception of them as an unemotional and stoic race, here were men and women of all ages dissolved in tears.

In Manchukuo she and Prof. Johnstone found Shinking, the capital, had developed unbelievably in five years and discovered an embryonic nationalism growing there.

In Tientsin, six weeks before the boycott began, the British were already feeling jittery and did not leave the concession after dark.

There was a great change evident in Peking since they were there five years ago, said Mrs. Johnstone. As the seat of the new China puppet government and headquarters of the Japanese army, almost every little street had Japanese homes, offices, shops and signs. One of the most startling in appearance was the white tile bathhouse in the midst of the gray walls of Chinese buildings.

There is, of course, great resentment among the Chinese and continued resistance in North China, believed to be directed by the Chinese Nationalist Government, she said.

In Shanghai, major areas have been destroyed, there is a great concentration of refugees and the community is doing a superhuman task in handling the overwhelming relief problem.

Hongkong was another center for refugees and concentration of Chinese and foreigners. All the institutions of culture from North China have moved into the south. Books, students and faculties have been transported 1,000 miles and the universities are still carrying on.

Mrs. Johnstone was delighted with Yunnan Province and believes in the future it may be a mecca for tourists because of its beauty and the contrast between the ancient and modern Oriental civilization. The ancient walls are intact except for places cut through to prevent people being trampled in air raid panics.

Soroptimists Hear Col. O'Kelliher On Preparedness

Col. Victor O'Kelliher addressed the weekly luncheon of the Soroptimist Club at the Willard Hotel yesterday, discussing preparedness.

Mrs. Jean Bennett, the president, opened the session and Miss Betty Jones introduced the speaker. Another feature of the meeting was the recording of a program which will later be broadcast over Station WJSV.

Greece America Society Convenes

The Greece America Society of Washington had its first meeting of the season last evening at the residence of Miss Anne Darlington, 1810 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Miss Sally Beach, the guest speaker, talked on her experiences as an American Red Cross worker in Greece at the end of the World War. The president, Peter Dounis, led an informal discussion in which Miss Ann Singleton, Mrs. William Revis, and other members related experiences in Greece or discussed the society's activities and plans for the year.

Altrusa Club Opens Season With Meeting At Alexandria Home of Bess Goodykoontz

MISS BESS GOODYKOONTZ, of the Office of Education, was hostess to the Altrusa Club last night at its first meeting of the season. She entertained the members at her home in Alexandria, which is one of the picturesque old houses near the river which has been restored in recent years. Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, who has just returned from a motor trip to New York and New England, assumed her office as president.

Plans were discussed for the district convention of the club, to be held October sixth and seventh in Winston-Salem, N. C.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA ALUMNAE will meet for a buffet summer Tuesday night at 6:30 at the home of Miss Margaret Blackistone. The business meeting will be followed by bingo.

Monday night, the executive board met to plan the founders' day banquet which will be held October 16 at Brook Farm Tea House.

A POLITICAL SCIENCE COMMITTEE has been formed by the Women's Democratic Club of Takoma Park, to study State and national legislation and direct the club discussions. Mrs. E. J. Wilson is the chairman.

Mrs. Homer Guerry, club president, has named the following as members of the board of governors: Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Walter Prichard, Mrs. Robert Grier, and Mrs. R. L. H. Jones. Other committee chairmen are: Ways and means, Mrs. Eva McKinnie; legislation, Mrs. Charles Y. Latimer; program, Mrs. D. A. Collier; hospitality, Mrs. Joseph D. Wilson; membership, Mrs. Louise Judd; constitution, Mrs. Isabel Haskins, and printing, Mrs. Harry Dodge.

THE SIMMONS COLLEGE CLUB of Washington will begin its fall season with a meeting in the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women Monday night at 7:45.

The club plans this year to send a Washington girl to Simmons, which is located in Boston. Miss Evelyn Croswell is chairman of the scholarship committee.

Mrs. Eileen Mitchell and Miss Mary Goodrich are co-hostesses for Monday's meeting and there will be a talk on Labrador.

Swedish Women Talk Less, Do More, Says Visitor Here

Edith Lindblom, of Stockholm, Who Is Studying Social Problems, Makes Comparisons and Finds Americans Lacking

Club women in Sweden do more and talk less than those in America, in the opinion of Miss Edith Lindblom, who is here from Stockholm studying social questions, particularly pension and wage and hour laws.

There was a warm twinkle in the eyes of this tall, pleasant Swedish woman as she made the comparison between women of this country and of her own. Her attitude was by no means unkindly critical but her conclusion, she said, was the result of attending meetings and listening to radio programs where "there is much talk over and over about the same things, "but nobody seems to do anything about them."

She is a firm believer that women of all countries need to understand each other and join hands in working out their common problems. In Sweden she has had a part in bringing about improvements in the lot of working women. She has led efforts for various reforms as president, for the past 17 years, of the Women Clerks' Union. This organization has 3,000 members, a majority of them young women in office work. She also was instrumental in organizing the Business and Professional Women's Club of Stockholm, after a visit by Lena Madesin Phillips, of New York, president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. The Stockholm organization, which is but nine years old, has 1,000 members.

As evidence of the "doing" characteristics of the business women's organizations there, Miss Lindblom told of two important housing projects they have recently sponsored in Stockholm.

The Women Clerks Union, finding many of the girls in its membership were ill housed, promoted the idea of building an apartment house for them. With the cooperation of a contractor and of the government, which leased a plot of ground in the heart of the city, a building company was formed and the construction begun. Last October the building was opened, providing 200 one-room apartments with bath and kitchenettes, a sun terrace, gymnasium and large dining room.

Because many girls cut down on food in order to provide themselves with other things, one of the requirements of the apartment house is that the residents pay for 25 dinners a month.

This, said Miss Lindblom, insures their having adequate, well-balanced meals. The cost in our money would be $7.50 a month for the dinners and from $15 to $20 a month for rooms. The rooming house rate previously had been from $20 to $30.

The cost of the building was 2,200,000 crowns. Each girl who lives there takes a share in the building company, worth 100 crowns, and when she leaves, sells it to an incoming resident.

The Business and Professional Women's Club has recently cooperated in the construction of a modern apartment building, designed to meet the needs of the married woman in business. One story of the 40-apartment building is rented to club members and the rest is open to any renters, but the management of the building is under the direction of the club.

Miss Lindblom in the past four years was one of 14 women among the 100 members of the Stockholm City Council. She also is the only woman on the board of the central organization with which the Women Clerks Union is affiliated.

She came to Washington to confer with Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, and will go from here to New York to study insurance methods and commercial schools.

Yesterday she was the guest at luncheon of Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

Partial Text of Chamberlain's 3d Report on War

Poland Reassured Britain and France Haven't Forgotten

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 20.—The most important passages of Prime Minister Chamberlain's third war statement to Commons follow:

On September 17 an event occurred which has inevitably had a decisive effect on the war on the Eastern Front. On the morning of September 17 Russian troops crossed the Polish frontier at points along its whole length and advanced into Poland.

I cannot say that the action of the Soviet Government was unexpected. For some time past Soviet troops have mobilized and concentrated on the western frontiers of the Soviet Union, and statements have appeared in the Soviet press and wireless referring to the position of White Russians and Ukrainians in Poland which bore the interpretation that the Soviet government were preparing the ground for intervention.

It is still too early to pronounce any final verdict on the move or consequences of the Russian action. For the unhappy victims of this cynical attack the result has been a tragedy of the grimmest character.

The world, which has watched the vain struggle of the Polish nation against overwhelming odds, with profound pity and sympathy, admires their valor, which even now refuses to admit defeat.

If Britain and France have been unable to avert the defeat of the armies of Poland, they have assured her that they have not forgotten their obligations to her nor weakened in their determination to carry on the struggle.

Against the background of these events, Herr Hitler chose yesterday to address another speech to the world. It is not our way in this country to speak with boasts and threats. Perhaps for that very reason, the German leaders have difficulty in understanding us, but in such comments as I have to make on the chancellor's speech, I shall not depart from our custom of speaking soberly and quietly.

The speech which Herr Hitler made yesterday at Danzig does not change the situation with which we are confronted.

It gave an account of recent events which we cannot accept as accurate and, as the commentary broadcast by the BBC last night clearly showed, it contained certain assurances of the kind which in recent years Herr Hitler has repudiated when it suited his purpose.

Among the many misstatements of fact, I wish to refer in particular to the statement that the French government agreed to Italian mediation while His Majesty's government refused it. The reply to this statement is contained in the communique issued by the Official Italian News Agency on September 4, which was reproduced in the recent White Paper and which clearly brought out the common attitude adopted by the British and French governments.

I have since noted the strong communique issued today by the French government, which emphatically supports our attitude. I hope that a supplementary White Paper, which will be issued tomorrow, will make plain the true course of recent events so that public opinion may have no difficulty in forming its final judgment.

Herr Hitler says much in his speech about the humane methods by which he has waged war. I can only say that methods are not made humane by calling them so, and that the accounts of German bombing of open towns and machine gunning of refugees have shocked the whole world.

I have only one general comment to make. Our general purpose in this struggle is well known. It is to redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and their liberties. No threats will deter us or our French allies from this purpose.

His Majesty's Government did not seek this war. They did, as the published documents show, repeatedly state their readiness for a peaceful settlement by negotiation. They perservered in their attempts to secure this up to, and even after, the striking of the first blow, but their efforts were set at nought, and their hopes shattered by the unprvooked and brutal aggression of Germany upon our Polish allies.

On the Western Frontier the French have continued to make methodical and successful progress. The laconic but admirably clear announcements of the French higher command indicate that valuable strategic and tactical objectives have been secured, and that the ground gained has been held in face of increasingly severe German resistance.

Since my last statement to the House on the war at sea, the situation has been one of intense and continuous naval activity, mainly in the form of attacks on U-boats carried out by destroyers, small craft and the fleet air arm, acting under cover of the main fleets and squadrons.

These attacks have been made both by day and by night and the achievements of the anti-submarine campaign after a little over a fortnight of war have exceeded anything which the British Navy accomplished even over much longer periods in the last war.

The great difference between the last war and this one is that, whereas in the last war we were on the defensive against the U-boat campaign, we are now carrying out an offensive against the U-boats and they are continually and relentlessly attacked whenever they disclose themselves.

It is frequently impossible to be certain after depth charges have been dropped that the submarine attacked has been destroyed.

But there are occasionally quite unmistakeable signs that the vessel has been holed and sunk and I am confident that I am understating the case when I say that already six or seven German submarines have paid the full penalty for their attacks on British shipping. In some cases their crews have been captured.

I am quite confident that, with the full operation of the convoy system and the rapid increase in the numbers, power and efficiency of our hunting craft, this submarine menace will dwindle with corresponding speed.

It is already clear that the navy and the marchant service by their unceasing efforts will be able to maintain essential supplies of raw materials and food for our population and our industries.

In April, 1917, the peak month of action by enemy U-boats and mines in the last war, the average weekly sinkings of British tonnage amounted to 127,000 or 39 ships.

During the week ended the Twelfth of September last it was 95,000 tons or 17 ships and for the week ended the Nineteenth of September, 45,848 tons or 13 ships.

Undoubtedly this decrease has been partly due to the working of the convoy system, now increasingly in operation.

So far as our information goes, 139 lives both British and neutral, have up to now been lost from submarine attacks excluding the losses incurred by the sinking of H. M. S. Courageous; there are, in addition, 44 persons reported missing.

The primary aim of British policy at sea is to destroy or render ineffective the warships of the enemy and, as a result, to prevent the enemy augmenting their warlike resources from overseas, whilst at the same time protecting our own and neutral commerce.

The interests of neutrals are, indeed, the same as our own. In war as in peace we depend for our life upon the uninterrupted flow of trade and it is our fundamental policy to preserve, as far as possible, the conditions of normal trading.

The suppression of traffic in contraband of war must of necessity cause some inconvenience to neutrals. Our control is used only in cases where there is good reason to suspect the presence of contraband cargo destined for the enemy.

The strict adherence of His Majesty's government to the rules of law is in striking contrast to the policy pursued by Germany. No loss of life has been caused by the exercise of British seapower and no neutral property has been unlawfully detained.

Germany's method of submarine warfare and the laying of mines on the high seas has already resulted in the death of many innocent victims, regardless of nationality, and in the unwarranted destruction of neutral property. . . .

Our advance must be orderly but the pace of the advance will steadily quicken.

I can assure the House that the effort of this country will be the utmost of which it is capable and therefore, of course, is no whit inferior to that made even in the most strenuous days of the Great War . . .

In the meantime, the fact that during these first weeks of war we have not yet experienced the ordeal of aerial bombardment affords no reason whatever for any overhasty or wholesale dispersal of our home defense forces . . .

The whole of the British Commonwealth of Nations and Empire is indeed at this moment intensively engaged in mobilizing strength under the cover of our naval, military and air forces—forces which in the aggregate are stronger and more powerful than at the outset of any past war.

Thus the extent of our effort is rapidly increasing in every direction, but I want my final word today to be a word of warning.

We as a government will not be rushed into courses which our military advisers, with whom we work in the closest possible contact and mutual confidence, do not approve.

There is no sacrifice from which we will shrink; there is no operation we will not undertake provided our responsible advisers, our allies and we ourselves are convinced that it will make an appropriate contribution to victory. But what we will not do is to rush into adventures that offer little prospect of success and are calculated to impair our resources and to postpone ultimate victory. One lesson which military history teaches is that that road leads to disaster.

Strategy is the art of concentrating decisive force at the decisive point at the decisive moment.

I will not hazard a guess at this stage of the war as to when or where the decisive force will be assembled or when the decisive moment will arrive. That must depend upon events which no one can foresee. But the scale of our preparations and the fact already announced that we are raising them on the assumption that the duration of the war may be at least three years, ensures that our strength will increase progressively to meet whatever may come.

Let me conclude by quoting the words of a famous Polish general who, in bidding good-by to a recent allied military mission, said: "We shall fight. A large part of our country will be overrun and we shall suffer terribly. But if you come in, we know that we shall rise again."

HopeRevived For Training Of Shut-ins

Haycock Requests That Funds for Extension Be Set Aside in Budget

Hope was raised yesterday for renewal of the WPA project for teaching shut-in children in the District.

Dr. Robert L. Haycock, acting superintendent of schools, reported to the Board of Education that Capt. John L. Person, Assistant Engineer Commissioner and co-ordinator of District projects, had requested the school office to prepare "essential papers" for the project.

Officials Encouraged

Although Capt. Person gave no inkling as to the prospect for the project, school officials found some encouragement in the request.

The problem of vandalism in school property confronted the board at its meeting yesterday. Dr. Haycock reported some communities had made little progress in decreasing window breakage and other destruction. He added that results during the vacation "continue disappointing."

The board tabled a proposed shift in the crippled children's classes from Langdon School to the Health School if the latter building were vacated by tubercular children with arrested cases being transferred to regular schools.

Dr. Haycock relayed a report from J. J. Crane of the schools' business office, that between $3,500 and $4,000 would be required to remodel the Health School to receive the crippled children. Dr. Haycock said that if this amount were diverted from the fund for repairs and improvements it would slow down needed work in the schools. School officials were of the opinion that a more orderly procedure would be to request an appropriation from Congress.

Langdon School Praised

Charles G. Drayton, board member, said that he had made a recent visit to the Langdon School to inspect the facilities for crippled children and found it well equipped for immediate needs. But he made it clear that his report should not be interpreted to forestall action the board might take. He proposed careful further investigation.

The WPA has notified school officials that it can no longer assume the responsibility of selecting the children to receive school lunches under that project because it was not able to employ the social worker and field assistants necessary. Dr. Haycock said, after the board meeting, that the principals of the various schools would have to perform that duty.

The Board voted to protest the issuance of a class "D" liquor license at 1345 Webster street northwest, since it is near a large school center.

Drill Code Simplified

The board approved the adoption for high-school cadets of the new Infantry drill regulations issued by the War Department. The regulations, which have been demonstrated for school officials by the Thirty-fourth Infantry at Fort Meade, simplify the movement of troops.

Enrollment in the public schools on the second day of the new session had reached 88,095, an increase of 1,057 over the corresponding day of last session, Dr. Haycock reported.

The prospect of student excursions to th Corcoran Gallery of Art, with parents assisting teachers in transportation, was discussed by the board, under prompting of a letter from C. Powell Minnigerode, director of the gallery, suggesting some method for more children to take advantage of the opportunities.

Louisiana Again Seeks Dean Powell As Its Bishop

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the Washington Cathedral and warden of the College of Preachers, last night received word of his election again to the Bishopric of Louisiana. He was chosen on a unanimous ballot at a diocesan meeting in New Orleans.

Dean Powell

The cleric last night declined to make any statement regarding his decision on the selection, which, should he accept, would make him spiritual leader of 13,000 communicants. Desire to complete his original task of expanding the College of Preachers' program was given as his reason for declining the previous honor.

He told The Post in May that declination of the position was made extremely difficult because there is great opportunity for pastoral work in Louisiana, and he, himself, is a son of the South, being an Alabama native.

Democratic Club Elects MacDonald

Wesley MacDonald was elected president of the North Carolina Democratic Club of Washington at a meeting held last night at the Hotel Raleigh. Mrs. John K. Slear was named first vice president; Maj. Arthur Smith, second vice president; Miss Lucy Spinx, recording secretary; Mrs. Hattie Lasko, corresponding secretary, and Kelly Gilkey, treasurer.

Several resolutions were adopted indorsing the work of Democratic leaders and the work of the Democratic Party in Congress.

Neighborhood Election

Officers of the First Ward Neighborhood Council will be elected at 3:45 p. m. today in Goodwill Industries, 1218 New Hampshire avenue northwest. Andrew R. Byrd is the retiring chairman.

Our Town

Summit Park Asks Only That It Be Let Keep Elbow Room

Contented Suburb Finds Peace in Beauties of Nature

By Christine Sadler

As far as Charles Dickens was concerned the "magnificent" capital city which L'Enfant had planned for the United States had about as much substance as a truckful of doughnut holes strung together.

"Spacious avenues that begin in nothing and lead nowhere; streets a mile long that want only houses, roads, and inhabitants; public buildings that need but a public to be complete. . ." Thus wrote the long-winded Englishman in 1842.

"One might fancy the season over," he declared, "and most of the houses gone out of town with their masters."

One gathers from that, early Washington was a city in which the "best prophecies" failed, and in which only surprise awaited the prophet.

Future Surprise No. 1

Pushing toward the front today for position of future Surprise No. One—unless we are as wrong as Dickens—is that part of town ranging along our southeastern ridges and valleys. It's the part that only a few years ago had developed along urban lines no farther, in some respects, than the city proper had in the days when Abagail Adams hung the Presidential wash to dry in the East Room of the White House.

Up and down hill you travel to get there, and many Washingtonians have never taken the trouble. They're surprised to learn there are such streets as Austin, Bangor, Camden, Denver, and Erie—all laid out in correct alphabetic order and waiting for more settlers.

Summit Park is the name of this suburban frontier within the District's borders. It's a small area just as far out Pennsylvania avenue southeast as it can be without getting into Maryland. Alabama avenue divides it from the rest of the town on one side and Naylor road on another. Rolling Maryland hills, the trees of nearby Fort Davis and Fort Dupont parks, and fields of goldenrod provide its chief scenery.

Demands Elbow Room

The most surprising thing about it is that it has found peace and beauty within the city's borders and asks only that it be allowed to keep plenty of elbow room.

Mrs. Leila Marshall, organizer and president of the Summit Park Citizens Association, is something new in civic leaders, as they usually grow in Washington. That's because Summit Park does not have the problems which have harried other parts of the District since long before the visit of Dickens.

"All of our streets are laid. There are no more to be cut through. Some of them are not hard-surfaced yet, but that will come when we have houses. We are served by three buses. We have to walk a block or so when we use two of them, but I haven't heard anyone complaining," she declared yesterday. Searching her memory, she recalled that someone had asked for a street light last year at one of the alleys.

If Mrs. Marshall were given a few minutes she could name every family in the vicinity and total up the population. Allowing for some very recent families for which she does not have figures for children, she puts the residents at around 500.

They have no store nor other place of business, no school, and no church—but they are very happy.

"We are close to all of them. The small children just go over into Randle Highlands to school and the high school at Anacostia serves the larger ones. There are plenty of universities over across the river," Mrs. Marshall said.

A very busy woman, who works for the Treasury Department by day and writes poetry and heads the citizens' association in her spare time, Mrs. Marshall lives in the oldest house in Summit Park and so on two counts could be called the section's "first settler."

Southern Colonial Home

Here home, a large white Southern Colonial built "befo' de wah," stands in a grove of tulip poplars, oaks and on top of one of the numerous hilltops.

"Just come to the end of the world, turn left, and we're on the right," she tells her visitors. The wide hall through the center of the house and its spacious stairway are as originally built, as are also a narrow and lovely stairway in a small side hall.

The rooms were done over and some partitions changed by Caleb Powers, the picturesque Congressman from Kentucky who lived there for a number of years. Representative Powers, as the "old-timers" around Washington will remember, was sent to Congress by his State to pay him back for wrongfully serving a prison term.

He was Kentucky's Secretary of State in 1900 when, so the story goes, a rifleman hiding in his office felled William Goebel, the Democratic contestant for Governor. Tried four times, and once sentenced to death, Powers was released after serving more than eight years. He wrote "My Own Story" which tells of the confession of the rifleman and his subsequent "election to Washington." He was in Congress from 1911 to 1919 and continued to live here until his death in 1932, several years before which he had moved to Chevy Chase—where Mrs. Powers still resides.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall have lived in the home for more than a dozen years. "We have never completed our research about the place, but know it was built by Washington Young as a wedding gift for a daughter, who married a Col. Denham who was in the Civil War," Mrs. Marshall said.

With the exception of this home and two or there bungalows built as farm houses since the turn of the century, all homes in Summit Park are practically brand new. All are attractive and appear to be in the $10,000-to-$40,000 brackets. Four or five are being completed now and there is considerable building in adjoining Hillcrest.

"What we're insisting on is that they don't crowd out the natural beauty of this area. I was in a suburb once that just built in around me and I had to move out," said Mrs. Marshall, who loves her own two-acre hillside just as it is so much that she leaves it to Nature to do most of the landscaping. It is now loaded down with goldenrod. In summer it runs to purple vetch and daisies.

Tomorrow—Washington talks more than any city in the world—or something about the telephone situation.

Crippled Veteran Slashes 2 Men At V. F. W. Office

Enraged because his compensation had been reduced, a one-legged World War veteran yesterday stabbed two men at the Veterans of Foreign Wars office in the Tower Building.

William I. Snyder, 40, of 427 Emerson street northwest, claims officer, suffered a 12-inch gash in his left leg and Robert A. Kincaid, 23, 5704 Thirty-third street northwest, son of Dr. H. C. Kincaid, medical consultant, was cut on the left leg and wrist. Both were taken to Emergency Hospital, where Snyder's condition was said to be critical.

Police took into custody Wyman H. Warren, 49, no fixed address, for investigation.

Citizens, Flooded By Rains, May Sue D. C. for Damages

Citizens living near Arkansas avenue and Delafield place northwest considered the possibility of suing the District for damages arising from frequent floods and decided to organize a citizens association at a meeting last night at the home of Hugh V. Keyser, 4000 Arkansas avenue northwest. The organization meeting will be held September 29 at Mrs. Telford's lunchroom, Fourteenth and Decatur streets northwest.

The organization committee of nine will call on the District Commissioners "in a day or two" in an effort to "find out what they're going to do" about remedying flood conditions in the neighbrhood.

Police Rookie Captures Hit-Run Driver in Chase

A rookie of the Police School got a running start on his career last night by capturing a hit-and-run driver on foot after a car had been struck at Fifth and Crittenden streets northwest.

The policeman, W. L. Taylor, of 4730 Third street northwest, reported he heard a crash as he was walking along, and saw the stopped car of Earl W. Green, 34, of 4904 Kansas avenue northwest, while another auto drove on. Taylor gave chase for about two blocks and caught up with a car with the front fender bent.

The driver was charged with driving without an operator's permit and leaving the scene of an accident.

Capital News in Brief

8 Taken in Raids

Police yesterday continued their campaign against the numbers racket, making eight arrests in various sections of the city.

Three persons were seized at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where two of them are employes. The third, a woman, was said to sell foodstuffs in and around the building.

Members of Capt. George M. Little's vice squad made the arrests at the printing plant and charged the victims with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips. They gave their names as Irene Willis, colored, 39, 600 block Q street northwest; James F. Ball, colored, 44, 900 block Westminster street, and Jesse Williams, colored, 40, 200 block Sixty-third street northeast.

Five others were taken into custody throughout the city.

Man Dies of Burns

John R. Baker, 58, of 820 North Carolina avenue southeast, died last night in Casualty Hospital of burns suffered in a boiler explosion September 8.

Baker was lighting the boiler at a cleaning and dyeing establishment in the 600 block of H street northeast early in the morning when the boiler exploded, causing severe burns on his arms, legs, stomach, and back.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Ethel Baker.

New Yorker Tells of Traffic

Add comments when a policeman stops you for crossing the street against the light: "You can't give me a ticket. I don't even own a car."

So said a man last night, and when the policeman inquired further, he added, "I come from New York, and in that town the lights are for the automobiles. If a pedestrain can beat the lights and get across the street, that's his good luck."

Youth Impaled in Leap

Leroy Waldt, 15, of 905 B street southeast, couldn't quite make it when he tried to jump over an iron fence in the 200 block of East Capitol street. One of the pickets pierced his side. He was taken to Providence Hospital, where his condition was not serious.

Beetles Quit Fruit

Adult Japanese beetles have ceased to live in fruits and vegetables, but may still be found until October 15 in cut flowers, the Department of Agriculture announced yesterday.

Shippers of fruits and vegetables were therefore relieved of the burden of furnishing certificates showing freedom from Japanese beetles, but the requirement will remain in force regarding cut flowers until October 15.

H. Kaufman Dies on Trip To Seashore

Rose From Ranks to Head Department Store; Ill Since December

Harry Kaufman, president of Harry Kaufman, Inc., and a director of the Hamilton National Bank, died yesterday at Atlantic City, where he went Friday for a brief pleasure trip. He was 75 and had been ill of anemia since December.

Born in Georgetown, the son of a struggling merchant, Mr. Kaufman early was thrown on his own resources. After a period of selling newspapers, he became a clerk in the shoe store of B. Rich & Sons, then at 1324 Seventh street northwest, where the Kaufman store now stands.

About 38 years ago, Mr. Kaufman bought out his employer, later added men's clothing to the shoe line and after a few years enlarged his plant and opened a department store, of which he was president when he died. He had not been active, however, since his illness in December.

Five years ago, on May 22, 1934, "Honest Harry" Kaufman celebrated his fifty-ninth year in business, still at its helm despite his 70 years. He had other important business connections as well, all of which except the directorship of the Hamilton Bank he gradually relinquished.

He was married in 1897 to Rae Frechie, of Philadelphia, who survives him. He was a life member of St. John's Lodge of Masons and a member of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Besides his wife, he leaves a son, Alan Kaufman, of the Evening Star; two daughters, Mrs. J. Shulman and Mrs. S. Greenberg, both of Washington; a sister, Mrs. Carrie Deardoff, of Philadelphia; three brothers, Morris Kaufman, of Riverdale, Md., and Sidney and Isador Kaufman, both of Washington, and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Sunday at Deal's funeral home, the time to be determined.

Athenia Survivors On Way Here

Several Believed On S. S. Orizaba; 3 Who Went Abroad For Year to Return

Washington's survivors of the Athenia disaster were believed yesterday to be on their way home on the American steamship Orizaba.

Relatives said that Mrs. Donald McLeod, of 4544 Conduit road northwest, and her three children, Betty Jean, Dorothy May and John Charles, "were supposed" to have left from Glasgow Tuesday on the ship.

Miss Hayden Stays

Mrs. A. H. Sunderland said last night that she expected word within 24 hours that her daughter Jane may have gone aboard the same ship at Galway, Eire, where she was taken after the rescue from the Athenia.

Miss Bainbridge Hayden, of Washington, at first believed to have been a passenger on the Athenia, later cabled relatives from Paris. While most other Americans were clamoring to get home, it appears that she, a free-lance writer, decided to stay closer to the thick of things for a while.

Three young Washingtonians, who reached France only a few weeks ago, expecting to stay a year, are due to start home on the next westbound trip of the Manhattan, relatives said yesterday. They are Elizabeth Dodge, Bryn Mawr student, of 3315 Fessenden street northwest; Christine Horn, National Park Seminary student, 3736 Military road northwest, and William Bell, Johns Hopkins University student, 3539 Edmunds street.

Bandits Get $154 Here in 4 Robberies

Albert A. Smith, of 2296 Champlain street northwest, was robbed of $50 by two masked and armed colored men last night as he entered his car at Second and W streets northwest. The thieves escaped in his car which was later recovered by police about a mile from the scene.

Two colored women escaped with a pocketbook containing $24 belonging to Jennie Kelen, proprietor of a dress shop at 3315 Fourteenth street northwest.

Arthur S. Beall, 2700 block Rodman street northwest, awakened in time to see a thief running out of his office with his wallet, containing $48.

Two boys held up Elizabeth Haley, of 807 Taylor street northeast, in the 1000 block of Taylor street and escaped with her purse containing $32, she reported.

Those Playwrights Seem To Have Forgotten!

'Key Largo', Their Season's First, Skips Capital; The Earle Gets a Hit on the Third Swing; This, That and the Other About the Theater

ALTHOUGH IT IS DIFFICULT to discover any reason why they should, it begins to appear as if the Playwrights' Company may have changed their minds about Washington being their favorite "try-out" city. What I mean to say is that Maxwell Anderson's "Key Largo," the Playwrights' first production of the season, starring Paul Muni in his first return to the stage in many seasons, has been booked all around, but not in, the National Capital for the period of its pre-Broadway tour.

BELL

Rehearsals of "Key Largo," under the direction of Guthrie McClintic, will begin on October 2 and the play will have its first performance in the English Opera House, Indianapolis, Ind., on October 30. Thereafter, it will be seen in Columbus and Cleveland, Ohio, and Buffalo, N. Y., before going into the Plymouth Theater, Boston, for a fortnight's engagement prior to its New York opening on November 27. How come?

Last season, it will be recalled, the new producing company's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "Knickerbocker Holiday" both played the National before going into New York, "Abe Lincoln" for the first time on any metropolitan stage. Maxwell Anderson, Robert E. Sherwood, Elmer Rice, S. N. Behrman and others concerned in the enterprises of the newly organized concern assured this column then that they looked upon Washington as the ideal city in which to break out their new productions. The fact that they were right then hardly can serve as extenuation for their being wrong now.

However, we may fare better in the case of the late Sidney Howard's "Madam Will You Walk," scheduled as the second of the Playwrights' new offerings. Elmer Rice currently is engaged in selecting a cast for this comedy, while the Messrs. Sherwood and Behrman make minor script revisions in their late associate's play. The preliminary tour of this number, as yet, has not been charted.

The Playwrights' Company hereby is reminded that both Washington and the National Theater still are on the map—or were the last time I looked out the window.

The Warner executives do not switch bookings at the Earle Theater very often, but, boy, when they do, they really switch 'em! In this instance, it is only half their fault—if there is any culpability mixed up in it anywhere. "A Child Is Born," originally announced to open on Thirteenth street tomorrow, was withdrawn of necessity because the West Coast powers that be deferred its release date, presumably for good and sufficient reasons—well, sufficient, anyhow. "What a Life," the picturization of the rollicking stage comedy of scholastic days, immediately was slated to take its place. Then a print of "Espionage Agent" came floating along out of the nowhere into the here and was promptly pounced upon as being the "hottest" item in sight. So, tomorrow on the Earle screen, it will be "Espionage Agent," starring Joel McCrea, instead of either of the other two. The picture was made under the working title of "Career Man" and is an adaptation of Katherine Brush's story of "Glitter"—all about secret service, diplomatic and other mysteries in wartime. The Warner boys and the drama desks, however, still cling to "what a life" as their slogan for the week. Show business!

This week's merry visitor to the tesselated magnificence of the drayma department was Charlie Washburn, avant-couriering for the Lunts in their gloriously cockeyed production of Master Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," with which the National will open a week from Monday. Mr. Washburn was accompanied, or vice versa, by Manager Edmund Plohn and Jo-Jo, the dog-faced dog that leads Beau Brummelian Manager Eddie around on a leash. Charlie's only complaint was that I changed that precarious word in his copy to "needling" Shakespeare, instead of what he said. Outside of that, everything was all right—I hope.

In going mildly daffy over the hit-and-run hilarity of "The Women" yesterday, I forgot to mention the Technicolor fashion revue that is dropped in about midway of the action. I learn from The Post's Marshall Adams, Meredith Howard, alias Jean Abbey, and the other distaff stylists who were present, that this costume display is really something. Such help is valuable to one who wouldn't know. All of which, of course, constitutes only one more reason why the gals should dig down into the old "first national bank" and take their guys to the midnight premiere of the picture at the Palace tonight. It's educational in more ways than one. If they haven't got the dough, I am told nobody will be arrested if the "guests" slip it to 'em somewhere this side of the box office. So now you know.

When you look at those first official war films Paramount News has brought over from Poland, at the Trans-Lux, Earle or Metropolitan, bend an eye on those Nazis who juggle the bombs in the air raid sequences. They all looked like heavyweight wrestlers. These Hackenschmidts toss bombs big enough to blow up a city around like a lot of broomsticks. That low-down "high command" seems to have thought of everything—except how to play fair.

Comes word from Herbert Drake, of the Mercury Theater, Inc., New York, that Harper & Bros. are sending this desk a review copy of the first trade edition of the Orson Welles Mercury Text Shakespeare. That will be all of that, for the time being, because the book ain't came yet. More later.

It is so unusual that it seems worth mentioning that a former officer of the United States Navy phoned the Loew offices here to say that "Thunder Afloat" was the first Navy film he had ever seen in which an old Navy man could not pick a single technical flaw. That must be some kind of a record. I take it that Commander Harvey Haislip, co-author and technical adviser of the film, is the one who is entitled to take the bow.

"Nurse Edith Cavell," the Herbert Wilcox production starring Anna Neagle, recently accorded its one-performance world premiere at, RKO-Keith's Theater, with both Mr. Wilcox and Miss Neagle in attendance, will be the attraction on Fifteenth street, following Ginger Rogers in "Fifth Avenue Girl." "Nurse Edith Cavell" is perhaps the most judiciously contrived biographical melodrama ever filmed. It is perfectly documented and leans over backwards to avoid painting a black picture any blacker than it actually was.

Personal aside to Judge Andrew R. Kelley: It's all even, Andy. They quote yours to me the same way. Something worse could happen to both of us, at that—if you know what I mean.

As between Linda Ware, the 14-year-old thrush in "The Star Maker," and Gloria Jean, the 11-year-old canary in "The Under-Pup"—both acclaimed as the discoveries" of the year among juve nile songbirds—which do you prefer? Yeah, that's the way I feel about it.

Thanks-for-the-Inquiry Note

That elegant "summer cold," picked up on the hottest day of the year, is getting along beautifully. Personally, me, I don't feel so good!

Red-Headed American Matador Trades Bull Ring for Cinema

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Sept. 20.—The great Don Manfred, best bull fighter in all Mexico—almost—hung up his scarlet cape today, put away his sword and ended his career as a matador.

His bride said if he didn't, if he loved his bulls more than he did her, she'd leave him. So the great Don Manfred made his choice and never again will he tackle El Toro.

This is important to Hollywood, because the great Don Manfred is a red-headed lad from Evansville, Ind., whose right name is Bud Boetticher, and whose wife has doomed him to the comparatively dull carreer of being assistant director at Hal Roach Studios.

"I use that word 'comparatively,'" Bud said, "because there's not much difference between some screen mothers who drag their little darlings into our office—and the enraged bulls pawing the sand and snorting before they head out after you."

Three years ago Bud went to Mexico City on a vacation after he'd finished his schooling at Ohio State and saw Lorenzo Garza, Mexico's greatest bull fighter, in action.

"I wanted to try my hand at it, too," Bud said. "So I met a man who said he'd teach me to be a bull fighter in two weeks. The cost was 60 pesos. For 100 pesos more, he said he'd also get me a bull.

So I practiced hard for those two weeks. I bought me a bull fighter's suit and I paid my extra 100 pesos, and on the great day got dressed for my first fight.

"They drove me out to the Mexico City stockyards and said I could have my pick of the bulls. This was a great blow to my pride, but I chose me a bull. Before I could even unwind my cape that bull bumped me in the stomach with its head and trampled all over me.

"That nearly ended my bull fighting, but I decided as soon as I escaped that what I needed was more lessons. I finally persuaded Carza, himself, to teach me.

"And pretty soon I really was a bull fighter. I wasn't a good one, maybe, but the Mexicans paid their good money to see what that crazy, red-headed American would do.

"For a year and a half I fought the bulls in rings all over Mexico. I had 24 fights, with good bulls and bad, and I must say it was an experience such as few men ever get.

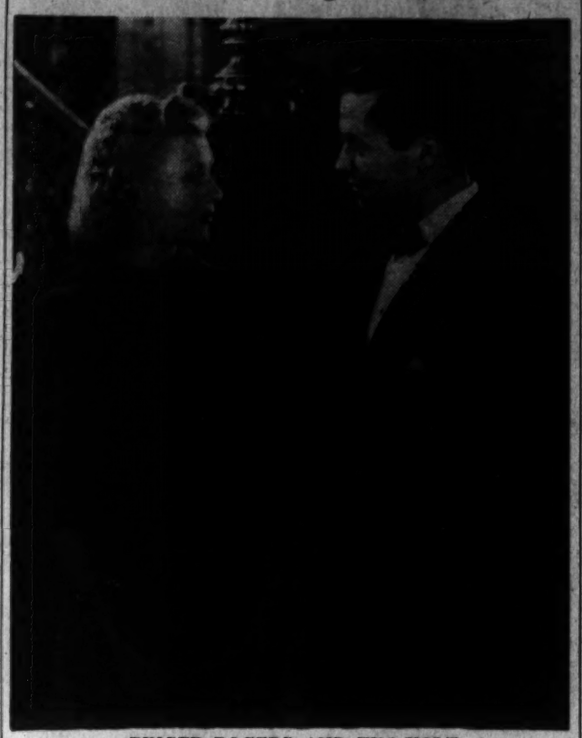
"When you're in there with a bull you get an exalted feeling. You're depending on yourself, and yourself alone, for your life, and you think almost that you're some kind of a god. Once bull fighting gets in your veins, it's mighty hard to forget."

Bud, in any event, ostensibly left the bull ring some 18 months ago, went to work in the movies, married, and managed to spend most of his Sundays mysteriously. His bride didn't know exactly what he was doing on his day off.

He actually was in Tijuana, at the border bull ring, fighting bulls.

"Only a couple of weeks ago I got in there with a bull that had fought before," he said. "That beast nearly killed me. When I got home I had to confess how I got my bruises.

'Hello, What Brings You Here?'



GINGER ROGERS AND TIM HOLT, as the working-girl guardian angel and the millionaire's son, respectively, in RKO-Radio's production of "Fifth Avenue Girl," the new film comedy-drama, opening tomorrow on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. Walter Connolly, James Ellison and Verree Teasdale also are prominently cast

Back to Tennis

His athletic roles in motion pictures having given way temporarily to modern romantic comedy in "Lucky Night," Robert Taylor has gone back into training as a tennis player.

'Stand Straight'

Jack Dawn, make-up expert, declares that exercise, diet, are of no avail while women forget to hold their heads erect, their shoulders back, and their hips in a straight line with their body.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 20 (INS).—All the time that you and I thought Baby Leroy was the "forgotten man," Paramount has been quietly grooming him for a comeback. The Baby, now 7 years old, is called Lonnie Leroy and he has been attending Page Military Academy, where he learned to ride, swim and box. Credit for keeping him going to seed goes to Jack Moss, who has been testing the boy for these many months and having him educated for a continuation of his movie career.

LOUELLA PARSONS

His first picture will be "The Biscuit Eater," by James Street, with the little Negro boy star, Cordell Hickman, who was such a hit here in "The Swing Mikado." As a baby, young Leroy gave W. C. Fields and Maurice Chevalier such competition that they said, Never again! This time Cordell and a dog will be the chief members of Baby Leroy's cast—pardon me, I mean Lonnie.

What an interesting reunion if Lillian Gish costars with Ronald Colman in "Triumph Over Pain." Ronnie made his first big screen hit in "The White Sister," starring Lillian, and he has always had a great admiration for her talent as an actress. Despite the terrific heat, La Gish has been making extensive tests all week at the Paramount studio for this picture, which Arthur Hornblow is producing. No more complete camera tests have ever been made, for Lillian is a great bet, provided she can be photographed and directed properly.

Mervyn and Doris Leroy are heading immediately for White Sulphur Springs and a month's rest for Mervyn—that is, if you can call shaping up two new pictures a rest. His first task will be "Siegfeld Girl," which is next on the Leroy production calendar. The other story tucked under his arm is "Today's Girl," which will be Lana Turner's official starring debut. Everyone at M-G-M is completely sold on the idea that they have a new star in the red-headed Turner gal, who certainly seems to have more than her share of S. A. She is very pretty and proves herself equally capable in "Dancing Co-Ed," but whether she's another Jean Harlow remains to be seen.

So many of their friends have been worried about Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon in London, that I am passing on the news received in a letter by Bebe's mother. Phyllis Daniels breathed her first sigh of relief in weeks when she got direct word from them that they were safe, still living in the city and not at all frightened: "The blackouts sound a lot more terrifying than they really are," Ben wrote. "Unbelievable as it may seem, life here goes on much the same with no signs of hysteria." Bebe and Ben are resuming their work on the vaudeville stage next week, though there are only three legitimate theaters open in London. These two are the idols of the British theatergoing public.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Florence Rice and Robert Wilcox are reported dating the stork. If so, that will make Grantland Rice a granddaddy; Garbo, Dr. Hauser and Frey Brown, his manager, sought a secluded spot at the beach to keep cool today; William Dieterle fainted after a day of directing "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" in the hot sun at the RKO Ranch; Andrea Leeds and Bob Howard will say their I do's up North and not in Hollywood; William Haines is sick—another heat victim. Florida chamber of commerce please don't copy; the U. S. C. fraternities are giving Jackie Cooper a terrific rush since they found he expects to enter there; Una Merkel was the only cool girl in town today. Marlene Dietrich threw pails of water on her to curb her movie temper.

Mary Martin took a bow at "The Drunkard," which is now playing its thousandth and some performance. She was the guest of William LeBaron and the Paul Jones; Annabelle and her daughter reached home today after a record-breaking trip on the Atlantic Clipper. More power to Annabelle for her courage and devotion to her little girl; Dorothy Lamour and Robert Preston are as torrid as the weather and looked as if they really meant it at the Villa Nova; Wendy Barrie and Edmund Anderson a Victor Hugo duet. And Ann Sheridan and Jean Negulesco are really becoming a habit, if seven nights a week mean anything; Ingrid Bergman is said to have gone straight back to Germany from here to make a picture for Goebbels. He is in charge of all German movies, so she must have his approval; Adrienne Ames and John McCormick, the agent, looking over the Earl Carroll beauties together.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Studio Technicians 'Cool Off' Morgan

Because Frank Morgan got hot under lights for color photography in "The Wizard of Oz," he will have the coolest desert home in Palm Springs next winter. Morgan talked with air-conditioning experts who worked on stages during the picture, and was told of a new method of insulating adobe for coolness. He had the insulation installed in his new desert home near La Quinta.

Garbo Aids Friend Write Film Script

Greta Garbo has turned scenarist. And, of all things, on a Western." Though she won't ask for screen credit, the Swedish star contributed several of the best "gags" in the script of "Henry Goes Arizona," Western comedy with Frank Morgan.

This was disclosed recently when Director Edwin L. Marin remarked that he was the only director who could boast having Garbo as a writer. The Swedish star is a friend of Florence Ryerson and Milton Merlin, who wrote the script. She sat in on several of their conferences, making suggestions for comedy touches.

Youthful Stand-In

James Hogan, 18-year-old namesake and nephew of Director James Hogan, currently filming "Mr. and Mrs. Bulldog Drummond," today was appointed stand-in for Ralph Morgan in "Geronimo."

Thrills and Fun Dominate New Theater Bills

Mystery and Comedy Form Ingredients of First-Run Pictures

"THE WOMEN." Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell co-star in this much-discussed film version of the Clare Boothe comedy. Not a man appears in this behind-the-scenes story of a society woman whose happiness is threatened by the gossip of her "friends." The strong supporting cast includes Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Joan Fontaine, Hedda Hopper, Lucille Watson, Florence Nash, Virginia Weidler, Cora Witherspoon, Phyllis Povah, Esther Dale, Ruth Hussey and Dennie Moore. Opens at a special performance at midnight tonight.

Earle

"ESPIONAGE AGENT." Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn and Frank McHugh are the principal performers in this new Warner Brothers release which has for its background the recent Spanish revolution. With settings in Morocco, Washington and other world capitals, the film is adapted from a Katherine Brush story, "Glitter." "College Daze," the stage revue, will feature Morton and Denison, "Serving Smiles;" "Whitey Roberts, "Laugh Insurance;" Freddy Craig, jr., the lad with the index brain, and Garfield Swift, baritone, the Earle's "Find of the Month." The Roxyettes will present special routines. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"FIFTH AVENUE GIRL." Ginger Rogers' latest comedy finds the star playing an unemployed young woman whose quick wits land her a job in a Fifth avenue mansion to straighten out the lives of its pampered occupants. While the turmoil increases with time, the goods she delivers are ultimately satisfactory. Walter Connolly is the crotchety millionaire and Veree Teasdale is his philandering wife. James Ellison, Tim Holt, Kathryn Adams and Franklin Pangborn are in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES." Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce repeat their characterizations of the great detective and his celebrated friend, Dr. Watson in this adaptation of the play by William Gillette. Alan Marshall, Ida Lupino, Terry Kilburn, Henry Stephenson, E. E. Clive and George Zucco have other leading roles. Larry Clinton and his orchestra are the stage feature of the new week's bill. This popular radio band is noted for its distinctive "swing" style. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"GOLDEN BOY." This screen adaptation of the Clifford Odets drama comes to the "Met" after a week at the Earle. The story concerns a young violinist who enters the fight game to win fame and fortune. William Holden, a newcomer, has the leading role and Barbara Stanwyck and Adolph Menjou are his costars. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"THE WIZARD OF OZ." The spectacular Technicolor fantasy returns to F street after a two-week engagement at the Palace. Judy Garland plays the little Kansas girl whom a tornado whisked up to L. Frank Baum's imaginary land of Oz. Bert Lahr, Ray Bolger, Jack Haley, Margaret Hamilton, Frank Morgan and Billie Burke are in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Singing Beauty

Little

"CAVALCADE." The Noel Coward panorama of English history since the turn of the century remains at the Little after an exceptional first week for this timely revival of an outstanding film of 1933. Diana Wynyard, Clive Brook, Herbert Mundin, Beryl Mercer, Frank Lawton, Ursula Jeans, Bonita Granville and Una O'Connor have the leading roles.

Trans-Lux

"FIVE TIMES FIVE." The Dionne Quintuplets celebrate their fifth birthday in this short subject, which was written by and features Alexander Woollcott. It is the central short at the newsreel house for the coming week. "Going Places" takes Graham MacNamee to botanical gardens of Florida and the Disney cartoon is "Good Scouts." Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

"CHINA DOLLS." Leading the parade of beauties at the burlesque house next week will be Amy Fong, the exotic Chinese display artiste, whose previous appearances at the theatre have made her a local favorite. Billy ("cheese 'n' crackers") Hagen and Billy Fields will hold the comedy spotlights. Charles Harris, Denny Lyons, Jean Wade and Vickie Wells are other featured performers. Opens Sunday afternoon.

Open Air

"HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT." Charles Boyer and Jean Arthur are costarred in this shipboard romance, which culminates in the shipwreck of the giant liner. Boyer is the chief steward who falls in love with the wife of a rich industrialist. Colin Clive and Leo Carillo are featured. Opens tonight to run through Saturday.

Atlas

"FALL FROLICS." A stage revue featuring Charles Abbot and Gus Robey will open at the Northeast theater on Sunday afternoon to continue through Tuesday. Bert St. Clair, feminine dancing star; the Hollywood Stunt Actors, a group of filmland doubles; the O'Connor Twins, a dancing duo, and George Berg's swing orchestra complete the stage bill. "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever" will be the screen attraction.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 20.

ONE OF THE people most perplexed by the new Nazi-Russian pact is Mrs. Nijinsky, wife of the famous dancer . . . Nijinsky went mad in 1914 and had a complete mental blackout until a few years ago. Then, during his lucid interval, his wife tried to explain to him all the changes which had transpired—the movies, radio and government. Nijinsky expressed great surprise at the change in Russia, and asked constant questions about the Soviet Union—and how it differed from the Fascist regimes . . . Nijinsky then had another relapse, from which he has just recovered. In letters to friends here his wife now confesses to her most difficult problem—that of explaining to him the baffling Soviet-Nazi tieup.

THE OFFICERS of the friends of Abraham Lincoln Brigade have been subpenaed to testify before the Dies Committee. They will be called in November . . . Because of the puzzling developments abroad, the "Angels of Peace" number was removed last night from "Pins and Needles" . . . Mrs. John Gunther, who was operated upon last week, is showing improvement, and so her husband has postponed his return from Europe.

AT THE 200th performance of "Philadelphia Story" Author Phil Barry wired Katharine Hepburn and the rest of the cast: "Congratulations, thanks—and astonishment. Phil" . . . Paul Draper will appear with Bea Lillie and Ray Bolger in the new show Howard Dietz and Arthur Schwartz are writing . . . Harms ill publish the Unfinished Symphony which Mickey Borden—portrayed by John Garfield—wrote in "4 Daughters." It will be called "Living for Love." The movie ended with Garfield committing suicide—for love . . . Richard Himber disbanded his orchestra and now has a new band. He'll play at the Pierre and will broadcast for Studebaker.

WALTER FRIEDMAN, the fight manager who brought Primo Carnera to this country, now has a new, strange charge—a deaf mute called Silent Joe Hill . . . Friedman brought his fighter into Lindy's, ordered some roast beef for him and then told his cohorts about the new fortune he expects to glean . . . "Can you imagine," he beamed. "A deaf and dumb champion. We'll clean up" . . . Silent Joe Hill paid no apparent heed to this conversation and studied the roast beef placed before him . . . Make that roast beef lean," Hill told the waiter . . . "Maybe I should've told you," Friedman apologized to his friends. "He talks a little."

READERS DIGEST wanted to send J. P. McEvoy to Europe to write articles about the countries which are neutral. McEvoy decided not to go—fearful that by the time he arrived he'd have no subject matter. . . . The World's Fair officials are negotiating to revive the Beaux Arts Ball, as a closing event at the Fair. All the Midway stars will participate. . . . Hy Gardner, the Brooklyn Eagle columnist, is moving his activities to Hollywood. In addition to writing his own column he'll work with Hedda Hopper . . . Von Luckner, the German naval hero, returned to Berlin from Australia two weeks ago, but doesn't expect to re-enter the service.

THE MOVIE version of Louis Bromfield's "The Rains Come" had its premiere in Mansfield, Ohio—the town to which Bromfield returned after many years' residence in France . . . All the townsfolk participated in the civic celebration . . . The Mayor of Mansfield made the introductory speech: "We're proud that our native son has returned to us, his people—proud that he's come home to us despite the fame which now is his. This is a great day for Mansfield and I am proud to introduce that famous man, that writer of renown, our very own—Mr. Louis Broomfield!"

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 20.—One of the nicest things that's happened during this banker appeasement conflict going on, is the attitude of the contract players at Fox, who have offered to reduce their salaries if Coach Florence Enright be retained at the studio. They know what her loss means.

HOPPER

More than a year ago Metro did the same thing and let Phyllis Loughton go. And Phyllis just might have saved them $900,000—the cost on the shelved Hedy Lamarr picture. Hedy had been coaching with her for six months, and just before the picture started, the purge came. And no pleas of Hedy could persuade them to get her back.

But it was a different story on "Lady of the Tropics." And I like Hedy for saying that if her work was good in that picture, she owed it all to Phyllis Loughton. And for those who are shouting Hosannas to Ann Sothern, you might like to know that Ann says the same thing. When she got her script of "Trade Winds" she took it to Phyllis; they've worked together ever since. Randy Scott never does a picture without her. One of our best-known players at this moment is staging a come-back with the help of Loughton. But when a purge comes, these important people are the first to go. But we call it penny-pinching!

After two days work in "Strange Money," Paramount discovered they had a sensation in 20-year-old Jim Seay, who was discovered at the Pasadena Playhouse. He was getting $50 a day with an option for a contract at $75 a week and a six months contract. Everybody raved; but after a general meeting they decided that in these days of retrenchment, they couldn't afford to put him under contract. Yet they're searching the highways for leading men!

Which reminds me that Bob Cummings goes to Fox for Sonja Henie's picture, then Paramount wants to borrow him. A little over six months ago, Bob made $600 a week. He wanted $750. They dropped him. When he goes back it will be at $3,000.

Wonder why Jeanette and Gene Raymond have named their house Twin Gables? Shouldn't that belong to Clark and Carole who are hoping?

Mickey Rooney tells me about his own faux pas. When in New York recently, he dined 12 of his pals at the swank Colony Restaurant, and ordered tomato soup, corned beef and cabbage and chocolate ice cream. After which the chef swooned.

Mickey, on the twenty-third of this month, will celebrate his twentieth birthday. But already he's received his present from his buddy Louis B. Mayer. Papa Louis has given him 20 acres near Fresno with a bunk house, stable and six horses. And here I've never been able to get a tip on one of his horses—and I was in his first picture! Didn't the Good Book say something about the first shall be last, and the last first?

Which reminds me of that book Charles and Elsa Laughton wrote. There was a typographical error. It read: "He had been given a delft blue plague" instead of a "delft blue plaque." Since then he's been hounded by letters asking what kind of disease that is?

When drums rolled for the last war Mae Marsh was winning our hearts in "The Birth of a Nation." Now she's in "Drums Along the Mohawk."

Joan and Brian Aherne are doing a "Dark Victory" in real life. They don't mention—war.

It isn't very smart to scare a bachelor. Brod Crawford tells me he won't appear in public except with his mother. Too dangerous—if you go out with anyone else you're either engaged, sued, or both!

I hope it isn't true that the Myron Selznick's have separated. David Selznick told me he'd give anything if he could move the release date of "Gone With the Wind" up, but Technicolor is so slow they won't have the prints ready before Thanksgiving.

I've never seen so many screwy headpieces. I don't mean wigs or toupees, either. Incidentally, did you know war has cancelled all importation of hair? Those poor boys who need a cover for that bald spot are hoarding. Some of our Beau Brummels have ordered six toupees, so Max Factor tells me.

Harry Crocker's question: "Which would you rather be, an egg or a marble?" went buzzing around the Troc like wildfire. Ask him for the answer.

Brian Donlevy told me they had doubles all ready and rehearsed to do the fight for Marlene and Una Merkel in "Destry." When Marlene heard about it, she said: "Nothing doing. I'll do my own fighting, as well as acting." She did and the only casualty was loss of skin from elbow to wrist. But was Una nervous? Her third picture at Universal—in the first she hit Warren Hymer with wrong pitcher nad split his head open. In the second, had to get out of a straight jacket, nearly knocked herself out doing it. Now she's relaxing, and happy she didn't do any worse to Dietrich!

Frances Farmer and Leif Erickson have announced their divorce. See if we care! And that goes for Luise Rainer now on her way back to Hollywood. I know one who won't welcome her with open arms.

Stage Bit Players Head Movie Cast

Rita Johnson and Tom Neal are playing opposite each other for the first time since a stage play gave them their start.

In the fall of 1935, Miss Johnson and Neal made their Broadway debuts in a Theater Guild play, "If This Be Treason." In it, they played brother and sister, each had only three lines, which they spoke to each other.

Eventually both came to Hollywood where they were assigned the leading roles in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's prison feature, "They All Come Out."

Fixes Plane

Wallace Beery has turned plane mechanic in a big way. With the new power lathe recently installed in his home workshop, he is making bearings for the shock absorbers on his monoplane.

Odd Locales Feature New Season's Films

Hollywood's desperate search for "something different" these days is leading it into unexpected places.

A dog show, for instance, becomes the setting for the G-man mystery drama, "Death of a Champion," which returns Lynne Overman to the role of Oliver Quade, the Federal sleuth. And if you've ever attended a dog show, you'll appreciate the trouble Director Kurt Neuman is having to get quiet on the sets.

Albert Dekker, Janice Logan and other members of the "Dr. Cyclops" cast are working on sets where everything is of Brobdingnagian proportions. The explanation is that the people are supposed to have been reduced by a mysterious formula to Lilliputian size.

Snarling spark-gaps, steaming retorts and Flash Gordon machinery surround William Henry, Judith Barrett and William Collier, sr., on the "Television Spy" set.

A wrecked submarine—suggested, no doubt, by the Squalus disaster—takes Robert Preston to the ocean floor in "Typhoon," technicolor saga of the Dutch East Indies. But he gets out all right, and spends the rest of the picture on a jungle island with Dorothy Lamour.

The inside of the South African diamond mines—with most of the equipment, including fluoroscopes for detecting swallowed gems—has been re-created for the Isa Miranda-George Burns picture, "Diamonds are Dangerous."

Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Will Fyffe do a scene in a Scottish machine shop of 100 years ago for Frank Lloyd's sea saga, "Rulers of the Sea"—and maybe you don't think the property department had trouble accumulating enough authentic machinery!

An eerie Louisiana manse, bordering a bayou inhabited by alligators, is the locale of "The Cat and the Canary," a spine-chiller starring Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard.

Basil Rathbone and Boris Karloff—Brr!—find themselves in the Tower of London in Universal's picture of that title, and Charles Laughton climbs around on the face of Notre Dame Cathedral for R. K. O.'s "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

But the oddest of all sights you'll see on the screen this season will be the mighty maws of Martha Raye and Joe E. Brown—both in the same close-up—in "$1,000 a Touchdown."

Louis K. O.'s Stubborn Pastor in 11th

Crowd of 33,868 Sees Challenger Fail to Run Away

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Staff Writer

Briggs Stadium, Detroit, Sept. 20.—Minus just about all of the fire and fury that has chopped down his most recent opponents mercilessly, but still packing dynamite in his fists, Joe Louis knocked out Bob Pastor in 11 rounds tonight to retain his world's heavyweight championship.

But he was no longer the Brown Bomber, the dusky destroyer who dynamited Max Schmeling, John Henry Lewis and Tony Galento so completely.

He had Pastor down on the floor four times in the first round from right-hand punches, and again in the second the former New York University footballer was on the verge of annihiliation. On two other occasions, Bob was badly hurt. Yet each time the knockout spark was lacking. Joe was slow to take advantage of the opportunities and seemed unable to box with the gallant rival who came up off the floor, defended beautifully, and even came back to carry the fight to the champion in the later heats.

A crowd of 33,868 braved chilly, fall weather to turn out for the show in this huge home of the Detroit Tigers, Louis' favorite baseball club. The gross gate was $347,870. The actual paid attendance was 32,199 and the net gate $296,000.

Short Right Ends It

Pastor tired, however, and that in the end cost him the fight just past the midway mark of the first scheduled 20-round heavyweight title fight in a quarter century. Less than half a minute after the eleventh round got under way, Louis suddenly leaped in and fired a short right and Pastor went down.

He rose to his knees at the count of four, but couldn't go any farther. There he huddled, head hanging and blood dripping from a cut over his left eye, as Referee Sam Hennessy counted the full ten over him, finishing at the 38-second mark of the round to give Louis the eighth successful defense of his title since he took it from old Jim Braddock in 1937.

In his dressing room later Pastor said he "didn't see the punch coming."

"My eye was full of blood," he explained, "and I was blinded. The punch paralyzed me and I didn't know anything until I heard the referee count nine."

Climbs on "Bicycle"

Bob climbed on his "bicycle" again this time, just as he backpedaled in his first fight with Louis in '37, but tonight he came forward time after time to throw short lefts to the face and to land once or twice with a right hand.

With this bout past, Louis looks forward to a return match with Tony Galento, who gave him a lot of trouble for three rounds last June. This fight is scheduled for next summer. Promoter Mike Jacobs indicated he may give Pastor another crack at the champion, after Bob fights once or twice more, and immediately Jimmy Johnston, Pastor's manager, asked for Galento.

At the start tonight it didn't appear that Pastor was going to last any longer with Louis than did Schmeling, Lewis and Jack Roper, all of whom were put away in less than a round.

Louis came out swinging and belted Bob to the floor with a right near his own corner. Pastor was up with no count, and promptly went down again from a couple more of those terrific right hand bombs. This time he took a nine-count before climbing up but it was only to go down once more, for a count of seven. He weathered the storm for a few moments after that, but was dropped to one knee just at the bell.

A right hand chopped him down for the fifth time as they battled through the second round. Then he trotted out his bicycle and started to back away, boxing beautifully, feinting and circling the champion out of position.

In the fourth, with Louis trailing him like a panther and seeming to be waiting an opening for a right hand shot, Pastor made his first bid. He danced forward and connected with three lefts and a right.

Late in the fifth round Pastor's mouthpiece fell to the canvas, and just before the bell Louis drew blood from inside his unprotected lips with two rights. Again in the sixth Pastor's knees buckled as that right hand cannon fired its shells.

Blood dripped from the cut over

Bob Pastor, down and out. Referee Sam Hennessey starts to wave Joe Louis to a neutral corner before beginning the fatal count of ten over Bob Pastor in the eleventh round last night at Detroit, where Pastor's championship hopes ended in a flurry of Louis' punches to the jaw. Louis stands glowering over his fallen foe before retreating to a corner after the knockdown. The end came in 38 seconds of the eleventh round

Bob Pastor Made Game Stand—Louis

Joe Unmarked After the Battle; Pastor Blinded

By the United Press.

Detroit, Sept. 20.—Joe Louis was surprised at the gameness shown by Bob Pastor in their heavyweight title fight at Briggs Stadium tonight.

"But I went out to get him in the eleventh round and I guess I did," Louis said in his dressing room afterward.

Jack Blackburn, the champion's trainer, nodded his head.

"That's what he told me just before the eleventh round started," Blackburn said.

Louis didn't have a scratch on his body, but John Roxborough, comanager, admitted that the Brown Bomber was "shaken up" a bit.

"Pastor shook him with a right in the eighth, but Joe came out of it," said Roxborough. "That was the only blow that really touched him."

Across the hall in Pastor's dressing room there was a bustle of activity as they worked over Pastor, stopping the flow of blood from one cut.

"I hurt him in the first, third and eighth rounds," said Pastor, his nose battered and his left eye bleeding. "When I went down, his punches didn't hurt me. I didn't see the last punch because of the blood in my eye. All I know was it was a right."

Pastor was obviously tired. In marked contrast, Louis appeared as though he had just taken a workout at his training camp.

Indians Rout Nats, 7-2, Gain Third Place

By Shirley Povich.

In the spirit of the times, the Cleveland Indians pulled a blitzkrieg on the Nats yesterday. The Cleveland legions started moving across the plate in the first inning and scored five runs before Joe Krakauskas could get anybody out. After that there was merely the business of mopping up. Cleveland won the ball game, 7 to 2.

Dealt that demolishing first-inning blow, the Nats were a beaten ball club for the rest of the game. Breezing behind his 5-0 lead, Mel Harder yielded the Nats only six hits and nothing more important than a single.

All for Naught

The Indians, in fact, made only seven hits, but they produced four of 'em in that first-inning onslaught against the hapless Krakauskas, who was having a horrible time of it. Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats was credited with the first put-out of the game. He put Krakauskas out after the first seven Indians to face Krakky reached base.

Joe Haynes and Rookies Bucky Jacobs and Louis Thuman collaborated in holding the Indians to three hits in the last eight innings, but they were performing in a lost cause. A 5-0 lead for Harder is tantamount to a Cleveland victory most any day and yesterday was no exception.

Krakauskas exhibited little except bravery under fire. Leroy Boudreau whacked him for a single to center

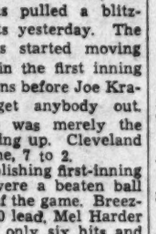
Durocher Fined; Refused to Heed Ejection Order

By the Associated Press

Sportsmans Park, St. Louis, Sept. 20.—Leo Durocher, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was fined $25 today for refusing to leave the bench after being ejected from yesterday's game with the Cardinals by Umpire George Magerkurth.



—DUROCHER

Durocher received a wire that read: "For refusal to leave bench and delaying game yesterday you are fined $25, payable this office in five days." It was signed, Ford Frick.

This brought the total of fines paid by Durocher to the league to $150. He said he would appeal to Frick on the ground that he hadn't used profane language in arguing with Magerkurth and that he felt, because of the serious nature of the game and because he had no coaches, that allowance should have been made to permit him to manage the team from the bench.

Bogart Is Medalist In District Amateur

Plays Burning Tree in 74; Peacock, Nolan, Pittman, Rippy Next With 76; Higgins and Gipe Post 77 Totals

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Ralph Bogart, the 19-year-old youngster that a half dozen pros have tabbed as the most likely prospect among the local golfers, took down medal honors in the District amateur championship yesterday at Burning Tree with a 2-over-par 74.

Playing the out nine in 35, 1 under regulation figures, the Army and Navy Club champion and District schoolboy titleholder slipped 3 over par coming back, but he was at least 2 strokes ahead of the small field all the way through.

Four Tie at 76

Four of the top amateurs of the city, including the cofavorites, Roger Peacock and Claude Rippy, of Indian Spring, and M. Parker Nolan and Gene Pittman, of Congressional, deadlocked a 76, second best score of the day, while Ray Higgins, Capital, and Jimmy Gipe, Beaver Dam, were next with 77.

Walter R. Tuckerman, vice president and golf committee chairman of the host club and District champion in 1914 and 1923, was among the championship flight qualifiers with a 42, 37—79, and drew Rippy as a first-round opponent this morning.

Bogart, medalist in the Indian Spring Club championship with a 68, dropped two birdies in his out nine of 35, both chip shots that stopped on the lip of the cup. He had a lone birdie on the back nine, on the par 5 sixteenth, and lost two strokes on the preceding hole when he encountered the rough and trap before holing out in 6, two over par.

Birdie Deuces

Pittman and Nolan, playing partners, played the last five holes alike, including birdie deuces on the fourteenth, in posting the 76s, while Pittman also chipped in for a 2 on the third. The two 77s, Higgins, with the best back nine of the day,

Vanderbilt Tied By T. P. I., 13-13

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 20 (AP).—Little Tennessee Polytechnic Institute handed Vanderbilt a first-class surprise today with an aerial attack that cost the Commodores a 13-to-13 tie in their first football game of the season.

A 25-yard pass from Herbert Bridges to Russell Priest counted 6 points, and Ralph Williams' placekick added another in the last three minutes of the game to nullify a lead Vandy had held from midway in the third period.

Browns Come Through, Beat Bosox in 16th

By International News Service

Boston, Sept. 20.—Just before darkness took a hand in the proceedings, the St. Louis Browns put an end to a 16-inning battle with the Boston Red Sox, 11 to 8, by counting three runs today.

Boston's defeat cut the Red Sox second-place lead over the Cleveland Indians to 3½ games.

Lefty Ostermueller, third of four Red Sox pitchers, went in in the ninth and was charged with the defeat, while Bob Harris, who gave the Sox four hits in the final nine frames, was credited with the victory.

Ted Williams homered for the Sox. The Browns got 22 hits to Boston's 13.

Rams Beaten, 23 to 12, by Brooklyn

Brooklyn, Sept. 20 (AP).—Coming from behind after Cleveland had taken an early lead, the Brooklyn Dodgers defeated the Rams in a National Pro Football League game tonight, 23 to 12. The contest drew a crowd of 12,423.

The game started out as a scoring orgy, touchdowns coming at three-minute intervals for the first nine minutes. The Rams scored first after Jim Benton had run the opening kickoff back to the Cleveland 49. A series of passes, with Parker Hall on the throwing end and Gaylon Smith, Vic Spadaccini and Benton on the receiving end, culminated in Benton romping over the goal on a pass play good for 18 yards.

The Dodgers came right back with a score of their own, marching 5 yards, after the kickoff. Ace Parker slipped around his right end for 22 yards for the touchdown.

A great pass play brought the second Dodger touchdown. Parker hurled a 46-yard pass to Perry Schwartz, who caught it on the Ram 20, fell, got up, and sprinted over the goal.

Veteran Racing Driver Killed At Indianapolis

HARRIS

Harris died at the Methodist Hospital two hours after the accident. His head was crushed and he was lacerated over his entire body.

The car was traveling at a rate of approximately 116 miles an hour when it hit the wall at the southwest turn. Harris was thrown out against the wall and rolled approximately 50 feet. Stapp stayed with the car and was one of the first to reach Harris.

Round-by-Round of Louis' Knockout of Bob Pastor

ROUND ONE

Pastor landed a light left to the nose as he tried to feint Louis open. Louis bounced a left hook off the jaw. The champion cracked a hard right to the cheek and then shot a straight left to the nose. Louis was moving slowly. Pastor landed a solid right on the cheek and Louis covered up as Bob came in fast with both hands flailing. Louis shook Pastor with a smashing right to the face and floored him with a right and another pair of rights floored him once more. He was up after a short count and tried to hold on. Louis dropped him to one knee with a short right at the bell.

ROUND TWO.

Louis rushed out and stabbed with his left as Pastor backed away. A short right caught Bob on the cheek as he tried to hold. Louis cracked another right and straight left to the face as Pastor lashed at him. Pastor skipped around the champion, staying out of reach. Bob dropped a short right to the mid-section. Louis missed a left and landed a right on the ear. A smashing right shook Pastor to the heels, and several straight lefts bloodied his nose. Pastor shot a straight left to Louis' nose. A vicious right dropped Pastor for a count of nine. Pastor's head snapped back from two hard lefts and he backed away at the bell.

ROUND FIVE

Louis shot left and right to the body as they went into a clinch. The Bomber sent two lefts to the face and left to the body. Pastor landed light lefts to the face and hung on as Louis fired a left to the body. Pastor boxed and missed twice with his left. Pastor shot his right to the champion's chin. Pastor sent short right under the heart and took left to the face. The crowd roared as Louis missed five straight punches. Louis fired smashing right and then left and right and left and Pastor was badly hurt.

Louis' round.

ROUND SIX.

Louis sent light left to the body and

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

One of the livelier debates of big league baseball for the past few years has concerned the somewhat famed Yankees-Indians trade of the winter of 1935-36 when Pitchers Johnny Allen and Monty Pearson exchanged uniforms. For three years thereafter, the performances of the two pitchers constituted such a stand-off that neither club could claim a clear victory in the deal.

POVICH

With their new clubs, both Allen and Pearson continued their winning ways. In the year that Allen won 20 games against 10 defeats, 1937, Pearson contributed 19 wins to the Yankees' pennant drive against 7 defeats. There was not, indeed, much to choose. This season, the stalemate has continued. Allen has won 10 games for the Indians, Pearson, 9 for the Yankees.

But this season it is not difficult to decide beyond any tenable argument which club was the winner in that deal four years ago. The Yankes were, decidedly, the winners. Because this season another phase of the deal has made itself apparent. Ever hear of Steve Sundra?

Like 13th Bun in Baker's Dozen

Well, Sundra, it may or may not be remembered, was a part of that Yankee-Cleveland deal made at Chicago in December, 1935. He was tossed into the trade by the Indians along with Allen like the thirteenth bun in a baker's dozen. He was a sort of no-account pitcher with the Newark Bears at the time, and if the Yankees wanted him they could have him, Cleveland said. The Yanks took him.

What they took when they took Sundra four years ago was the pitcher who this season is an all-fired sensation in the American League—the only pitcher of any great measure of activity, who boasts an undefeated record. When Sundra licked the Chicago White Sox yesterday it was his eleventh consecutive victory. He has been no mean help to the Yankees in their pennant drive.

Sundra this sason has eclipsed both of the big-shot stars who figured with him in the three-player trade. In point of games won and lost, his record is by far the best in the league. It isn't the sort of a fluke record that Tom Zachary compiled for the Yankees several years ago when he, too, won 11 games and lost none, only to draw his release at the end of the season, notwithstanding.

Weiss Responsible for Sundra Deal

Sundra has not achieved his victories by relief pitching, as did Zachary, who saw duty in the fag-end of ball games and benefited from the Yankees' famed come-from-behind slugging. Sundra has started 10 games for the Yanks this year and completed eight of them, a better than tolerable record. He has pitched 114 innings, allowed an average of less than two runs per game, which does not take into account unearned runs scored against him.

And so, when the Pearson-Allen deal is recapitulated again at the end of this season, the Yankees must be accounted the winner.

At the time when Sundra was Cleveland property and pitching for the Bears, the Yankees did not own the Newark club. The man to whom they owe the presence of Sundra is George Weiss, former president of the International League who, when he joined the Yankees as general manager of their farm system, remembered the name of a pitcher he had taken a fancy to at Newark, and insisted that Sundra be included in the deal.

Former Batboy Nats' Finest Prospect

Finest prospect among the raft of Washington rookies called to Griffith Stadium from minor league farms during the past week is a former bat-boy of the Chattanooga club. He is a shortstop and his name is Hal Quick, who led the South Atlantic League in virtually everything when the season ended at Greenville two weeks ago.

Young Quick joined the Nats at Philadelphia two weeks ago and played in three games with the club on the road before Harris brought his squad to Griffith Stadium for a home stand. With the return of the Nats, Harris was called into Clark Griffith's office for a check-up on the new talent Griffith had not seen in action.

"How is this lad Quick?" asked Griffith. "Does he look to be any account?"

Harris did not wax enthusiastic. "He has nice action out there and is a fair sort of ball player," said Harris, "but he's not big enough. He's too small."

The Nats' manager had scarcely delivered that opinion when into Griffith's office sauntered young Quick to affix his name to a Washington contract.

Griffith looked the young fellow over. "So you're Quick, huh? Well, go over there and stand back-to-back with Bucky Harris. I want to see how tall you are."

Quick was 2 inches taller than Harris.

Homers by Martin, Gutteridge Beat Dodgers Again, 10-4

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 20.—The Cardinals' unconquerable spirit burst Brooklyn's bonds today with two furious rallies in the late innings for a 10 to 4 conquest that kept them still within 2½ games of the Cincinnati Reds.

For five innings Hugh Casey, the Dodgers' rookie star, held the Red Birds to three hits and one run—a homer by Don Gutteridge in the fourth—but with two out in the sixth the St. Louis sluggers forced across four runs on four hits and an error and in the eighth they got five more on five hits, including a home run by Stu Martin with two on.

Bucky Wins 26th Of Season; Scores Winning Run in 9th

Cincinnati, Sept. 20.—Bucky Walters won his twenty-sixth hurling victory of the year and gave the Reds a ninth-inning 3-to-2 triumph over Philadelphia today—helped by a break when he was hit in the back by a pitched ball.

The Reds' vaunted hitting attack still was missing, but afield they backed up Walters' six-hit performance in flawless fashion.

Lonnie Frey's tenth homer tied the score in the fifth after Morrie Arnovich's fourth-frame circuit clout had put the Phils ahead, but that, aside from a third-inning tally resulting from Gus Suhr's error, proved all the Rhinelanders could do against the slants of "Boom Boom" Beck.

The break came when Walters, his usually potent bat silent through the day, came up to open the ninth. One of Beck's fast ones clipped him between the shoulder blades and he took first. Werber sacrificed and Frey was deliberately passed.

Mrs. Meckley Takes Indian Spring Women's Golf Title

Mrs. Stokes Beaten, 2 Up, In 1st Final

Kenwood Medalist Upset by Mrs. Lupton With Stymie on 18th Miss Brown Moves Up

Mrs. Betty P. Meckley was crowned Indian Spring Women's Club champion yesterday in the first of the week's eight title tournaments to be concluded when she defeated Mrs. Walter R. Stokes on the final green, 2 up. It was Mrs. Meckley's only match in the abbreviated tourney, having advanced to the finals by default.

The new champion was 1-up at the turn, held the margin through the seventeenth and won the final hole to clinch the title. Mrs. Stokes three putted five greens, while Mrs. Meckley was guilty of but one putting lapse.

Biggest upset of the day found medalist and former champion Mrs. A. A. McEntee eliminated at Kenwood, Mrs. E. C. Lupton winning 1-up, by the margin of a stymie on the eighteenth. Mrs. McEntee was 4-down at the turn, rallied to go 1-up at sixteen but lost the last two holes and the match. Mrs. J. C. Dale and Mrs. Lupton will meet for the title today.

Sally Whipple and Mrs. Don Johnson are opponents for the Washington Golf and Country Club championship today, advancing with respective victories over Mrs. R. E. Hotze and Mrs. R. I. Bailey.

Mrs. David Clark continued to win by one-sided margins at Army and Navy, and will meet Corby Cup Champion Mrs. M. K. Barrol for the Service Club crown this morning.

Diffenbaugh Victor in Pro Sweepstakes

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 20.—Otto Greiner, Rodgers Forge linksman, set the pace for the amateur contestants in the medal play tournament of the Maryland State Golf Association today at the Suburban Club with a sub-par 69. The tournament was one part of a triple event.

In the pro sweepstake George Diffenbaugh, of Kenwood, shot a 68, two under par, to lead this division, and in the combined am-pro group, two teams tied. One was Diffenbaugh teamed with W. W. Wallace, with a 65, and the other was Ralph Beach, home pro, playing as partner to the club champion, Nathan H. Kaufman, jr., with the same score. Diffenbaugh and Arthur Urban had 68.

In the 18-hole medal play L. Mackall of Chevy Chase had 78-7-71.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 20.—It will come as a crushing blow to 10,000,000 improvers of the breed to learn today that there is virtually no hope that the next race on which the sweepstake draw is scheduled to be made—the Cesarwitch, a month hence—will be run.

CONSIDINE

The English Jockey Club yesterday announced that its remaining racing fixtures of the year have been cancelled, although it extended a faint hope that it might squeeze in that one race, realizing how much disappointment the cancellation of the Cesarewitch would cause in America. For here three times every year, high principled sportsmen turn out to the number of about 10,000,000 to do their bit to improve the English thoroughbred by buying a sweep ticket.

Two times out of three the American breed improvers unwittingly buy a ticket printed in Hoboken on old cigaret paper and palmed off at $2.50 per copy as the real McCoy. The American racketeers who have moved in on the original racket have no souls and carry their counterfeiting of the contraband tickets to such lengths that they even send the suckers a phoney receipt, which must be classed as little casino in depravity.

They'll Be Dipping for Winners in a Month

However, Cesarewitch or no Cesarewitch, there will be a draw a month hence at Dublin's mansion house, with the pretty nurses dipping bare arms into the huge boiler and plucking out (inevitably) the names of all the comical dialecticians in the Bronx and Brooklyn, including the WPA garbage man who signed his ticket "last chance." There will be no capital prizes of $150,000, however, if the Cesarewitch is not run, holders of tickets on the 95 eligibles for the race will slice the huge melon evenly, each lucky ticket holder getting $4,735. There will be a smaller number of lesser prizes from what the philanthropic operators of the polite swindle call residual pool, a pot whose size is arbitrarily set by the promoters after the said promoters have snatched out untold fortunes under the cloak of gentle charity.

If the war hadn't come along, the sweep might have been kayoed anyway, or at least badly cut. We happen to know that the United States attorney's office for the southern district of New York, had been closing in very quickly on the highly regarded fraud and planned to spring a series of surprises just about the time the erudite Sidney Freeman, former Brooklyn gambler who now control's England's famous betting house, Duggie, came over to take his suite at the Ritz-Carlton and buy up the tickets of lucky but timorous breed-improvers at fearful bargain rates.

U. S. Planned Blow at Sweep

The government planned to hit the sweep at its most vulnerable point, below the money belt. Most of the money collected in this country for tickets, and shipped to Dublin, is sent by drafts. Central agents of the sweep in this country made a habit of having the big steamship lines handle the intricate transfer of money for them. Briefly the steamship companies, including one that has been kept alive by United States subsidies, would issue the draft in the name of the sweep agent, then instruct him to indorse it to the sweep, thus circumventing the danger of the steamship lines trafficking directly with the Treasury Department of the Irish racket.

In some distant day, when men stop killing one another long enough to watch the bangtails run again, the sweeps inevitably will come back:—hell, high water and the laws of the United States (where 70 per cent of its tickets are sold) nothwithstanding. And prosper, too, for the promoters by that time will not have forgotten their little secret of selecting their winners only from among the lowly, who in turn (as if by some mischievous Irish trick) rush to the nearest newsreel camera and slaughter the king's English, and unconsciously convert new millions of breed improvers.

Chicago Series To Start Oct. 4

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Chicago city series between the National League Cubs and the American League White Sox will open with a night game at Comiskey Park, the Sox home ground, on Wednesday, October 4.

The second game will be played at Comiskey Park the afternoon of Thursday, October 5.

3-Day Cup Regatta To Begin Tomorrow

Nation's Top Outboard Drivers to Compete In First Day's Events; First Two Heats Of President's Cup Race Scheduled Saturday

By Ken Harter.

A noise not unlike the rat-a-tat of a thousand machine guns will reverberate over the Potomac tomorrow morning as the Nation's speediest outboard drivers, both amateur and professional, open the powerboat section of the President's Cup Regatta. The three-day event will be climaxed Sunday with the final heat of the President's Cup race.

Tomorrow will be devoted to outboards, with the first two heats of the President's Cup race and the A. P. B. A. championships, for 225-inch displacement boats, scheduled Saturday.

The amateur events tomorrow will be spiced by the entries of Clint Ferguson, of Waban, Mass., and Jim Mullen, of Richmond, Va. Both drivers have been waging a battle for amateur honors this season, along with Gar Wood, jr., of Algonac, Mich., who is not far behind.

D. C. Drivers Entered

The professional drivers will be headed by the North Bergen, N. J., boat manufacturer, Fred Jacoby, who has set the pace with his flyaway for the past several years.

While the fans are awaiting the start of the regatta, boat experts have focused their attention on the 135 and 225 class races besides the President's Cup event.

The 135-cubic inch displacement hydroplane race is headed by two Washington drivers, John L. Hyde, jr., who will drive his Gypsy Lass, and Andy Crawford, who will pilot his Edandy. Both drivers have broken the existing world records for this type of boat this year and the race will serve more or less as a "rubber" meeting between the two. Hyde shattered the mark at Red Bank, while Crawford pushed his craft to 54 miles per hour to win the event at Detroit.

Cooper Heads List

These two won't have the race all to themselves, however, because there are other well known names among the entries such as S. Mortimer Auerbach and Edison Hedges, of Atlantic City, Sam Crooks, of Rumson, N. J., and Frederick H. Hahn 3d, of Philadelphia.

The American Power Boat Association championship for 225 boats has a glorified entry list of more than a dozen. Jack (Pop) Cooper, 59-year-old Kansas City veteran, heads the list in this event.

Cooper, in his Tops III, has won a handful of titles this summer. Several other competitors will hold a strong hand in the race here, however. Gibson Bradfield, of Barnesville, Ohio, has a new boat, Bad News, which will undoubtedly give Cooper plenty of competition, as will George Schrafft, of Newton, Mass., in his Chrissie III, and T. R. Chatfield, of Danbury, Conn., in his Viper III. W. R. Gatewood's Miss Manteo II, of Norfolk, Va., is also given a good chance to come out on top in this race of veterans.

Six In President's Race

The President's Cup entries are status quo, with six scheduled to face the starting gun in the first heat Saturday. They are My Sin, owned by Zal Simmons, jr., of Detroit; Notre Dame, owned by Herbert Mendelson of Detroit; Miss Canada III, owned by Harold Wilson, of Ingersol, Canada; Arctic Turn, owned by E. T. Chase, of Baltimore; Why Worry, owned by W. E. Cantrell, of Louisville, and So Long, owned by L. J. Fageol, of Los Angeles.

Victory Morn Wins $10,000 Handicap at Havre de Grace

Maryland Horse Wins By 2 Lengths

Mission Step Runs Second in Field Of Juvenile Stars; Double Pays $92.10

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 20.—The $10,000 added Eastern Shore Handicap brought an all-Maryland victory today in its twenty-seventh running. Victory Morn, owned by Ral Parr, Maryland sportsman, bred at the W. L. Brann Farm, near Frederick, and trained by H. G. Bedwell, old-line veteran conditioner, drove to a two-length victory in the 6-furlong contest. In adding $10,825 to bring his earnings for this year to $23,293, Victory Morn turned back a field of good juveniles, including the highly touted but dull-running Boy Angler.

With Jockey Al Shelhamer, a Colorado boy, whose career has developed in Maryland, doing the riding, Victory Morn came to the imaginary wire with a good margin over J. D. Weil's Mission Step, a long shot, ridden by Jockey Mannie Berg, of Baltimore. The Liberty Lane Stable's Cardell was third a neck away from second money.

While Boy Angler drew most of the heavy money and was installed the favorite, Victory Morn was well backed among the Marylanders and paid a $9.10 mutuel while running the sprint distance in 1:12 2-5, well off the 1:11 record for the race set by War Admiral in 1936.

The Shandon Farm entry of Annie Alone and Rawson dominated the early running, but Victory Morn was always forwardly placed. Rawson drew out to a good lead at once and Annie Alone came through on the rail to be second at the half pole. However, Shelamer had Victory Morn under steadying restraint. It was not until the turn into the stretch that Victory Morn was asked for his real speed. He responded to dispose of the tiring Rawson and went to the front.

Trophies Presented for President's Cup Regatta Race

Here are the trophies winners in the hydroplane outboard races on Friday's President's Cup Regatta program will receive. Arthur Guyer (left), of the Calvert Distilling Co., presents the cups to Sam Sims, head of the regatta cup committee. The Calvert trophies will be presented Friday night at a buffet dinner in the Willard Hotel

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAROC, $15.70, $6.10, $3.90; LANCE CORPORAL, $10.60, $5.80; KEY MAN, $4.00.

MAROC hustled to contention between horses going to turn, responded willingly when placed to drive to take slight lead and had to be kept to pressure to stave off closing bid of LANCE CORPORAL. The latter, off slowly and sent around horses to reach contention, closed full of run after being shaken up midway of stretch. KEY MAN was hard ridden while close up, went to inside for final move and was going gamely at end.

Daily Double, ESCOHIGH and MAROC, Paid $92.10.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:20. Off 3:23½. Winner, D. B. Midkiff's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING JANE, $10.70, $7.50, $4.70; SUN PATTY, $7.90, $3.90; SUMMER TIME, $7.90.

FLYING JANE, slow to break but sent to contention with bold rush on outside, wore down SUMMER TIME to take lead and held sway to end under energetic handling. SUN PATTY was hard ridden to gain forward position in opening furlong and came gamely at end. SUMMER TIME went through on inside to take early lead, saved much ground, but faltered when placed to punishment.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. The Mount Pleasant Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:50. Off 3:51½. Winner, H. W. Jackson's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARIEL TOY, $3.40, $2.30, $2.10; EARLY MORN, $2.50, $2.30; ACE CALL, $2.80.

ARIEL TOY, sent up on inside to take lead in opening quarter, shook off challenge of EARLY MORN, drew clear and was kept to strong hand ride to end. EARLY MORN was hard ridden from start, but could not menace winner seriously while put to intermittent punishment in closing eighth. ZENANA saved ground throughout.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $10,000, added. The Eastern Shore Handicap. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:21. Off 4:23½. Winner, R. Parr's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—VICTORY MORN, $9.10, $4.80, $5.00; MISSION STEP, $28.40, $14.40; CARDELL, $6.20.

VICTORY MORN, keen forward factor from break, was steadied along in early stages, responded willingly when placed to drive, disposed of RAWSON and continued gamely to end. MISSION STEP, sent to outside for racing room leaving backstretch, came with bold rush in closing three-sixteenths. CARDELL, was squeezed back along rail directly after break, was hard ridden and closed gamely. ANNIE ALONE was hard used to hold forward position early and weakened right at close. BOY ANGLER broke well, dropped back and failed to rally.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:51. Off 4:52½. Winner, D. J. Sullivan's blk. g. (3), by Flying Ebony—My Alice. Trained by S. Hicks. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING JACK, $15.00, $6.80, $3.90; LOTTERY, $5.60, $3.90; CONNIE PLAUT, $6.80.

FLYING JACK saved ground in early stages, came through on inside of LOTTERY to take command approaching stretch and drew out while kept to pressure to end. LOTTERY, first away, set good pace, could not resist winner, but held on gamely. CONNIE PLAUT raced wide from start and showed good effort. WINNING MARK closed gamely from slow beginning. OVERSIGHT had speed in spots.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:22. Off 5:25. Winner, Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's b. f. (4), by Mad Hatter—Volette. Trained by R. Roberts. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARLETTE, $5.90, $3.10, $3.00; SOME BOY, $3.30, $2.70; BOUNTY, $5.50.

MAHLETTE, allowed to settle into best stride, came around field boldly when asked, took command entering stretch and held sway under drive to end. SOME BOY lacked early speed, was vigorously handled through stretch, but was held safe. BOUNTY was well placed from beginning, gained brief lead and closed willingly under punishment.

Terps, Colonials Show Offensive Weakness

Williamoski, Boyda Star In Scrimmage

Mondorff, Murphy Also Outstanding At College Park Two First Downs

By Jack Munhall.

The first scrimmage between local football squads, and also the first outside workouts for both participants this season disclosed yesterday that Maryland and George Washington have room for considerable improvement on offense before their openers.

It must be realized that George Washington used only six plays—three of which weren't used until Tuesday—and that Maryland likewise employed only straight football. Still their defenses seemed abnormally better than the offenses.

The practice was held at College Park and although it was not advertised several hundred students were on hand for the two-hour scrimmage, which was conducted along Maryland Coach Frank Dobson's plan to get the utmost results. That was: One team took the offensive for 30 minutes always kicking on fourth down. The defensive team was allowed to return intercepted passes or punts or recovered fumbles. When a series of four downs was completed the ball was returned to its place at fourth down.

Both Line-ups Powerful

The two squads alternated twice, using two different elevens. The first-string George Washington team consisted of Nowaskey and August, ends; Barauskas and Jones, tackles; Monchlovich, center; Kokoski and Swett, guards, and Art Nowaskey, Williamoski, Nugent and Booth in the backfield.

Maryland started Beamer and Dyer, ends; Brown and Albarano, tackles; Wharton, center; Geinger and Lawrence, guards, and Murphy, Boyda, Lumsden and Ullman in the backfield. Two Maryland regulars, Center Bob Smith and Back Frank Skotnicki, were inactive due to injuries.

Maryland took the offensive first and made only one first down in a half hour, a performance which George Washington equaled on its turn. The outstanding running backs were Williamoski, a sphomore, for George Washington, and Boyda, Murphy and Mondorff for Maryland. The line smashing of Mondorff, formerly a blocking back, was pleasing to Dobson.

Hoya Rally Planned

With a great show of premature spirit Georgetown students will hold their first football "pep" rally at the Hilltop tonight more than a week in advance of the Hoyas' opening game with Temple September 29.

Cheers and songs will be featured and the players introduced One of the main purposes of the meeting will be to teach the freshmen the school cheers.

A 'Flash' of Form in Anacostia High Scrimmage

"Flash" Gordon, one of the best schoolboy halfbacks in town last year, appeared in fine fettle as he picked up a long gain in Tuesday's scrimmage on the flats of Anacostia. The gain was for an alumni team, however, and not for the 1939 Anacostia High eleven. Gordon is ineligible this year due to the 19-year age limit. He helped the alumni to a 12-0 victory over the varsity

Sundra Wins 11th as Yanks Beat White Sox

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Steve Sundra ran his victory string to 11 games without defeat today by scattering 11 hits as the New York Yankees bagged the second straight game of their final series with the Chicago White Sox, 8 to 4.

In the third inning Selkirk singled with the bases loaded for two runs and Joe Gordon followed with a double for two more. In the fifth Joe DiMaggio tripled, Bill Dickey singled and Selkirk hit his twentieth home run. Dickey got his twenty-second homer in the seventh to complete the scoring.

Larry Rosenthal and Joe Kuhel hit homers for Chicago.

Nats Start Rookie; It's 'Ladies Day'

Dick Bass, 30-year-old rookie from Chattanooga, will start his first game in a Washington uniform today when he faces the Cleveland Indians. The Nats paid a reported price of $15,000 for Bass, a right-hander, who won 19 games for Chattanooga this season.

Today has been designated as a special ladies' day game by Griffith Stadium officials, inasmuch as Friday is an open date on the Nats' schedule.

The Indians, who yesterday moved into third place in the league standings, are expected to send left-handed Al Milnar to the mound today.

Two All-Time Pin Records Established

Blowhards set two all-time league marks in the Dynamite League at Arcadia last night, a 580-team game and 1,652 set. Simpson and Wilcox tied for high individual game with 133 and the latter had high set of 348.

Jim Espey topped the Banker's League with a 135 game while Jim Bridges posted high set, 364. National Savings & Trust had a 592 game and Riggs a 1,672 set for team honors.

Jessie Keith and Viola Bechtold tied for high game in the C. & P. Telephone Ladies League, at Arcadia, with 119, with the former winning high set of 329. Clerks and Columbia had high team game, 329, and also the best set, 1,457.

a 36 and Gipe, with 37, 40, also played together. Rippy had two nines of 38, while Peacock was out in 40, but dropped three birdies on the return trip and went over on the last two holes for his 76.

Peacock, a former champion, and Volney Burnett meet in the first-round feature today, while Bogart plays George Molloy and another outstanding match pits Page Hufty against Buddy Sharkey. Sharkey, Billy Shea and Ray Higgins form the Georgetown contingent that will attempt to keep the title on the Hilltop.

Everett Johnson and David Ross were the only first-flight disappointments. George Borsari, Pete Scarla and John R. Miller all made the grade in the title bracket with 80 scores.

Buddy Lewis took the undisputed lead in the Man of the Month contest yesterday, but Cecil Travis was the outstanding performer for the Nats against the Indians. Points were distributed as follows:

To Travis, four points, because he made two of the Nats' six hits and drove in one of their two runs.

To Lewis, two points, because his seventh-inning single drove in a run.

To Bucky Jacobs, two points, because he held the Indians hitless in a two-inning relief shift.

To Joe Haynes, one point, because he halted the Indians' first-inning rally after going into the box with two on and none out.

To Louis Thuman, one point, because he held the Indians scoreless in the last two innings. The totals:

Buddy Lewis	20	Bobby Estalella	6
Ken Chase	19	Rick Ferrell	6
Johnny Welaj	19	Morris Aderholt	6
Taft Wright	18	Hal Quick	5
Dutch Leonard	16	George Case	5

Hubbell Beats Bill Lee, Cubs To Win, 4 to 2

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Carl Hubbell, still a handy man to have around when the going is rough, outpitched big Bill Lee today to give the New York Giants a 4-to-2 victory over the Cubs.

on the second pitch and from that point it was a merry-go-round inning for the Indians. Krakky's next move was to walk Weatherly and then the Indians commenced making direct hits.

Bucky Jacobs, making his first appearance in the box for the Nats since being recalled from Springfield, chucked a pair of hitless innings thereafter and so Rookie Lou Thuman similarly held the Injuns scoreless in the eighth and ninth.

Until the sixth inning, the Nats had only two hits to show for their efforts against Harder—West's single in the first and Travis' single in the fourth. With two out in the sixth they suddenly moved a run across the plate when West and Wright drew walks and Travis provided a single to right.

Cardinals Hold Rainy Weather Scrimmage

A brief shower yesterday sent the Catholic University football squad into an unscheduled scrimmage. Just as the boys stepped on the field for what was to have been a routine workout it rained just enough to make the ground wet and the ball slippery.

Coach Dutch Bergman seized upon the chance to have a little rainy weather practice, something he has been hoping for without success the past few days. Freshmen provided opposition for the varsity.

Despite the wetness there was an encouraging lack of fumbles. Charlie Moutenot, Hank Brostek and big Rocco Pirro handled the ball adroitly and smashed through and around the yearling line with constant success.

The scrimmage was unusually rough and fiercely contested for there were still several regular positions to be filled. By his impressive performance Pete Sachon got back into the thick of the running for the first string quarterback, which job Johnny Fiorellino apparently had clinched.

The stocky little Pennsylvanian tore off four lengthy runs, the longest for 52 yards, and otherwise gave an excellent account of himself. Joe Carrig, getting back into action after a layoff because of injuries, worked well with Louis Shine, the other wingman, and Fred Stant, intercollegiate boxing champion, who is bidding for a guard position, also was outstanding.

If his second and third stringers continue to show their recent improvement Coach Bergman said he might have to juggle his tentative regular lineup for the opener at South Carolina September 30.

Athletics Beat Tigers, 5 to 4, In 13 Innings

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 20.—The Athletics came from behind twice today to defeat the Detroit Tigers in 13 innings, 5 to 4.

With one out in the final frame Frank Hayes tripled to right and after Al Benton purposely passed two batters, beat Hank Greenberg's throw to the plate on Joe Gantenbein's grounder.

Ernie Dusek-Singh To Feature Mat Card at Arena

Nanjo Singh and Ernie Dusek will meet in a return match tonight at Turner's Arena. The Hindu cobra clutch exponent will match his pet hold against something called the "Dusek Dirigible Spin."

Ernie's brothers, Rudy and Emil, already have fallen before Nanjo's clutch, but Ernie was nonchalant about it all yesterday, pointing out he defeated Nanjo in their last meeting. He also said the cobra clutch is a very inferior weapon to use on his neck.

The dirigible hold, Ernie claims, is modeled after Jim Londos' airplane spin but is more disconcerting to the victim. Nanjo, however, has worked up a large hate for the Dusek clan and will be "inspired" when he steps in to waltz with Ernie.

In the preliminaries, beginning at 8:30 p. m., Bob Wagner meets Ralph Garibaldi; Bibber McCoy meets Rudy Strongberg; Jack Hader paces Joe Campbell, and John Katan meets Ernie Powers.

Louis Kayoes Bob Pastor in 11th Round

Bob's eye, from his nose and from his mouth as Louis moved in, punching in the seventh, but Pastor started to come back then.

He took the fight to the champion in the eighth, backed him against the ropes and forced him to cover up, befuddled as he tossed both hands to the jaw. He might have floored Joe then, but he was too tired to keep after him. Still he kept up his advance in the ninth and tenth and did not appear too worn out.

Then came the eleventh—and the end. Pastor zigged when he should have zagged.

Some reason for Joe's lapses into sluggishness might have come from the weather. It was far more suited for football, as an early evening breeze from the West dropped the thermometer down below the 60-degree mark.

It was Louis' first fight in his home town since he has dominated the heavyweight fight scene.

In a preliminary, Bob Nestell, of Los Angeles, scored a technical knockout in the fifth over Chick Crowell, of Spokane, Wash. Nestell weighed 187 and Crowell 216.

In a four-rounder, George Burnett, 161, of Detroit, hammered out a decision over Joe Sutka, 161, also of Detroit.

Roscoe Toles, 201, Detroit, who was beaten by Bob Pastor last May, came on in the last round to make a close six-round verdict over Patsy Perroni, 188, Cleveland, who once went 10 heats with Louis.

Dan Merritt, 195-pound Cleveland Negro, won a close four-round decision over Charley Ketchuck, 188, Binghamton, N. Y.

ROUND SEVEN

Louis connected with a left to the chin, then repeated the punch. A short right opened a slight cut under Pastor's eye. Pastor was back pedaling and Louis was trying to find an opening. Two rights bounced off Pastor's mouth and more blood showed. Louis shot another pair of lefts to the mouth. Pastor landed a short right and then clinched. Louis sent a long left and then a right to the jaw which shot Pastor's head back. Pastor leaned in and landed lightly with a left and right to the head. A vicious right caused Bob's knees to buckle, but he came back with left and right to the face. They were moving about the ring at the bell.

Louis' round.

Louis again jabbed lightly with his left and Pastor backed away boxing cautiously. Pastor sent a short left to the jaw. They exchanged light lefts to the chin and Louis sent a long right to the jaw and a left to the body. In close, Joe connected with a left uppercut. Pastor landed rights on the chin and the champion cuddled up against the ropes as Pastor moved in. Pastor sent a light left to the body. Louis fired a straight left to the chin, then took left and right to the head from Bob at the bell.

They exchanged a series of straight lefts with no effect. Pastor sent a left to the face and took a right and left to the head in exchange. Pastor connected with a straight left to the jaw. (Louis fired his left to the nose and was again waiting for a right-hand opening. Louis missed with his right and Pastor put three light lefts to the jaw as Louis countered with two lefts. Pastor's right grazed Louis' chin, then Louis landed a hard left to the face. Pastor jabbed three times with his left. Louis put a left to the nose and took a left hook on the chin at the bell.

ROUND TEN

They exchanged lefts to the face which did no damage. Pastor sent a short snappy left to the chin. Louis opened Pastor with his long left. Pastor backed away and continued to jab. Pastor sent a short right hook to the chin and then received two hard lefts on the face. A short right to the mouth hurt Bob. Louis sent two short lefts to the face and took a long left under the eye. Both stabbed with lefts and Pastor backed around the ring. A short right opened the cut under Pastor's left eye. A long left raised a slight mouse under Louis' left eye at the bell.

Pastor's round.

ROUND ELEVEN

Again they boxed, throwing light lefts and then Louis hit Pastor with a smashing left hand and followed with a short right in midring and Pastor was unable to get on his knees as Referee Hennessy counted ten to give Louis a victory in 38 seconds of the eleventh round.

B. & O. to Earn Fixed Charges, Says Willard

Debt Revision Plan Benefits Cited at ederal Hearing

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 20.—Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, predicted today the line's proposed debt revision plan would enable it to pay all fixed interest charges and earn a "substantial surplus" as well.

Willard's testimony in Federal district court, where the Baltimore & Ohio seeks approval of its new fiscal program under the Chandler act, followed a statement by Senior Vice President George M. Shriver, who said it was very unlikely a dividend would be declared on the railroad's stock in 1940.

Regardless of war conditions, Willard said, business for the road had improved sufficiently to justify his optimistic view of the future.

Until 1938—a year in which it earned only $135,000,000, or approximately half of its earnings in 1923—the B. & O. did not in any single year fail to pay interest and other charges when due, Willard testified.

From 1931, however, through 1937 income available for fixed charges averaged about $842,000 "in the red."

"The fact that the railroad, with a plant operating some of the time at less than one-half capacity, could make the showing it did seems to offer ample, if not conclusive evidence that the road was not overcapitalized and therefore not in need of re-organizing," Willard asserted.

He added he felt the "period of depression which we have been passing through is of a temporary nature," and that subsequent business improvement, along with the proposed debt revision, would put the road back on its feet.

War Effects Cited as Singer Net Slumps

Sewing Machine Firm 'Living Day to Day,' Says Sir Douglas

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Singer Manufacturing Co., international makers and distributors of sewing machines, reported today for 1938 net profit of $9,520,065, equal to $10.58 per share on the capital stock. This compared with $14,302,906 or $15.89 a share in the previous year.

Sir Douglas Alexander, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting that because of the war the company is "living only from day to day," on reduced hours. He also said that the company's stocks in Japan are becoming gradually depleted and that it is only a matter of time before the company will be completed to liquidate entirely in that country unless the situation changes.

The Spanish government is fostering a home industry and there is no indication of when the company will be permitted to resume there, he said. In Italy restrictions have greatly reduced Singer's activity, he added.

Masonite Net Gains

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Masonite Corporation reported today a net income of $1,163,050 for the fiscal year ended August 31, compared with $1,144,274 for the preceding fiscal year. The earnings were equal to $1.99 a common share, compared with $1.96 the previous year.

New Freight Cars To Exceed 46,000

New freight cars placed in service or ordered by the American railroads during 1939 will exceed 46,000, according to plans disclosed at the special meeting of the member lines of the Association of American Railroads held in Washington. This includes approximately 25,000 additional new cars whose purchase is planned, and 21,260 new freight cars already ordered or placed in service during the first nine months of 1939.

In addition to the purchase of new equipment, all railroads are undertaking to repair immediately cars and engines which have not been needed to handle current business but which may be needed for increased business in prospect.

United Aircraft Unit Gets $1,998,420 Order

A $1,998,420 aircraft contract was awarded by the Navy Department yesterday to the Vought Sikorsky aircraft division of the United Aircraft Corporation at Hartford, Conn.

Total appropriations for the purchase of Navy aircraft for the current year are $46,000,000.

Opening Surge In Wheat Lost Before Close

Rush to Take Profits Follows Gains Up To 3⅝ Cents

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP).—Wheat prices shot up as much as 3⅜ cents today but then tumbled back again, losing all or most of the early gains.

War-inspired purchasing, which caught the pit with few selling orders at the opening, caused the sharp upturn. When high prices of 87⅞ and 89¼ for December and May contracts were reached, however, many traders rush to take profits. The result was that the market had a generally downward course after the first few minutes of trading and the close was ⅛ lower to ¾ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish, December 85¾-85 1-3, May 86-86⅝.

At the early highs, wheat came within about a cent of the war-boom peaks touched September 7.

Other grains fluctuated nervously but within much narrower ranges. Corn closed ⅛ lower to ⅜ higher, December 54⅞-54¾, May 57⅞-57¾; oats ¼-½ higher; rye ¼-½ down and lard 5 to 8 higher.

There were rumors of substantial export sales of Canadian wheat the past few days, with business today estimated at 750,000 bushels. However, sales to Canada's best customer, Great Britain, were not disclosed. Milling interests were in the local market at times, with purchases estimated at 95,000 bushels. Vessel space was chartered to move 800,000 bushels to Buffalo.

Corn advanced about a cent at one time but closed at the day's lows. Receipts continued large, totaling 496 cars, and handlers booked 221,000 bushels to arrive. Some American corn was reported sold for export.

Treasury Borrows At 0.125 Per Cent

The Secretary of the Treasury announces that the tenders for $100,000,000, or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be dated September 20 and to mature December 20, 1939, which were offered on September 15, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks. The total applied for was $480,166,000 and the total accepted $100,046,000.

The average price was 99.968, equivalent to a rate of 0.125 per cent.

Bantam Car Co. Plans $1,000,000 Expansion

Butler, Pa., Sept. 20 (AP).—The American Bantam Car Co. announced today that stockholders had authorized a $1,000,000 bond issue for expansion purposes due to increased demand.

Export orders have jumped since outbreak of war, said the announcement, while domestic orders continue to show a rise.

Reaction on Chamberlain's Talk Follows Early Stock Advance; Bonds Are Soft With Recessions Up to One Point

New York, Sept. 20.—Shares extended their advance of Tuesday rather substantially in the early stages of today's session but succumbed to selling and profit taking which developed following the British premier's report on war progress to the House of Commons. Last prices were, on the whole, not far from the close of the day before. Rail equipments, coppers and some of the rail and food shares managed to retain part of earlier advances.

It was considered significant by some of the chartists that the market, after nearing the recovery highs at the day's best level, backed away in decisive fashion. Although trading was fairly brisk, volume being 2,142,690 shares, there was not much evidence of public participation.

In the bond section U. S. Governments were soft with losses running to an extreme of a point, due, it was assumed, to lack of support from the Federal Reserve. Foreign issues were sensationally lower. In the foreign exchange section sterling enjoyed the steadiest day since controls were withdrawn. The pound fluctuated within a range of 3 cents, closing a cent higher. Italian exchange broke sharply to new lows as the peg was pulled by authorities.

Wheat Bulge Erased

Speculative buying produced a bulge of as much as 3⅜ cents in Chicago wheat but profit-taking drove prices down as fast as they had gone up, the close being ⅛ cent off to ¾ cent higher. Cotton rose 8 to 17 points on trade buying.

Steel common opened on 10,000 shares at 79⅞, up 2⅜, and went well above 80 before it retreated. The close, at 77⅜, was ⅛ net higher. Republic and Bethlehem, other issues in the active division, finished without net change although both were well ahead at one time. A story printed by a New York newspaper said that one of the high Nazi leaders evidently thought well enough of Bethlehem to invest a substantial sum in its securities through an agency.

Coppers were not much affected by the British official announcement that empire countries can be counted on to supply all wartime needs of the mother country for the metal. Leading stocks of the group, however, were less buoyant than the others.

Rail Equipments Rise

Rail equipments were bought, of course, on a continuation of announcements of car-building programs by numerous carriers. Washington and railroad sources estimate that 25,000 or more new cars will be purchased before the end of the year and comparable totals of other equipment. Utilities, while less active, were fairly firm although some of those which advanced sharply in recent days eased a trifle. Oils were narrow and dull.

War influences are not expected to increase export demand for some weeks or months. This may be true of steel and other prospective shipments to belligerents, providing such shipments are to be permitted. Shipowners on this side would, of a certainty, decline to handle such business without adequate convoy and it is indicated that bottoms are becoming scarcer on the other side.

Union Pacific and du Pont were among active shares which ended with gains of a point of more, while Texas Co. and Union Carbide lost a point or more each. The market's barometer-composite price of 100 active issues ended 0.24 point higher, due largely to an average gain of nearly a point each for four rail equipments. In this division, American Car & Foundry common and preferred, Baldwin, General American Transportation, New York Air Brake and Pressed Steel Car recorded new highs.

International Nickel Reacts

International Nickel rose to 42¼ on the overnight announcement of directors that the current dividend would be paid in United States dollars. It slumped later with the rest of the list, ending with a half-point gain.

Wall Street opinion was that the Congressional session on neutrality, opening tomorrow, will see soft pedaling of bull operations in war stocks. While the financial district believes the Administration will muster sufficient votes to repeal or modify the act so as to permit shipments, it notes the growing strength of the movement to keep America out of the European war. Some business leaders are already on record with the thought that munitions shipments to Britain and France would inevitably draw this country into the European mess should the war be a long affair.

Listed bond dealings today reflected fresh uncertainties of the war situation, with United States Treasury and foreign dollar obligations sharply lower. Domestic bonds with a speculative aspect were in fair demand, while money market securities drifted idly lower. Lack of official support for Treasury issues made the market uncertain as to the future of all money market obligations. Turnover in all bonds was $13,420,000.

Big Foreign Orders For Fats Reported By N. Y. Dealers

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Commodities dealers reported today huge orders for American lard, tallow and vegetable oil for shipment to Europe.

They said that, although many of the consignments were for Genoa, they believed their ultimate destination was the neutral countries whose supplies of these products, originally obtained from Britain, have been cut off by the war.

Although the opinion was expressed in some quarters that the destination indicated Germany probably would obtain some of the shipments, it was pointed out that Italian steamers now are free, because of Rome's neutrality, to carry much of the commerce from the United States.

Int. Nickel to Pay Dividend in U. S.

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—The executive committee of International Nickel Co., of Canada, Ltd., announced it had received a permit under Canada's foreign exchange control regulations for payment of the recently declared common dividend of 50 cents a share in United States dollars. The payment will be made September 30 to stockholders of record August 31.

The company also said it had received a general license authorizing export of its products from Canada and the necessary license to use its foreign exchange for business requirements.

Steel Buying Unchecked by Price Pegging

Users Seek to Protect Selves From Possible Future Increase

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Iron Age magazine reported today the war steel buying wave barely had been checked by the announcement that prices would be maintained unchanged through the final three months of the year.

"The expectation that rising costs will force some steel companies to charge higher prices before the year end is causing steel users to protect themselves to the fullest possible extent," said the publication.

It added:

"Should higher prices come for the first quarter or sooner, steel companies, would undoubtedly have difficulty in shipping all of the business on their books by December 31. To guard against such a contingency, restrictions are being more forcefully applied . . .

"The avalanche of orders has so greatly swamped the operating and clerical forces of the steel companies that some of them may not know definitely for another week or two just what their delivery situation will be over the remainder of the year . . .

"Although export bookings have been small in comparison with domestic orders, the total sold for export since the first of the month is estimated to be well above a half million tons. Negotiations are in progress with the British for the sale of 200,000 tons of semi-finished steel . . .

"Canadian railroads, which have a $25,000,000 program, may be forced to place some orders in the United States.

"Rail purchases total more than 100,000 tons, with about 50,000 tons in the offing. Repair programs embrace many thousands of cars, while inquiries have appeared for more than 11,000 new cars."

Steel Scrap at New Top

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Dow-Jones, Inc., said today in a dispatch from Pittsburgh that steel scrap has jumped an additional $1 a ton to a new high quotation of $20.50 to $21 a ton for number one heavy melting. Number one railroad scrap advanced $2 a ton yesterday to a new high of $22.50 to $23. The dispatch said this was an unusual spread between the grades, and indicated another jump in number one heavy melting scrap.

American Viscose Boosts Yarn Prices

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—Rises of 2 and 3 cents a pound in both acetate and viscose process rayon yarns were effected today by the American Viscose Corp.

As this change in price, the first in more than a year, went into effect, the company announced that, because of the present unsettled conditions, it was forced to reduce its booking period to 60 days from 90 days and that, therefore, it could not consider December bookings for rayon before November 1.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

Quiet conditions held to the close in stock exchange dealings today. The tendency was brighter due to strength in American securities which were moderately active.

Amsterdam.—Prices on the bourse eased in late official trading today and finished around their lowest levels. Turnover was small.

Paris.—Domestic and foreign shares in the bourse finished with irregular and narrow price changes today. While the trading pace continued slow, more issues were quoted than in recent sessions. Ordinary rentes improved 10 to 70 points. Exchange guaranteed rentes advanced 480.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures met a better trade demand today and prices ended 3 to 8 points higher. Some outside buying was influenced by the announcement the British government would underwrite insurance on shipments to Great Britain at lower rates than those quoted privately.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Sept. 20 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agricul.).—Trading was moderately active on the Boston market today and prices were strong to slightly higher than last week. Combing three-eighths blood territory wools were selling at 87 to 92 cents, scoured basis, and combing quarter blood wools were bringing 83 to 85 cents, scoured basis. Graded half blood territory wools were moving at 98 cents to $1.03, scoured basis, for staple combing lengths, and 95 to 97 cents, scoured basis, for lots containing staple and French combing lengths together. Fine territory wools moved at 97 cents to $1.03, scoured basis, for graded and French combing lengths and at 95 cents to $1 for good French combing original and at 92 to 95 cents, scoured basis, for average to short French combing length original bag wools.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Sept. 20 (AP).—Excessive receipts pushed livestock prices downward today. Hogs closed mostly 10 cents lower at a top of 8.10. Some grades of cattle lost as much as 50 cents and lambs were off around 25 cents in a slow trade.

Moderate Buying Lifts Cotton List 8 to 17 Points

New York, Sept. 20 (AP).—A consistent steady tone appeared in cotton futures trading today. Early strength in securities again encouraged Wall street buying and with trade and spot interests finding offerings somewhat limited, the list finished 8 to 17 points higher.

Although profit taking pared extreme advances, hedge-selling was considerably lighter than in recent sessions, reflected in the market's response to moderate demand.

An improved demand for American cotton was reported in Liverpool. The market there advanced 3 to 6 points. Having a beneficial effect on prices was the report that the British government would underwrite shipping risks on forwardings to Great Britain at lower rates than those quoted privately.

Increased support for New Orleans futures put prices there 9 to 17 higher.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures closed 7 to 10 points higher today following initial gains of as much as 25 points. General firmness in outside markets and securities and reports of sales of oils and fats to Scandinavian countries, Switzerland and Spain were factors surrounding the sharp advance.

Later selling came through trade interests, said to be hedging sales against recent large crude oil purchases. Demand filled up but prices gave ground stubbornly.

Sales totaled 247 contracts. October finished 7.29*; December, 7.33*; January, 7.39*; March, 7.52; May, 7.57*.

*Nominal.

Crude oil was steady at 6 cents bid in all Southern sections.

Extra Dividend Voted

The board of directors of Interstate Home Equipment Company, Inc., has declared an extra dividend of 10 cents per share in addition to the quarterly dividend of 12½ cents per share on its outstanding common stock, both payable October 16, to stockholders of record October 2, 1939.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the District of Columbia. In re application of Eleanor Florence Calhoun, for change of name. Civil Action No. 4011. Eleanor Florence Calhoun, having filed a complaint for a judgment changing her name to Eleanor Florence Lannan and having applied to the court for an order of publication of the notice required by law in such cases, it is, by the court, this fifth day of September, 1939, ordered that all persons concerned show cause, if any there be, on or before the 9TH DAY OF OCTOBER, 1939, why the prayers of said complaint should not be granted, provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three consecutive weeks before said day in The Washington Post and the Washington Law Reporter. JENNINGS BAILEY, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By JOHN O. BOWEN, Assistant Clerk. 7.14.21

STEPHEN G. INGHAM, Attorney, Southern Building.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Harry Lester Veit, plaintiff, vs. Rosetta Clara Veit, defendant. Civil Action No. 3810. The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce from defendant, Rosetta Clara Veit, on the grounds of voluntary separation from bed and board for more than five consecutive years without cohabitation. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 13th day of September, 1939, ordered that the defendant, Rosetta Clara Veit, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the FORTIETH day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter, and The Washington Post before said day. JENNINGS BAILEY, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By JOHN O. BOWEN, Assistant Clerk. 14.21.28

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The possibility that blind bridge players may enter national championships and compete with the masters was anticipated when Mrs. Elizabeth Banfield, coach and chief champion of blind contract players, entered Bernard Krebs and Harvey Huot in the apen duplicate games of a recent tournament.

Krebs and Huot, despite their handicap, played with skill and assurance. Though they used Braille cards, specially duplicated, there was no noticeable delay of the play in their section.

An indication of their potenialities is illustrated in the artful defensive coup executed by Bernard Krebs during the open duplicate game in which he and his partner competed with sighted players. Krebs extricated himself from an intended end play by discarding a king under declarer's ace so as not to be deprived of two trump tricks. The cards and bidding are shown in today's box.

In the play Krebs opened the queen of hearts, and the dummy was called out to him and his partner. The queen held the trick and Krebs followed with the heart six, which was trumped by East. The king of trumps was laid down, and a little diamond put dummy in the lead to play another spade. When North showed out East went up with the spade ace, establishing the spade queen and the ten as a potential winner of Krebs' hand.

Declarer entered dummy with another diamond, ruffed the last heart and cashed his remaining high diamonds, preparing for the throw-in.

He expected to lead the ace and a low club, putting Krebs in with the club king and compelling him to play away from the queen-ten of spades. This would eliminate one spade loser and insure the contract.

Krebs had envisioned declarer's plan. When declarer lead the club ace he cautiously felt the Braille markings on his club king and then discarded it. His partner could then win the next club lead and his queen-ten spade tenance was preserved.

East was set one trick, losing two spades, one heart and a club.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

NOTATIONS: While the Council of Personnel Administration is getting along as well as possible on the scant financial fare afforded by Congress, and the employe training program envisaged in the June 1938 Executive Orders goes a-lagging, the Agriculture Graduate School seems to be ready to serve the training purposes adequately or at least well for the moment. It has very excellent courses for bookkeepers, stenographers, accountants and the like which can be availed of by all who want some training while Congress waits to make up its mind . . . Chairman of the House Civil Service Committee Ramspeck told the reporters in Atlantic City recently that the Council of Personnel Administration should have laid a stronger groundwork in Congress before its measures for the benefit of civil service were introduced. But the groundwork was very strongly laid. The subject of civil service was hot as a fritter when the Congress convened. It is difficult to see how any more publicity, pressure and agitation could have been made . . . The stewing for better cafeteria accommodations in Main Treasury continues. "Diners stand and face the wall while eating off a narrow ledge on which all too often previous diners have left tea balls and coffee stains" . . . From the same sector of town it is complained now that messengers in the Records Section of the Division of Insolvent National Banks have been found to be doing clerical work and they are asking for proper classifications. Custodians of 18,000,000 cancelled checks and other documents on insolvent banks since time of the Civil War, these messengers (?) have to file and produce records and information which is easily CAF 2 work . . . In the line of fun, the renowned IDRA is planning on an Indian summer dance for the night of October 6, the hope being that a choir of Indian voices can be recruited from among the many Indians in the Indian Service, an idea very harmonious with the dance theme . . . The Gen. Malin Craig Post, Regular Veterans Association, announces that its dance scheduled for November has been cancelled because of fear of conflict with the annual V. F. W. Armistice Ball . . . Newly-elected A. F. G. E. President Cecil E. Custer the other night installed the newly-elected officers for Adjutant General's Office Lodge No. 2, as follows: Harry J. Keller, president; Samuel C. Sacco, secretary-treasurer, with delegates to the District Department, as follows: G. Carroll Dimond, Harry J. Keller, S. C. Sacco, Mary C. Bieber, Patrick J. Fitzgibbon, Edward J. McGinnis and John E. Lyle. "Americanism," said Custer in an ensuing address, "must prevail in the Government service and those who do not subscribe to our American ideals must be eliminated from the service" . . . Agriculture Department employes had begun to wonder what had become of Miss Besse Day, Forestry Service statistical authority who went to Europe shortly before war was declared, to attend a couple of learned scientific conferences, what with all the war. Miss Day, one of the few women employed in a field of work almost entirely monopolized by men, was to have delivered a paper before a conference in Edenburgh and later undertake studies in England and the Scandinavian countries. A thorough-going scholar, already with rank and attainment in the Forest Service, she is now in a Scandinavian country probably reflecting that the war is disturbing one of the greatest opportunities for study of her career. The message saying she was in the Scandinavian country was received yesterday by one of her friends. Miss Day lives here at 3136 Dumbarton avenue northwest.

Station PDS Presents Guitarist as Guest

Miss Pauline Blundon, Berwyn, Md., will be this morning's guest star on the PDS program over station WMAL. Miss Blundon has appeared in local amateur concerts, benefits, and on the radio.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Store Studios, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each week-day morning, from 7:30 to 8:30 by Peoples Drug Store in co-operation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 16 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Mass Meeting Tuesday On Neutrality Revision

A mas meeting in support of the President's program to revise the neutrality act will be held at 8 p. m. next Tuesday in the National Press Club. Speakers will be Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, and Morris Watson, vice president of the American Newspaper Guild. Clark M. Eichelberger, chairman of the American Union for Concerted Peace Efforts, will preside.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

Chapter 40

"ARE YOU up to making one last effort this morning? Raskin cannot be allowed to get off the Island. The State police are guarding the Patria, and so he's lost if he tries to get away in the boat. The steamer landings and airport are being watched, but I dare not risk his finding some other way to slip through our fingers. We must cling to his heels until he is caught. He may be heading back to his car in the Sea Reduction Corporation's inclosure, but we can't be sure of that. I want you, if you feel you possibly can, to get up and make your dog trail him from the beach."

"I'll be quite all right by the time we reach shore," said the girl.

"Good," said Bronson. He took over the job of feeding steaming coffee into the girl while I had a cup myself and a couple of pilot biscuits and began to strip off my own saturated woollens. When my mouth wasn't full of food or wet wool I gave the artist a quick sketch of the experience on the experimental torpedo boat. I stuck to a technical tone, despairing (as I have ever since) of giving any one an impression of the hideous hours we spent on the Mark X.

"You haven't an idea," I said, "how big a scheme our friend was hatching."

"On the contrary," answered Bronson, "I probably understand it a good deal better than any person except Raskin himself. I took the liberty of breaking into the Patria where she lay in Menemsha Basin. That was while you were organizing your rescue expedition. I looted it of all Raskin's private papers, and even borrowed two suitcases from him to take them away in. Don't concern yourself with the legality of the procedure; it was simple burglary with a dash of safe-cracking thrown in, but the booty justified the means. When our friend comes to trial, it will be on a charge so serious and so well supported that no one will ask how we got the evidence."

"YOU BELIEVE, then, he really meant to go through with the fantastic idea of constructing a torpedo boat base for a foreign power on the American coast?"

"I'm not completely clear how far he expected to be able to go beyond the collection of a fat down-payment from some interested party."

"He laid those rails in one building of the Sea Reduction company's plant," I suggested. "They would have carried 20 or 25 boats like the Mark X. And there were more rails ready to be laid in the next building. It couldn't all have been window-dressing."

"Yes," said Bronson, "and look at the quantity of gasoline he must have been collecting in those tanks. At least, we have every reason to believe it is gasoline."

"I haven't," I said, around the chewed fragments of a doughnut I had found in a greasy paper bag behind the stove, and I told him of the mixed contents of the tanks. A thought struck me, I poked among the sodden pile of my clothes, and from them produced the vanilla bottle. It hadn't broken! The cork was tight, the light reddish fluid inside was just as when I had filled it, a long age ago. I handed the exhibit to Bronson.

"This is gasoline," he said, sniffing. "There could be more or less water in all phases of Mr. Raskin's scheme. With such a character involved there is no telling to what power the doublecross may be raised. On the other hand, I had a little time to examine the Patria. She is a pocket tanker, evidently built to lie off Menemsha Bight and pump directly into tanks on the shore. And she gives evidence of being partly full of gasoline right now."

"I guess that's why they couldn't catch us yesterday morning," said Adriana, and her voice sounded much better.

"Was it yesterday morning?" said I. "It doesn't seem possible. I was so much younger then. Only, the reason they couldn't catch us was because my boat is better—I mean, our boat, my dear."

"Who was the 'count'?" Adriana asked Bronson.

"HE REMAINS AN ENIGMA," answered the artist. "I found nothing in Raskin's papers about him, except the words 'O. K. tonight' and the date of yesterday jotted down evidently in Raskin's hand on the back of a registered envelope addressed to one Mr. Garret Marriner. The envelope had been ripped open, and the contents shuffled into disorder. It contained a formidable indictment of the president of the Sea Reduction Corporation from the point of view of civil law, but that is going to be the least of our friend's troubles."

"I have a good idea what nation the 'count' belongs to," I said.

"So have I," agreed Bronson, "if it is a single nation. There's some possibility that the 'count' represents a syndicate of powerful men of more than one nationality. I can think of a few who might be attracted to such a dramatic speculation in international affairs. Great world traders have paid staggering sums for less glittering gold mines than Mr. Raskin's."

"I can't imagine hard-headed financiers putting money into such a scheme."

"You can't?" said Bronson. "Financiers, as you will find out sooner or later, my son, are nothing at bottom but gamblers. And gamblers put their money on a vision, not a fact. And what a vision it is,—of a chink in the armor of the richest and most secure country in the world,—of a bridge across the Atlantic by which America might be crushed before we knew that we were being attacked. I tell you——"

Capt. Matt's grizzled stubbly face leaned down from the pilot house.

"We're putting over de dory now," he said.

"Quick," said Bronson, rising to go on deck. "Get up, Miss Blake, if you feel all right."

I had put on some spare clothes of Sig.'s which were almost large enough for me, and found some of Arne's which should not be very much too large for Adriana. She was able to get up and put them on herself.

The big dory could carry all of us but Arne, who was left aboard to keep an eye on the Freda K. and the shoreline. Capt. Matt and his elder son pulled us briskly in to the beach, and we landed within a few feet of the dinghy of the Mark X.

This craft on closer inspection turned out to be a small lifeboat rather than a dinghy. It was made of riveted metal throughout, painted horizon blue, had sponson swellings along the gunwales, and a general air of competence without flounces. Two pairs of oars dragged from the patent locks. The boat had been abandoned so abruptly that they hadn't even been shipped.

Dr. Anderson Sets Off Fight Over Teachers

Whether Women Can Teach Boys Best Is Debated by Group

The hostilities, between District school authorities, teachers and students, were touched off by the academic shot fired yesterday by Dr. Walter Anderson, Northwestern University professor of education:

"Approximately twice as many boys as girls fail (in elementary school) . . . because of the over-predominance" of women teachers in the lower grades. "Women put a premium on conformity and docility—qualities in which girls excel," Anderson said.

Quick confirmation of the professor's first premise came from the United States Office of Education. Dr. Henry Segel, specialist in interests and measures, said boys generally are "graded down," although extra-curricular achievement tests show them the equal in intelligence, if not the superior, of girls.

Teachers Mostly Women

Equally quick to join the fray were school officials virtually interested, after the Board of Education reported 97.6 per cent of Washington elementary school teachers are women.

Miss Elizabeth A. Hummer, supervising principal of Elementary Schol Division VII (23 schools in Southeast and Southwest) took issue with Prof. Anderson as follows:

"It is certainly not true that teachers favor boys. On the contrary our teachers take pains to encourage them. It is true girls get along faster in grammar schools than boys but that is because they are more patient, and are naturally more studious," she added "and the interests of boys in outdoor sports naturally reduces their inclination to study."

Miss Hummer revealed that boys take a much greater interest in manual work than in the three r's. Of the two occupational schools in her division the French (boy's) has twice the enrollment of the Lennox (girls').

Another school official to vouch for the ability of women teachers in educating active young men with a yen for the gridiron instead of the blackboard was Henry W. Draper, supervisor of 21 elementary schools in Georgetown, Chevy Chase, and Wesley Heights.

The Students Learn

"As a rule in elementary schools the girls are better students than boys of the same age because they are more mature by about a year."

But the ability to learn comes from the students, not the teacher. "I have two men teachers in my division and they're fine instructors, but the women teachers are equally good," he said.

An elementary teacher who asked her name be withheld said women were satisfactory teachers in the grades but that they should give way to men in junior and senior high school. The older the boy the greater his tendency not to be "dominated by a woman," she said.

A poll of students on the issue revealed a strong opposition sentiment.

Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, of 1 Third street northeast, said her older son, John, 18, hadn't gotten along very well in Stuart Junior High School under women teachers.

Now at McKinley Tech, where he takes orders from a male staff, he has just been made foreman of the machine shop, is a member of the cadet corps, and is generally doing far better.

On the other hand, Mrs. Kennedy quoted her younger son, Donald, 13, as very satisfied with his women teachers at Stuart Junior High. "They're really nice . . . an done of them's swell looking," he confided.
